7 area residents chosen for board of new hospital

by LYNN ASINOF

Seven residents representing three suburbs have been chosen to serve on the board of directors for the satellite branch of the Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital proposed for just south of Wheeling.

The board members were chosen so Franklin Boulevard can seek approval for the satellite branch at the April meeting of the state hospital licensing board. If the branch is approved, Franklin Boulevard plans to build a 223-bed facility just south of Wheeling on Schoenbeck Road.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon, said he was given primary responsibility for choosing the seven board members, who will operate under a larger Franklin Boulevard board.

"They applied, and based on what they had on their qualifications we felt certainly they would be an asset to the board of directors," Scanlon told The Herald yesterday.

FOUR WHEELING residents were chosen for the board along with two Buffalo Grove residents and one Mount Prospect resident. The hospital is being designed to serve Wheeling and Buffalo Grove as a primary area, with Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Northbrook and parts of Lake County as a secondary area.

The Wheeling residents chosen for the board include:

- June Oriowski, 667 S. Milwaukee Ave., chairman of the Wheeling Youth Commission.
- Leland Wilson, 417 Meadowbrook Ln., a member of the Wheeling Relations Commission and wife of Wheeling Park Board commissioner Hugh Wilson.

• Wilbur Glen Davis, 15 E. Jeffrey Ave., husband of beautification committee chairman Esther Davis.

• Joel J. Meyers, 101 Meadowbrook Ln., who listed his occupation as manager of technical employment.

Appointed from Buffalo Grove were:

• Richard J. Roman 488 Lohwood Dr., a former member of the Wheeling Library District Board, who was appointed in Oct. 1971, and resigned last year.

• Arthur E. Sager, 160 Buffalo Grove Rd., who works for a fire alarm manufacturer. Sager said yesterday that he applied for the board position because "I thought it would be a good way to become active."

THE FINAL BOARD member is Marty Amster, 1816 Tano Ln., Mount Prospect. Amster, a former professional football player with the Chicago Bears and the Green Bay Packers, said he applied for the board because it seemed like a worthy cause.

"I think a hospital is needed up in our area," he said, noting the distance to other hospitals in the Northwest suburbs.

Scanlon said in all probably less than a dozen residents applied for the board positions. He said, however, that many of the applicants said they would serve "if needed."

THE BOARD members met with hospital representatives last week for a final review. Scanlon said that if all goes well and state approval is granted, the board's structure and activities will become more defined. Plans for the hospital were first announced last fall by Scanlon. Hospital consultant Norman Davis has worked since that time preparing studies on the need for a hospital in the area.

Decisions on the full-range of services to be offered by the hospital have been delayed until state approval is granted. At present, however, the hospital is not planning to include either a pediatrics or obstetrics ward.

Franklin Boulevard is continuing to negotiate for property on Schoenbeck Road between Dundee and Hintz roads. An option on the property is needed before plans can be presented to the state hospital licensing board.

Final Heritage park remodeling plans on docket

The Wheeling Park District tonight will review final plans for the remodeling of the Heritage Park recreation building, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

Park planners McFadden and Everly, Ltd. are scheduled to explain the specifications for the remodeling. The project will include converting the present garage into a board meeting room, the addition of a vestibule, and showers and locker rooms for the gymnasium.

Board members will also go over plans for a new maintenance garage proposed for just south of the Heritage Park recreation building. The park district is planning to act as general contractors for the project by hiring subcontractors for the construction.

Also on tonight's agenda is a review of a contract to purchase the Omni-House: Youth Service Bureau bus. If the purchase is approved, the park district will share the vehicle with Omni-House.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the Heritage Park recreation building, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

Even though special grand jury dismissed

Local corruption in probe continues

by LYNN ASINOF

Investigations of official corruption in Wheeling and other Chicago suburbs will not be affected by the dismissal of the special federal grand jury which recently indicted six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials.

Samuel Skinner, chief of the U.S. Attorney's Office special investigations division, yesterday told the Herald that matters handled by that grand jury will be transferred to other grand juries.

"We have several additional grand juries sitting," Skinner said. "The matters that have not been resolved will be transferred to the other grand juries. The transfer is already under way."

Skinner said the Wheeling investigation is continuing, as are the investigations in other suburbs. The U.S. Attorney's Office has said more indictments are expected in the Wheeling case.

The 10 men and seven women on the special grand jury were discharged Tuesday by Chief Judge Edwin Robson of the U.S. District Court. The grand jury, empaneled in March 1972, returned more than 200 federal indictments during its two year existence.

SKINNER PRAISED the grand jury and said it was dismissed because it had been sitting longer than any grand jury in the history of the Northern District of Illinois.

"They did yeoman duty, and since there are other juries sitting it would be unfair to inflict any further hardship on them," Skinner said.

Currently, seven federal grand juries are in existence. Four are special grand juries, and three are regular grand juries that have been granted extended terms, according to Skinner.

In dismissing the 17-member panel, Judge Robson praised their two years of work. "We are deeply indebted to each of you," he said. "This community is a much better place because of the service you have rendered."

Most recently, the grand jury indicted six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials after a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

ONE OF THE SIX, former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit extortion last week. The guilty plea came after the U.S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second charge of extortion against Valenza. Sentencing is scheduled for April 2.

Others indicted and pleading innocent were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman and behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling government; Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee and Stavros' cousin; William Bieber, Wheeling building director; William Hart, former Wheeling trustee, and Ira Colitz, county zoning board member who resigned following the indictments.

Trial dates have been set for March 25 in one of the Stavros cases and for May 6 for Colitz and Phillips. Other trials have not yet been scheduled.

The grand jury was responsible for indictments against Hoffman Estates officials and developers involved in a zoning scandal. It also returned indictments against almost three dozen Chicago policemen.

The group started out with 23 persons, but illness and pregnancies reduced the number during the two years.

Paramedic program delayed until Apr.

An April start is now hoped for the Wheeling paramedic program. Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen yesterday said it is doubtful that the program will start this month, as originally planned.

Koeppen said only about half of the telemetry equipment for the emergency medical care program has arrived. The remainder is due in toward the end of the month. A new ambulance, ordered in January, is expected to arrive early in April, he added.

If the timing is close enough, Koeppen said it would be best just to install the telemetry equipment in the new ambulance. The telemetry equipment enables doctors at a participating hospital to monitor a patient's condition while the patient is en route to the hospital. The doctors also can radio instructions on how to care for the patient to the specially trained paramedic firemen.

ALSO PLANNED to house the new ambulance is an addition built on the rear of the main fire station, Dundee Road west of Milwaukee Avenue. Koeppen said building specifications for the addition are expected to be completed this week. Then bids for the work will be taken. Construction of the addition is expected to take about two weeks.

Wheeling Village Trustee William Hein

is attempting to set up a program among the community's various service groups wherein paramedic buttons would be sold. Money from the sale of the buttons, which would say "We Care" and carry the logo of the paramedic van, would go to help fund the paramedic program.

Hein said yesterday that the buttons would probably be sold on street corners similar to "Candy Day" efforts by the Lions. "We have had a real good response so far (from the service groups)," he said.

A similar button program has had success in Deerfield.

JACK AHR

Arlington man strikes 'gold'

An Arlington Heights man has been named as the designer selected to have his idea for a new quarter used on a billion and a half new quarters to be minted next year.

Jack Ahr's "colonial drummer boy" design for the back of the quarter was selected yesterday for use by the Treasury Department's newly designed coins for the nation's bicentennial.

The new coins will be issued beginning July 4, 1975, with Ahr's quarter the bicentennial coin the most circulated. Ahr will receive a $5,000 commission for his design.

Reye's Syndrome victim 'good'

An 8-year-old Palatine girl with the mysterious childhood disease Reye's Syndrome remained in good condition yesterday at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

The girl, whose hospital officials will not name, is a student in Palatine Dist. 15. She was admitted to the hospital Sunday, according to a hospital spokesman.

Since February, 11 Chicago area children, including three from the Northwest suburbs, have died from the disease.

Federal grand jury dismissed

The federal grand jury which returned indictments against six persons alleging corruption in the Village of Wheeling has been dismissed, but that doesn't mean the investigation won't continue.

The 10 men and women on the special grand jury were discharged Tuesday by Chief Judge Edwin Robson of the U.S. District Court. The jury, empaneled in March, 1972, returned more than 200 federal indictments during its two-year existence. The jury had been sitting longer than any grand jury in the history of the Northern District of Illinois.

Buffalo Grove golf course

The Village of Buffalo Grove will soon be operating a golf course, according to the village manager. The village will take control of Buffalo Grove Golf Club early next year and run it as a public course. The 129-acre course reportedly will be sold to the village for $1.1 million.

Elk herd to move

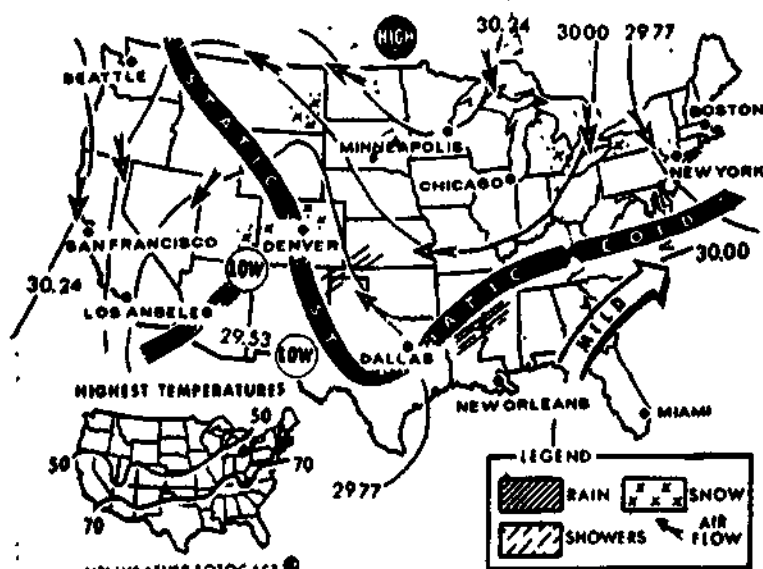

Elk Grove's legendary elk herd will be moved — but only a little way to make room for a large lake which will be created on their present pasture. The elk will be moved to an open portion of the large Ned Brown forest preserve on the corner of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads. All will be moved except two of the elk who will be moved to Indiana State Park sometime next week and that still elusive two-year-old spike-horn elk which is running free in the forest preserve and getting smarter every day.

All-year horse racing?

Illinois handicappers should be allowed to bet all year long and on Sunday too, the Illinois Legislative Investigative Commission said yesterday. The commission said racing dates for Illinois tracks, traditionally a hot topic every year, should be allocated on a three-year span. The commission also recommended a ban on ownership of race track stock by public officials.

A bill to allow Sunday racing was introduced in the General Assembly last year but failed to pass.

County board considers law

Auto emission tests planned

By next year Northwest suburban motorists will have more than the gasoline shortage as a reason to keep their cars in tune.

A new law being considered by the Cook County Board of Commissioners will require all cars in the county to be inspected annually to see if they meet pollution control standards.

The proposed ordinance carries a stiff penalty for a car owner who fails to have his car repaired to meet the standards — the possible loss of license plates and refusal by the Secretary of State to register the car the following year.

County officials say they are preparing the ordinance to meet federal requirements. But the federal government has not indicated whether it will provide grant funds for the inspections or whether the county will be forced to levy a charge to pay for each inspection.

PHILIP MOLE county director of environmental control, explains procedures under the new law would include mailing notices to all car owners in Cook County who live outside of the City of Chicago. The notices would give an owner two weeks to bring his car to one of five facilities for testing.

Mole said the county plans to test cars at the County Sheriff's station on Milwaukee Avenue in Niles and also plans to have a mobile inspection unit located in the Schaumburg or Barrington areas.

Of the 1.5 million cars in Cook County Mole said he anticipates 30 to 40 per cent will fail the emission requirements the first time they are tested. The requirements will vary depending on the age of the car, so that a 1972 car will have to meet stricter standards than a 1968 auto.

Once a car fails the pollution control test the owner will have 30 days to have it repaired and return for a reinspection, Mole said.

CARS THAT fail the test for a second or third time will be refused registration by the Secretary of State.

The federal requirements call for the county to have the details of its enforcement plan spelled out by June 1 and for car testing to begin by Jan. 1, 1975. Once the program begins the initial inspections must be completed within a year and then cars will have to be re-inspected every year.

Mole explained the requirements are set so that a car operating at its optimum will pass the pollution test.

The ordinance, which will give the environmental control department authority to begin enforcing the pollution standards, is scheduled to come before the county board's Committee on Public Service Monday.

Mole said passage of the annual inspection ordinance would eliminate any plans by the department to do spot checks of motor vehicles and ticket those which do not meet requirements.

Senate OKs new Illinois EPA director

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois Senate Wednesday unanimously approved Gov. Daniel Walker's appointment of Richard H. Briceland as director of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

On a 42-0 vote, the Senate followed the recommendation of the Senate Executive Committee which Tuesday approved Briceland's appointment on a unanimous vote. Briceland had promised the committee he would see to it the EPA would not act arbitrarily in pollution cases.

Briceland, 45, was formerly a projects director for the federal EPA where he worked on a program requiring cars to carry mile-per-gallon stickers. He also served as liaison between the EPA and the Department of Transportation and worked to control biological pollution in public lakes.

Briceland replaces Acting EPA Director Jeffrey Diver who will resume his old post as deputy director.

Students in 'who's who'

They are Dennis Pollard, senior at Schaumburg High School; Kurt S. Haaland, senior at Forest View High School; Michael P. Skarzynski, senior at St. Viator High School, and Terry Hamusa, a January graduate of Hersey High School.

They are among more than 20,000 students from high schools throughout the country recognized for leadership in academics, athletics, activities or community service. They will compete for one of 10 scholarship awards ranging from $500 to $1,000 offered by the publishers.

The National Mineworkers Union executive board meeting in London Wednesday night recommended acceptance of a $230-million pay deal from the government-run National Coal Board to end Britain's 3½-week-old coal mine strike. The nation's 269,000 coal workers are now expected to return to work Monday.

Bodies of dead GIs tagged in Thailand

An American military identification laboratory in Thailand yesterday began the task of putting name tags on 12 bodies of American servicemen who died in captivity in Hanoi during the Indochina war. Hanoi gave no indication when they would release another 12 bodies. On the battlefronts, more than 1,000 government troops were unsuccessful in breaking a Communist stronghold on Highway 4, only 15 miles from Phnom Penh. The Saigon command reported 83 cease-fire violations in a 24 hour period ending Wednesday night.

Air experts: Paris control system unsafe

Air traffic controllers said yesterday a new air control system has made the Paris area unsafe for civilian airliners and nearly caused a collision of two jets an hour after it went into operation. The charges were issued three days after the world's worst plane crash killed all 344 persons aboard a Turkish airlines DC10 near Paris.

Fear new strife in Ethiopia

Last minute talks between workers and government officials collapsed yesterday, and Ethiopian unions called a general strike for today in a new threat to the authority of Emperor Haile Selassie. Sources said they feared the walkout could spark renewed strife within the kingdom following two weeks of civil and military disobedience.

Nixon: energy veto K.O.s rationing

From Herald news services

President Nixon last night led off his second news conference in 10 days by saying the Senate, in sustaining the vetoed emergency energy bill, "vetoed longer gas lines and vetoed rationing of gasoline."

The President repeated earlier statements that the only way to solve the energy shortage is to increase supplies and called on Congress to approve, "to move forward," on a cluster of administration bills designed to "get the price of gas down." The particular measures cited were those to deregulate natural gas and to produce oil on the federal government's California oil reserve.

He also repeated an earlier plea that the nation must strive for energy independence by 1980.

Watergate questions dominated the conference. The President reiterated that he told presidential counsel John Dean III in the spring of 1973 it would be easy to raise money to buy the silence of the seven original Watergate defendants, but "it is wrong, that's for sure."

Nixon said he could understand how different persons listening to the tapes of his March 21, 1973 meeting with Dean might misunderstand what he had in mind. "But I know what I meant, and I know what I did," Nixon said.

Nixon's top aide, H. R. Haldeman, was indicted with six others Friday on charges of conspiracy. Haldeman was accused of lying to the Senate Watergate Committee when he, having reviewed the tape, testified under oath that Nixon said it would be possible to pay hush money to the Watergate defendants, "but it would be wrong." Nixon insisted Haldeman's version was accurate.

On the issue of clemency last night, Nixon said "the matter of clemency can only be considered on an individual basis. I can say that no defendant was offered clemency or will be offered clemency."

The President also said he would provide the House Judiciary Committee all the evidence he has already given to Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski. He also said he would answer — under oath — written questions from the committee on matters not covered by tapes and documents. He declined, however, to say whether he would give the committee, which is considering his impeachment, any more material than Jaworski got.

Asked whether he was prepared to pay for his own lawyers and whether he had chosen those lawyers in the event he is tried for impeachment, Nixon replied:

"If the attorney general rules that I have to pay for my own defense, I will do so. But I am not a defendant now."

Turning to the economy, Nixon said forecasts of record crops — particularly wheat — would "tend to hold food prices in check." He repeated an earlier prediction that there would be no recession and said the last half of the year would "see an upward turn in the economy. There will not be a recession in 1974," he said.

When asked about the suggested early end to the Arab oil embargo, Nixon shied away from any predictions. He said, "Indicating what they (the Arabs) would do, might lead them to do otherwise. He did say that diplomatic progress in stabilizing the Arab-Israeli conflicts inevitably would have an effect on the decision.

On other issues: Elections: The President does not think Watergate will affect Republican fortunes in off-year congressional elections.

Campaign financing: Nixon is against public financing of elections because taxpayers could be asked to pay for the campaigns of candidates they oppose.

Nixon offers impeachment group help

From Herald news services

President Nixon and the House Judiciary Committee found themselves on the same side of a big issue Wednesday: getting on with the business of an impeachment inquiry.

Nixon first offered new cooperation with the committee, and then — through attorney James St. Clair — disagreed with a suggestion by U.S. District Judge John Sirica that the impeachment inquiry be put off until after the Watergate trials which begin in September. Sirica said he was concerned about the defendants' right to a fair trial.

The committee quickly turned down Sirica's suggestion, with Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., saying "We want to move expeditiously."

Sirica had made his suggestion at a special hearing in his courtroom called to discuss a secret report handed him by the Watergate grand jury when it indicted seven Nixon associates Friday.

Sirica gave no hint at the hearing what he might do with the grand jury's sealed presentment, but St. Clair told newsmen Sirica permitted him to read a two-page secret letter from the grand jury, and he told Nixon of its content.

The Judiciary Committee wants the secret report for its impeachment inquiry, and has set an April 30 target date for making a recommendation on whether the House should conduct impeachment proceedings.

St. Clair earlier said Nixon would give the committee members all materials Nixon furnished the Watergate grand jury — some of them by today — and would "answer all written questions and participate in oral interviews" if necessary.

Committee members expected to determine today how much cooperation they might get from Nixon, and if it wasn't enough, they were still prepared to subpoena the materials wanted.

Syrian attack fears; Israeli troops on alert

JERUSALEM (UPI) — With Israeli troops on full alert against a possible attack by Syria, Prime Minister Golda Meir ended two weeks of leadership crisis Wednesday by forming a new cabinet for what she said will be a majority government.

Mrs. Meir told President Agha Khatib she was able to command a majority in the 120-member Knesset parliament because of the addition of the National Religious party to her cabinet. The NRP had previously refused to join the government in a dispute over religious laws.

The report of the full alert status of Israeli troops on the Golan Heights followed a tour of Israeli front-line positions by Defense Minister Moshe Dayan after reported warnings by Israeli intelligence that Syria was planning attacks in efforts to recapture territory lost in last October's war.

Military sources said Dayan conferred with field commanders on what he termed the "new situation" which he said made him change his mind and decide to serve in Mrs. Meir's new government. Dayan had been heavily criticized for the lack of preparedness of Israeli forces for the October conflict.

Meanwhile, Iranian and Iraqi forces battled with tanks, mortars and artillery Wednesday in what the government news agency Pars described as heavy fighting. It was the third consecutive day of combat in a long-standing border dispute.

Meany: 'end all controls'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President George Meany of the AFL-CIO asked Congress Wednesday to let wage-price controls expire next month "without any ifs, ands or buts."

He said the American housewife — by exercising discretion when prices go too high — would do a better job of combating inflation than President Nixon has managed during 36 months of controls.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., a conservative, praised Meany's position, leading liberal Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., to say "When George Meany

Nixon energy veto upheld

From Herald news services

President Nixon did the expected Wednesday — vetoing the emergency energy bill — and quickly had his action upheld in the Senate.

Nixon's main objection to the bill was a provision to roll back crude oil prices, an action he said would discourage production, cut the flow of gasoline and force nationwide rationing.

The Senate voted 58-40 to override the veto, eight votes short of the two-thirds majority required. A move quickly was announced to get through a "bare bones" version Nixon would approve.

The bill authorized Nixon to take a vast array of energy-saving steps, including imposing rationing, lowering highway speed limits and easing antipollution standards, in addition to imposing a ceiling of $7.09 a barrel on the wellhead price of newly produced domestic crude oil.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., a champion of the bill during months of wrangling over it in Congress, said the veto would "outrage" the public, but Nixon said the nation "expects better" and "deserves better."

Nixon asked instead for passage of a long list of his own proposals including a "windfall" tax on oil companies' profits; mandatory reporting by oil companies of inventories, production and costs; an end to restrictions on natural gas prices; and creation of a Federal Energy Administration.

In other energy developments Wednesday:

• Diplomatic sources in Cairo said there are mounting indications that the Arabs are about to ease their oil embargo against the U.S., with Egypt and Saudi Arabia in the forefront of the move. They said action could come at a meeting of Arab oil ministers in Tripoli beginning this Sunday, but Washington sources continued to warn against too much optimism.

• The ranking Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Herman Scheibel of Pennsylvania — gave his support to a plan to end the oil depletion allowance, virtually assuring the committee vote to phase out the much-criticized tax advantage.

• The Labor Department said the number of persons seeking unemployment benefits or claiming they lost their jobs because of the energy shortage stood at 292,400, up from the previous week, but down from the peak of 303,100 two weeks ago.

Allegedly handled Wickes payoff

Phillips identified as 'bagman' in $50,000 extortion

by BOB CASEY and AL MESSERSCHMIDT
Nicholas Phillips, county zoning board employee indicted in the Wheeling shake-down scandal, has been identified by a key government witness as the bagman who collected $50,000 extorted from Wickes Inc. in 1971 at a North Side Chicago hotel.

The witness picked Phillips' photograph from several others last December, ending an intensive search for the suspected bagman less than two months before Phillips and five others were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The payoff allegedly took place Dec. 30, 1971, at the Lake Shore Drive Holiday Inn, 844 N. Lake Shore Dr., according to information contained in defense motions filed in U. S. District Court by Phillips' attorney, Louis Carbonaro.

IN THE MOTIONS, Carbonaro asked federal prosecutors to reveal the identity of the witness, which has been a closely kept secret since the $50,000 payoff was discovered late last year by investigators.

He also asked U. S. District Court Judge Prentice Marshall to throw out evidence of Phillips' identification by the witness, which he said "was induced by the actions of the (federal) agents" in violation of his client's constitutional rights.

Carbonaro said Phillips, 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was photographed Dec. 2 against his will after he was subpoenaed by a special grand jury investigating corruption in Wheeling village government. The photograph was then compared to photos of other persons by the prosecution witness, who identified Phillips.

The other persons photographed, Carbonaro charged, were "not dressed in similar fashion to the defendant or of similar age, color of hair, height, weight, build or general description."

The defense motions also revealed that the U. S. attorney has records that telephone calls were made between the phones of Phillips and his cousin, James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman also indicted by the grand jury Jan. 31.

STAVROS, 3705 Whirlaway Dr., Northbrook, has been a behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling village government for almost a decade. He faces a total of 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in alleged shakedowns of developers seeking zoning and building permits in Wheeling.

Stavros was not named in either of the two extortion indictments involving Wickes.

According to Carbonaro, the U. S. Attorney's Office plans to submit the telephone records as evidence in the case against Phillips and Ira Colitz, a former county zoning board member charged with aiding Phillips in the alleged shakedown of Wickes.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison acknowledged the existence of the records, which he said "show a relationship" between Stavros and Phillips. Kadison said, however, that "we have no evidence against Stavros in this case."

The Herald has learned that records of calls made from telephones of key suspects and others in the Wickes case provided important leads in tracking down persons involved in the shakedown scheme.

INFORMATION ABOUT the $50,000

payoff apparently was turned up late in the investigation, which started more than a year ago.

Rumors that certain village officials were given truckloads of free furniture by the company at the time zoning was approved circulated in the community for more than a year. Information on the furniture deliveries was given to federal investigators early in the probe by The Herald.

Through company records, the deliveries were traced from a Wickes warehouse in West Allis, Wis., to the homes of two indicted village officials, former trustee Michael Valenza and Building Dir. William Bieber.

Bieber was charged with extortion, conspiracy and perjury in the alleged furniture shakedown. Valenza, also accused of receiving extorted furniture, pleaded guilty Feb. 28 to one conspiracy count after the U. S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second count of extortion.

There has been no indication of any connection between the Bieber-Valenza indictment and the Phillips-Colitz indictment. Bieber, Phillips and Colitz have pleaded innocent.

TRIAL DATE FOR the Phillips-Colitz case has been scheduled for May 6. Judge Marshall is scheduled to rule shortly before the trial on the motion to throw out the photograph identification.

The Phillips defense motions came after a pretrial conference among Carbonaro and the prosecutors, Kadison and Assistant U. S. Atty. Howard Stone. Judge Marshall is expected to decide which defense requests for additional information must be answered by the government.

In addition to the identity of the government's key witness, Carbonaro has asked for records from the Chicago law firm that represented Wickes before village zoning officials in 1971. He also wants to know what happened to the $50,000 his client is accused of extorting from the company.

Sources involved in the investigation say the government has solid evidence tracing the payoff to Phillips, evidence apparently provided in part by the secret witness. What happened to the money after that, sources have indicated, will be up to Phillips to tell.

Carbonaro said Phillips has appeared before the grand jury but the defense attorney declined to comment on his client's testimony. Carbonaro also declined comment when asked if Phillips was present at the Holiday Inn on the day the alleged payoff was made.

ALSO TESTIFYING before the grand jury have been several key officials of Wickes. The decision to make a payoff to obtain zoning for the Wickes store, 351 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling, was made at a high corporate level, The Herald has learned.

The secret witness, however, apparently is not a company official. One source described him as an "outsider."

When the witness confronted investigators with his knowledge of the payoff, he had only a description of the bagman who picked up the $50,000. He described the man as dark, slender, just under six feet tall and 30 to 40 years old.

Armed with the description, investigators began to scour Wheeling in search of known associates of officials believed to be involved in the shakedown scheme. Apparently, telephone records helped trace the bagman to the telephone of a county official.

Phillips was eventually subpoenaed by the grand jury and was photographed twice for identification purposes, after a federal building camera malfunctioned the first time. His photograph was then shown to the government witness and Phillips was identified as the bagman.

Builder will cut density if homeowners drop suit

Property owner Arnold Liebling has offered to cut the density of his proposed 40-acre multi-family development if Prospect Heights opponents agree to drop a suit challenging the annexation of the property to Wheeling.

Assistant State's Atty. Paul P. Biebel Jr. said Liebling has offered to only build apartments on half of the 40 acres and single-family homes on the other 20 acres. The property, located near the northeast corner of Wheeling and Camp McDonald roads, has all been zoned for apartments by the Village of Wheeling.

Further, Biebel said Liebling would, as much as possible, locate the single-family houses closest to nearby Prospect Heights property.

Liebling's offer most probably will not be accepted as opponents of the project have already obtained a court ruling that the annexation of the property to Wheeling was improper and therefore void. Without any appeals, the only decision left for the courts is whether the objection of the Prospect Heights residents was filed too late. An April 19 court date has been set for that opinion.

R. P. BELTRAN, chairman of the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, which originally filed the suit, yesterday said he had only heard rumors of an offer from Liebling. He added that until he heard officially concerning an offer he would not comment.

Beltran said his group would probably send a representative to a meeting later this month as proposed by Biebel. Biebel has suggested a meeting on either March 14 or 21 "to ascertain whether some compromise can be reached."

When asked, Biebel said he felt it would only be fair for Liebling's offered compromise to be considered by all concerned. Biebel said he expected a ruling in favor of the objectors on the question of whether the objection was filed late, but he could not be certain as a fourth judge has acquired the case. The other three judges were either transferred or promoted.

Elk herd to get new home at area forest preserve

by BOB GALLAS

Elk Grove Township's legendary elk herd, a long-time fixture along the north side of Higgins Road in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve, will be moving to a new home by the end of the year.

Their present home isolated to become a lake as part of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed project, and has made it necessary to move the herd to a new location within the forest preserve, according to James Mattson, supervisor for the northwestern district of the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Mattson said plans now call for the herd to be moved to the open part of the forest preserve on the northwest corner of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads.

FORESTRY CREWS have already started preliminary clearing work at the site the herd is presently occupying. Mattson said a parking lot will be constructed at the new corner site for visitors and bids will probably be let this summer for a fence enclosure to hold the 12-member herd of elk.

Mattson added the timetable for the move isn't definite, since both federal and state monies are involved in the project, which may cause some delays, depending on the release of funds.

Mattson said the herd probably won't be moved until cold weather sets in this November and the herd moves in to take feed left by forest preserve personnel. Otherwise, the rest of the herd would tend to run off once the rounding up began, according to Mattson.

HOW DO YOU MOVE a herd of wild elk?

"We'll tranquilize them and then load them on trucks for the short trip down the street," said Mattson. The whole move shouldn't take longer than an hour or so," he added.

Two of the herd, one of which is part of what Mattson described as the "old herd strain," will be shipped to an Indiana state park sometime next week.

Another member of the herd which has been running loose since last year is still running free. The 2-year-old male was sighted by several motorists on Higgins and Arlington Heights roads earlier this year, but is now deep within the preserve, according to Mattson. The elk has successfully managed to elude forest preserve and zoo personnel trying to capture it and is becoming smarter with each day of freedom, he said.

'Good lead' in fire at theater

Schaumburg police Wednesday were working on a "good lead" in connection with the arson fire Tuesday night at the Woodfield I Theatre.

Richard Rodems, 62, of Palatine, the manager, who suffered a heart attack at the theater after the fire, was listed yesterday in serious condition but improving at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Police report 100 patrons were safely evacuated from the theater after two explosions went off seconds apart at 10:10 p.m. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

THE EXPLOSIONS, believed to have been caused by two cans of lighter fluid found at the scene, were followed by flames which spread along the back stage area to backdrop and curtains. Boxes and rubbish were also found which appeared to have been deliberately stacked in the backstage area.

The incident was the second arson attempt this week. On Monday night, caps removed from a gas meter at the theater caused gas to leak and a lighted cigaret was discovered nearby.

"It was business as usual" yesterday, said Edward Seguin, spokesman for ABC Great States Theatres, owners of the local film house.

Passes or refunds were offered in the lobby as patrons of Woodfield I departed because of the fire, he added.

THEY BROWSE, examine and ask questions about recreational vehicles, but people visiting the sixth annual camping and travel show at the Arlington Park Race Track this week are hesitant about buying. The gas shortage has caused some to think twice about long summer vacations.

by BETTY LEE
For the past 13 years Mr. and Mrs. John Keyzer of Rolling Meadows packed up their camping trailer and loaded the kids into the car for summer vacation. But not this year.

They were planning to go to California, but because of the lack of gas, the Keyzers are thinking of other ways to take their vacation without worrying about gas. Last year they camped in Florida and getting gas was no problem.

"We have been giving it a lot of thought," said Keyzer. "We want to go to California but now it looks like it's out of the question. I guess we'll have to wait and see what the gas situation's going to be."

The Keyzers were browsing at the gleaming campers, trailers and motor homes at the sixth annual Camping and Travel Show at the Arlington Park Race Track yesterday.

Dealers there know they won't be selling as much of their wares as they did last year at the show. The people are nervous about getting gas, they said.

BILL KERVIN, president of the Chicago Recreation Vehicle Dealers Assn., which is sponsoring the show, estimates a drop of 15 to 20 per cent on sales at the show this week.

"John Q. Public is sure he is being had," said Kerwin of the gasoline shortage. "The people are irritable and it's going to take some time to not be frantic about gas." Kerwin added the people are becoming skeptical of whether there is a gasoline shortage.

Along with the decrease in sales, the dealers at the show are expecting a smaller crowd this year. Kerwin estimated that 43,000 persons at most will attend, which is about a 30 per cent decrease from last year's attendance of 63,000.

Ernest Andres, who came to the show from Twin Lakes, Wis., was thinking of buying a motor home. "With the gas shortage I wouldn't even consider it," he said.

Other persons were more optimistic about their vacations. Some said they thought the gas shortage will cease by summer and some are considering taking shorter trips.

THE JOHNSONS bought a camper last

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife go camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kerwin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped productions, said Kerwin. Along with business mismanagement, which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kerwin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Riteway Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display. Known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit, ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hersey on Monday. Hershey is a salesman for a line of trailers and said he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hershey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up.

"You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

Forest View boundary vote Monday?

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A change in the boundaries of four Dist. 214 high schools will affect students living in Mount Prospect Elementary School Dist. 57 and Wheeling Elementary School Dist. 21 if it is adopted by the Dist. 214 Board of Education Monday.

The Dist. 214 administration has recommended that Forest View High School students living in Dist. 57 be sent to Prospect High School next year, and Hersey High School students living in Dist. 21 be sent to Wheeling High School.

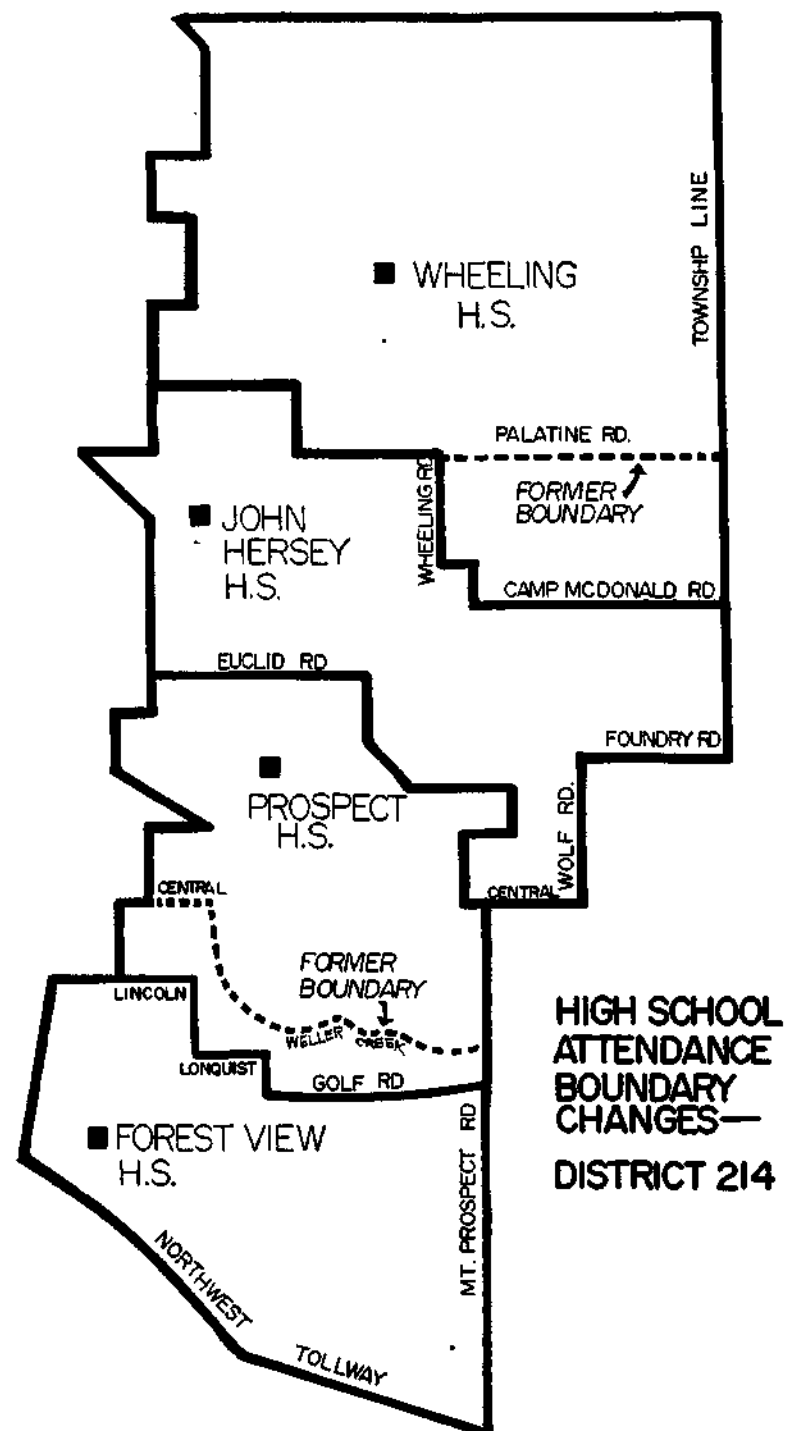

The change in boundaries would be effective next September but Dist. 214 officials have asked the board to give students the option of staying in their original school. All students now attending Forest View or Hersey would have the option of staying there until graduation, next year's incoming freshmen would have the same option and so would students whose older brothers or sisters attend the original school. Free bus transportation will be provided by the district for students who decide to stay in their original school.

DIST. 214 officials originally proposed a boundary change to relieve overcrowding at Forest View High School. All Dist. 214 schools are designed for 2,500 students except Hersey which has a capacity of 2,750. Enrollment next year at Forest View is expected to be 2,915 and projections show the enrollment will peak in 1977 with 3,320.

If the boundary changes are not made Hersey will have 2,790 students next year, Prospect will have 2,395 and Wheeling will have 1,960. Dist. 214 officials have now decided to change the boundaries for Wheeling and Hersey High Schools to balance enrollment there. Wheeling's enrollment is lower than the other schools because the area has a large number of apartment units which have not generated as many high school students as school officials anticipated.

The boundary change would remove students from Forest View and Hersey and place them in Prospect and Wheeling. The Dist. 57 area affected by the change generates about 110 high school students per year and the Dist. 21 area generates about 100 students per year.

The Dist. 214 board moved its meeting

Monday at 8 p.m. from the board room to the Prospect High School auditorium so parents can attend the meeting and express their views on the recommended changes.

THE BOARD has had two meetings to discuss the boundary change in recent weeks. Both were attended by parents, primarily from the Des Plaines area of Forest View High School who came to ask the board not to move their children to another high school.

Thinks schools will get full share of aid

Walker aid cutbacks won't hurt schools here: Gill

by JILL BETTNER

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said yesterday he is confident Gov. Daniel Walker's decision this week to withhold an estimated $12 million in state aid to Illinois school districts this fiscal year will not adversely affect local schools.

Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

Gill said he believes the governor

plans to transfer unused funds in State Supt. Michael J. Bakalis' office to make up for the projected deficit. Gill's belief is based, he said, on information obtained from legislators, the Illinois Assn. of School Administrators and the Illinois Assn. of School Boards.

WALKER ANNOUNCED Monday he will not ask the state legislature to pass a deficiency appropriation to cover the deficit created last summer when the governor cut the original school aid appropriation by $45 million.

Several other local superintendents have expressed the fear that Walker's decision not to seek a deficiency appropriation will mean that Illinois school districts will receive only 11 state aid payments this fiscal year instead of the scheduled 12.

"The governor has not said that he'll wretch on the payments," Gill said. "I'm sure we'll get the 12th payment and the governor has every intention of transferring funds in Bakalis' office."

Such a transfer would have to be approved by the state legislature in the coming spring session, Gill said. Although Walker would have the power to veto a measure to make the transfer, he probably wouldn't because it would be a bad political move, Gill added.

IF, FOR SOME reason, the state did not come through with the 12 full payments Dist. 21 is scheduled to receive this fiscal year, Gill estimated the district would lose as much as $250,000.

The budget for the 1973-74 school year was determined on the basis of 12 equal state aid payments, the superintendent said. If the 12th payment is dropped, the district probably would have to issue tax anticipation warrants (TAWs) to make up the loss.

"I'm sure we could issue enough TAWs to cover the difference, but that would be taking local money when it's the state's obligation to provide those funds," Gill said.

"I really believe we're going to get the money, but if we don't you can bet we're going to raise hell about it."

THE LOSS OF the promised 12th state aid payment to Dist. 96, which serves the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove and Long Grove would amount to about $23,600, according to Supt. William Hitzeman.

A recent change in property assessments in Lake County, which has rolled back rates to 1972 levels, has already cut the estimated revenue in that district by at least $91,000.

The new assessment plan will also cause a delay in distribution of tax monies to Lake County schools, forcing Dist. 96 to issue TAWs to cover operating costs for about two months next summer.

Hitzeman said he was not aware of any plan to transfer state funds to meet the 12-payment schedule.

Marine saves runaway cab from crash

by JOE SWICKARD

"I didn't really think about it. I was just thinking about stopping the cab," said Marine Pvt. James T. Beck.

Beck, 19, of 2315 Olive, Arlington Heights, interrupted his leave from Camp Lejeune, N.C., Tuesday night to stop a runaway cab before it crashed into a building in Harwood Heights.

"I was driving down Montrose when this cab turned left in front of me. A woman was leaning out the window yelling and I could see there wasn't a driver," Beck said.

Deborah Pagni, Chicago, had just entered the cab driven by James Russell when she got "a funny feeling."

Miss Pagni said, "I had just told him the address and I got a funny feeling. The driver was super quiet and you know cab drivers usually talk a lot. I looked at him and I could see he was having a heart attack."

Pvt. James T. Beck

Russell was struggling for breath and trying to control the cab, she said. "I knew something was wrong but there was nothing I could do. I was afraid to jump into the front seat. The only thing to do was jump out, so I did," she said.

"THE LADY JUMPED out and she was screaming that the driver had had a heart attack. So I stopped my car and ran after it," Beck said.

"I was running behind the cab and the guy was chasing it. He caught it in time. He jumped in and stopped it before it hit the building," Miss Pagni said.

Beck, a former member of the swimming team at Maine East High School, chased the cab as it headed for a brick apartment building. It took him about 30 yards to catch the cab which was traveling driverless at 10 to 15 miles per hour, according to Miss Pagni.

"I got in and stepped on the brakes I looked at the driver first and then called in on the cab's radio," Beck said.

Beck stopped the cab two feet from the brick wall.

Student speakers win at district

Buffalo Grove High School's individual speech events team placed third in the district tournament held at Waukegan High School West Saturday.

Three district winners from Buffalo Grove were: Cheryl Zeken, junior, in prose reading; Sue Lesch, freshman, in oratorical declamation; and Mary Hermann and Sally Leadley, freshmen, in dramatic duet acting.

Third place winners were Mary Beth Lee, junior, dramatic interpretation; and Sue Wegier, junior, radio speaking. The reader's theatre which presented Animal Farm also placed third.

All these students are now eligible for competition in the sectional tournament March 16.

Year-round and Sunday horse racing proposed

An overhauling of the state horse racing system, including the allowing of Sunday and year-round racing, was proposed Wednesday by the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission.

The proposed sweeping changes include a "complete ban" on public officials owning race track stock; awarding of racing dates for a three-year period; and creation of a professional three-man racing board.

Arlington Park Race Track president Jack Loomer could not be reached for comment on the new proposals. However, he endorsed a similar bill to allow Sunday racing last year, saying horse racing was not unlike other professional sports such as baseball and football.

The report was the result of a year-long study, headed by Charles Siragusa, executive director of the investigating commission.

Present regulations ban horse races on Sundays and limit the racing season to spring, summer and fall.

THE REPORT recommended tracks be given dates over three years. Tracks are now awarded the dates yearly for the upcoming season.

The appointed six-member Illinois Racing Commission would also be scrapped if the report and its recommended legislation becomes law. In its place would be a professional, salaried three-man board, according to the report.

The new report contains portions of several bills to reform racing that were introduced last year. The bills, which would have changed the racing board make-up and permitted the year-round and Sunday racing dates, did not become law.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said of the earlier bills, "I don't think this community would be delighted with Sunday racing."

THE REPORT ALSO urges creation of a statewide race track security force. The commission said current security practices at state tracks are ineffective.

"... the commission believes that criminal practices are not as widespread as some detractors allege, (but) the commission is convinced that a serious problem nevertheless prevails," the report said.

The report was critical of present enforcement of rules at Illinois tracks. "Criminal prosecutions for illegal practices are virtually nonexistent," it said.

The commission said the establishment of a bureau of race track security, funded and operated by the state, would alleviate the problem.

Shelter Inc. seeks couples to serve as foster parents

Area couples interested in serving as short-term foster parents are being sought by Shelter Inc., a local child welfare agency planning to offer care and supervision for temporarily homeless children.

Volunteers are needed to provide emergency foster homes for abused, abandoned, neglected and runaway children in Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships.

Shelter Inc., has been in the planning for a year and a half and the agency hopes to begin operation this spring.

A board of directors was recently elected to head the agency, including representatives from area schools, legal, law enforcement and youth agencies.

The four townships to be served by the agency have granted Shelter Inc., a total of $31,600 for the first year of operation.

The agency is in the final stages of obtaining licensing by the Illinois State Department of Children and Family Services and will work closely with its parent organization as an extension to provide emergency homes in the immediate area.

A training program will be offered for all prospective foster parents. The agency is also looking for volunteers to help with typing, phoning or giving speeches about Shelter Inc., in the area.

Persons wanting to volunteer to help or wanting more information may call Jennie Riechers at 259-2527 evenings, or Susan Roberts at 392-6796.

Tests show Americans don't sing very well

NEW YORK (UPI) — Listen — you will hear America singing badly.

That sour note comes in a report released today by the National Assessment of Educational Progress, a group that previously reported on the progress, or lack of it, in reading, writing and arithmetic.

This first national survey of music performance among school children and young adults showed:

"When it comes to over-all ability to perform musically, young Americans score low."

It doesn't matter whether the musical thing is Brahms, boogie woogie, Bru-beck, humming or tapping feet.

THE ASSESSMENT, funded by a grant from the U.S. Office of Education through the Education Commission of the States, was not composed of paper and pencil exercises.

Rather, it was a study of performances ranging from high school concerts to 9-year-olds singing in the classroom to the unrehearsed natural reaction of young adults tapping in rhythm to music.

Based on a random sampling of the population — ages 9, 13, 17, and young adults 26 through 35 — exercises measured ability to sing familiar songs, repeat unfamiliar musical material, improvise, perform from notation and perform a prepared piece.

Some of the findings:

• Fewer than 15 per cent of any age group could sight-read even the simplest line of music.

• The best results involved singing "America." Seventy per cent of adults sang acceptably with taped accompaniment.

• Twenty-five per cent of the 9 year olds, 35 per cent of the 13 year olds, 25 per cent of the 17-year olds and 15 per cent of the young adults claimed to play an instrument. About half played for the assessment. At least half played acceptably.

• Asked to sing a selection of their own choice, only 20 per cent of the 9 year olds, 30 per cent of the 13 year olds, 25 per cent of the 17 year olds and 45 per cent of the young adults sang acceptably.

• In all age groups, females did better than males.

• Nine-, 13- and 17-year-old blacks attained percentages seven to eight points higher than whites on exercises that involved repeating and improvising rhythmic patterns. Black adults were even or above the national performance level on the familiar song, rhythm, melody and harmony exercise.

• Of community types tested, individuals in rural communities showed a slight disadvantage when compared to the nation.

Spending would top income by $42 million

Walker proposes record $7.886 billion budget; up 3%

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Gov. Daniel Walker Wednesday proposed a record $7.886 billion state budget for the coming fiscal year, an increase of 3 per cent over this year's estimated total.

The budget includes "modest" tax relief, primarily for senior citizens; a large decrease in highway construction funds; and a $138 million increase for public schools. Welfare appropriations stay at about this year's level.

REPUBLICAN HOUSE speaker W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, gives his analysis of Gov. Walker's second annual budget message at a press conference. Blair said he and Senate President William Harris, R-Pontiac, will hold "debriefing" sessions of their own to show what the governor's fiscal 1975 state budget really means.

Budget honors Ogilvie, GOP leaders say

by BOB LAHEY

Republican legislators Wednesday cited Gov. Daniel Walker's second annual budget message as a tacit admission of the wisdom of the programs of his Republican predecessor, Gov. Richard Ogilvie.

They pointed to the governor's emphasis in his address to the General Assembly on the system of "equalized flat grants" as the basis for public aid payments. Increased appropriations for a supplement freeway system Downstate, and the concept of "deinstitutionalizing" mental health patients.

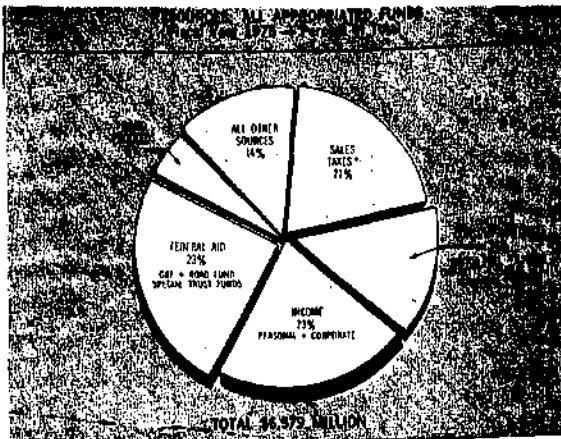

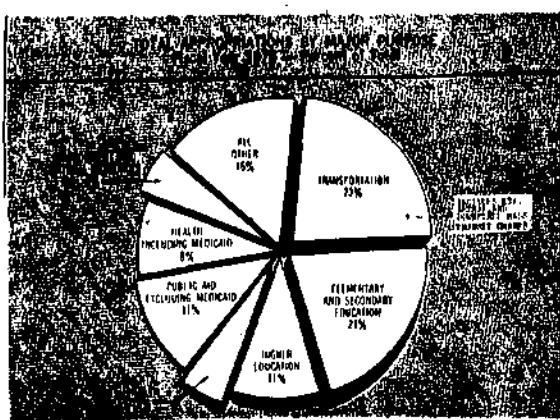

All those, said Republicans, are concepts introduced by Ogilvie. In addition, said Rep. Brian Duff, R-Wilmette, Walker has "been able to take advantage of revenue programs instituted by Ogilvie — including the state income tax which cost him his job."

Duff said that while he was pleased to see Walker's "growing awareness of the wisdom of Gov. Ogilvie's programs," that the budget message contained two glaring oversights. Walker, he said, ignored the "crying needs" for reducing crime and improving the courts, and also said the message ignored the question of providing employment and encouraging business growth.

Other than specific objections such as those raised by Duff, however, the budget message appeared to have stirred hostility among Republicans than did Walker's first spending plan presented last year.

SOME REPUBLICANS saw the program as an overture for Republican support, while others predicted that he will

The budget also would commit the state to spend $42 million more during the coming fiscal year than is expected in revenue.

"This fiscal year 1975 budget I present you today is an accountability budget," Walker told a joint session of the House and Senate.

"It is a budget that makes a start toward holding government accountable for what it has been doing and plans to do with the dollars provided this state by the taxpayers of Illinois."

Walker's budget would increase estimated state appropriations from this year's $7.650 billion to $7.886 billion. It also would increase estimated state spending from this year's $6.145 billion to $6.7 billion — an increase of 9 per cent.

THE DIFFERENCE between appropriations and spending lies primarily in long-term building projects such as roads. By state law, the entire cost of such projects must be appropriated when contracts are awarded, even though it is certain that little of the total amount will be spent during that year.

Senate President William Harris, R-Pontiac, said he is "seriously troubled" by Walker's school funding proposal and said the governor has not shown "sufficient concern to ultimately, adequately fund our state employees' pension systems."

House Democratic Leader Clyde Choate praised most of the governor's budget as "generally a responsible spending plan" but said his own tax relief plan would help more people than would Walker's.

Walker said his budget increases would come largely in the areas of education, the state payroll, mass transit and the state lottery.

He said he has increased the education budget, counting higher education and school construction, by more than $400 million; has added $97 million to the budget to pay for the proposed Regional Transit Authority in the Chicago area; has budgeted $64 million for operation of the state lottery scheduled to start this summer; and has approved a $13 million increase in appropriations for the legislative and judicial branches of government.

DECREASES in other areas, including transportation, bring the total increase figure to only $236 million, Walker said. Walker denied that his proposed budget is a "deficit" budget, despite the fact it calls for the state to spend $42 million more than it expects to receive during fiscal 1975.

The net effect of his proposal, he said, would reduce the state's surplus from $162 million on June 30, 1974, to $116 million on June 30, 1975.

In other words, he admitted, he is proposing that the state spend more than it is taking in during the coming year.

But, he said, the state constitution defines a "deficit" budget as one which requires borrowing to cover spending. He does not propose that step, he said.

University of Chicago economist Robert Barrow and former Budget Bureau officials, however, agreed that a budget calling for more spending than revenue could justly be called a "deficit" budget.

Major spending areas of Walker's 1975 budget — as in most recent years — are common schools, transportation and welfare.

He proposed a $138 million increase for grade and high schools. He did not, however, specify how that increase should be divided among straight aid to schools, the teachers' retirement fund and other state school expenditures.

WALKER PROPOSED a $47 million increase for welfare — a minuscule amount compared with this year's estimated total of $1.503 billion. He said he thinks he can live with that level of funding despite the fact that his welfare request of a year ago turned up at least $50 million short of need.

In transportation, Walker asked an appropriation of $44,477,200 less than this year's $1.851 billion.

Most of the cuts came in funds for two-lane state roads and for state road aid to local governments. State highway construction money took a $34.9 million cut while local road fund aid was trimmed nearly $14 million. Walker blamed reduced gas tax revenue — brought on by the energy crisis — for the cuts.

Much of the 1975 budget was done on a new "management by objectives" system. That plan commits various departments to reaching specific performance goals in return for the amount of budget money they are allocated.

The Department of Conservation, for instance, has an "objective" of performing 35 "aquatic weed control jobs" during fiscal 1975 — an increase of three such jobs from this fiscal year.

Subaortic stenosis is a birth defect

My 15-year old daughter died of subaortic stenosis. We are trying to find out more about this rare heart disease. Is it always fatal? Can a person with this disease live a normal life? Is it hereditary? What, if anything, can be done for this condition? I will appreciate any information you can give.

It is such a great loss to lose a loved one so early. Fortunately many people with this problem can be helped or even cured. It depends a lot on how severe the problem is, and if there are other problems as well.

Subaortic stenosis really refers to an obstruction at the outlet of the heart, inside the heart chamber. If the obstruction is minimal it may not even be noticed by the individual, and he may lead a fairly normal life, never the wiser. If the obstruction is severe it limits the heart's ability to pump blood out into the arteries, then the situation is quite different.

When the obstruction causes serious problems, then a heart operation can be performed. The heart has to be opened and the obstruction removed. This is usually a very successful operation, if there are no other problems present. It is one of the real advances in heart surgery that has been developed over the past 20 years.

Although it is a birth defect, it is not necessarily an inherited condition. It represents something going wrong during the normal development before birth. Incidentally, an obstruction of the aortic valve itself can occur in older periods as the valve is calcified after rheumatic heart disease, but this is a different type of problem.

I am 76 years old and have heart disease and angina heart pain. I take medicine for this.

On my recent exam my cholesterol was normal at 255, but the triglycerides were slightly elevated to 212. I understand the upper limit of normal for these is 150.

How could the cholesterol be normal and the triglycerides by slightly elevated?

First learn to think of cholesterol as a waxy substance which is not a fat, and triglycerides as fat. The fat particles, triglycerides, are attached to some cholesterol in the blood. The ratio of the two often varies. It is not uncommon to have high blood fats and normal cholesterol levels.

Incidentally, not everyone would agree that your cholesterol level was normal. I would regard it as borderline. Studies show that the lowest rate of heart attacks occur in persons with levels below 200. The 250 range is sometimes used only because it is an average figure for our population, a population with a high incidence of heart attacks. So, I would prefer to see both of your values at a lower level.

Suicides by Indians topic of radio show

Suicides among American Indians have been considered phenomenal by many Indian lore fans.

Dr. James H. Shore, chief of the mental health branch, Portland Area Indian Health Service, will discuss the facts and fantasies of American Indian suicides with Cynthia Tivers of Forest Hospital on Sunday's 8 a.m. broadcast of "The Search for Mental Health" on WJJD (102.3).

"The Search for Mental Health" is a public service radio series produced and directed by Cynthia Tivers and funded by the Forest Hospital Foundation of Des Plaines. It is heard weekly on WJJD and is distributed nationally.

encounter the same problems in enlisting the aid of the legislature that he did last year.

Rep. Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, said Walker will "encounter great difficulty" among Democrats because of his attempts to unseat some Democratic legislators with his own candidates.

Totten and others also discounted the "meager" tax relief proposals which the governor described in the budget. Totten estimated that the governor's plan to eliminate the sales tax on medicine and drugs will mean a savings of only $1.80 per year to the average person. He also said Walker's proposal to lower the age for the "circuit breaker" on real estate taxes from 65 to 60 would add only 44,000 persons to those eligible for a ceiling on their taxes.

Rep. Leo LaFleur, R-Bloomington, a member of the House appropriations and revenue committee, criticized the deficit in Walker's estimate of spending and revenues. "When you add up the two columns, they just don't match," he said.

LA FLEUR ALSO cautioned that inflation could widen the gap between spending and revenue. "Inflation doesn't bring that much more in, but it takes away a good deal," he noted.

State Comptroller George Lindberg also repeated warnings that Walker's budget was risky "at a time when the economy is full of uncertainties." Lindberg said the budget contained a built-in deficit of $46 million for the fiscal year.

But he added that even that figure is based on a number of assumptions, including the governor's prediction that welfare costs can be reduced. If the economic downturn persists, Lindberg said, welfare costs will rise and tax revenue will decline, widening the gap in the budget.

Peacetime disability checks up

Q — My August compensation check from the Veterans Administration for a 30 per cent peacetime service connected disability was for the same amount as my buddy's for a 30 per cent wartime service connected disability. In the past, his checks were always larger. Why did we receive the same amount in August?

A — In 1972, Public Law 92-328 increased peacetime rates to levels of wartime rates, effective with checks VA mailed in August, 1973.

Q — An editor friend of mine tells me the Veterans Administration touches the lives of nearly half the U.S. population. Is that true?

Veterans' news

A — That's a fairly accurate statement. VA benefits and services are potentially available to 47.1 per cent of our nation's population, either directly to veterans and surviving dependents, or indirectly to members of veterans' families.

Q — I'm having family and job problems. As a Vietnam veteran, am I entitled to counseling by the Veterans Administration?

A — Yes. Some of VA's veterans assistance centers are staffed with community service specialists to help meet the veteran's total counseling needs. These specialists are on duty in Boston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit and other principal cities, and VA plans eventually to place them in all centers.

Q — How many spinal cord injury treatment centers does the Veterans Administration have?

A — As of December 1973, the agency had 15 spinal cord injury treatment centers and 18 prosthetic treatment centers for amputees, geographically dispersed around the country.

The search for mental health

Mental hospitals losing their old stereotypes

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a fully accredited 150-bed psychiatric hospital widely known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

Insane asylum. Nut house. Looney bin. These are some of the appellations given to the state mental hospitals in days gone by. But times have changed, the patients have changed and the hospitals themselves have undergone a gradual but definite facelift that has rendered them vastly different from what they were 30 years ago, according to Dr. Peter Hagopian.

Hagopian, of the Denver State Hospital in Hawthorne, Mass., attributes these changes to several factors. State legislatures have enabled the hospitals, with more money, to improve living conditions. Progress in medicine has provided better treatment and medication. Changes in society have shifted psychiatric syndromes to a less severe variety.

"Mental illness today is much milder," said Hagopian. "The severe syndromes of 30 years ago more or less have been replaced by such illnesses as drug addiction, alcoholism, neuroses and emotional problems. But severe cases are seen with much less frequency, they're less intense and some illnesses like syphilis of the central nervous system have disappeared entirely."

OTHER Hagopian observations are that today's mental patients on the whole are younger and older than they used to be. And, while the alcoholic age group used to be between 30 and 40, today they're much younger, even teen-aged.

"I believe much of the reason for these changes in psychiatric syndromes, which are due after all to cultural and environmental conditioning," Hagopian said, "is that in the '30s and early '40s society was stricter, people had stronger super egos, higher ideals, higher standards, and when these were frustrated, it went deeper than now. Today we have a more permissive society which allows self-expression, not repression of feelings."

In the '30s, a state mental hospital was just a place to take care of the mentally ill, to keep them away from society. Today, Hagopian said, the "care" is supplemented by treatment, better medication and better understanding between relatives, patients and staff. "There are fewer patients now, proportionately more employees, better communication and shorter length of stay," he said. "The staff, instead of being wardens, are a more therapeutic personnel. They're given more responsibility and more authority to act on their own. They contribute more to the patients' care and treatment, which makes them feel more important and like they're accomplishing something."

Tranquilizers were introduced since the '30s and better drugs have been developed, which are used to slow down or speed up the patient's emotional reactivity. "In the mentally ill," said Hagopian, "their reflexes either jump too fast or not fast enough."

ALONG WITH treatment, better care, better food, clothing and equipment, new programs are being developed. "One program we feel is vital is rehabilitation," Hagopian said. "Chronic patients, institutionalized for years, don't want to go out in the community. We're training them in independent living situations. They're making beds, doing dishes, cooking, learning to be independent. Within six to 12 weeks many are able to be put up in apartments in the community, four to a unit. We finance this, but they're taking care of their own needs otherwise."

"We're trying to find alternatives to hospitalization. One thing we're doing is setting up satellite clinics to prevent admission or readmission by seeing the patients in their communities. Those who have been hospitalized, we try to put in the independent living situations, or discharge them or place them in foster homes, family care homes, rest or nursing homes. All these things have contributed to a much lower population in today's state hospitals."

"Unfortunately, though, while mental illness may be minimized, it will never be eliminated entirely," Hagopian believes. "There have to be by-products of a person's interaction between his environment, training, education and environment. And there will always be some undesirable by-products. It's these undesirable by-products that cause mental illness."

The almanac

Today is Thursday, March 7, the 66th day of 1974 with 299 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

Noted American botanist Luther Burbank was born March 7, 1849.

On this day in history:

In 1932, the depths of the Depression, an estimated 3,000 men rioted, demanding jobs at the Detroit plant of the Ford Motor Company. Four men were killed.

In 1936, Adolf Hitler ordered his Nazi troops into the Rhineland, violating the Versailles Treaty.

In 1945, the U.S. 1st Army crossed the Rhine River at Remagen, Germany, as World War II in Europe moved into its closing weeks. Total Allied victory — VE Day — came May 8.

A thought for the day:

American author Ambrose Bierce said, "Marriage . . . a community consisting of a master, a mistress and two slaves, making it two in all."

Retirees may be entitled to a tax credit for 1973

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. Is it true that a retiree may be entitled to a tax credit for 1973 when he files his return?

A. Yes. If you are a retired U.S. citizen or resident, had $600 of earned income in each of any 10 calendar years before 1973, and had retirement income during 1973, you may be entitled to a tax credit. In addition, just by filling out a few lines on Schedule R and your tax form, you can get the IRS to compute the retirement income credit for you. See your tax form instructions for details.

Q. My husband and I are legally separated. I have custody of our daughter. Does this mean I can claim her as a dependent?

A. That depends. First, you and your husband together must have furnished more than one half of the child's support for 1973. Secondly, the child must be in your or your husband's custody for more than half the year.

If these conditions are satisfied, then generally the parent having custody of the child for the greater part of 1973 is entitled to the dependency exemption. However, there are exceptions to this rule. Your husband may be entitled to the exemption if he contributed at least $600 toward the child's support during the year and the decree of separate maintenance or a written agreement specifies that he is entitled to the exemption.

Another exemption arises if he paid $1,200 or more of support for the child in 1973 and you do not establish by a clear preponderance of the evidence that you furnished more for support.

Q. I heard that there are five tests that must be met for a taxpayer to claim a person as a dependent. What are they?

A. For a person to qualify as your dependent for 1973, the following tests must be met:

• You must furnish over half of the dependent's total support during the calendar year.

• Unless the person is less than 19 years of age at the end of the year or a full-time student during five months of the year, you may not claim him as a dependent if his gross income is $750 or more.

• The person must be a member of your household and live with you for the entire year or be closely related to you.

Ask the IRS

• He must be a citizen or national of the U.S. or a U.S. resident, or a resident of Canada, Mexico, Panama Canal Zone or the Republic of Panama for some part of the year.

• The person must not file a joint return unless one is not due but was filed merely to obtain a refund.

Q. I had a part-time job last summer to pay college tuition. I didn't earn enough to pay income tax, but I'm going to file a return to recover income tax withheld from my pay. Can I check off $1 of the tax withheld for the Presidential Election Campaign Fund?

A. No. You can only designate $1 ($2 if married filing jointly) if you had at least that much tax liability.

Q. I pledged $100 to a charitable organization in December, 1973. I was billed in January, 1974 and just paid the bill. Can I deduct this amount on my 1973 return?

A. No. Contributions must actually be paid before the close of 1973 to be deductible on your return for that year.

However, none of the expenses for food and lodging while you are in transit or for food or rent while you are away from home are deductible.

Q. Can I file my tax return without my Form W-2?

A. You should make every effort to obtain your W-2 form from your employer to insure a proper return.

However, your return must be filed on time. If you do not have all your Forms W-2, report all your income and attach a statement explaining how you computed any tax withheld for which you claim credit, but for which you have no Form W-2.

If, after you have filed your return, you receive a Form W-2 for income that you did not include in your return, or if you find your estimates of income and withholding tax to be incorrect, file an amended return, Form 1040X. This form is available at any IRS office.

Q. Can the cost of a trip to a warmer climate upon a doctor's recommendation ever be deducted as a medical expense?

A. If your doctor advises you to spend some time in a warmer climate as part of your medical treatment or to alleviate a specific condition, your share of the transportation expenses to the warmer area is deductible as a medical expense.

Q. When should an employee file a new withholding exemption certificate (Form W-4)?

A. You may file a new Form W-4 at any time if the number of withholding allowances you are entitled to claim increases. This would be the case, for example, if you feel you're going to have a higher amount of itemized deductions on your return next year.

You must file a new Form W-4 within 10 days if the number of allowances you are entitled to claim becomes less than the number you are now claiming. The number of allowances will normally be reduced if your marital status changes from married to single, you stop supporting a dependent, a child marries and moves away from home, or your eligibility for additional withholding allowances changes.

Non-farm self-employment earnings can gain credit

People with low net earnings from non-farm self-employment may get social security credit if they report their earnings by an optional method similar to one available to farmers.

The option is available for the first time to people reporting non-farm self-employment earnings for 1973, according to Norman D. Jerome, social security manager of the Arlington Heights Social Security Office.

"Instead of reporting their net earnings for the years," Jerome said, "People can report up to two-thirds of their gross earnings from self-employment for social security credit — if two-thirds is $400 or more but less than $1,600."

Previously, people who worked in non-farm self-employment got no social security credit if their net earnings for a year were under $400. "Now they can get credit if their net is under $400 but their gross is from $600 to $2,400 and they report their earnings by the optional method," Jerome said.

Social Security & you

EARNINGS REPORTS and social security contributions should be sent with income tax returns to the Internal Revenue Service by April 15.

Eligibility for social security benefits depends on credits earned by people who work in jobs covered by social security. The amount of their monthly social security benefits is based on the worker's average earnings over a period of years.

"The new non-farm option may be used only by people who had net self-employment earnings of $400 or more for at least 2 out of the 3 previous years," Jerome said.

Under the law, the option may be used only five times.

AM General joins the bus industry

by EDWARD S. LECHTZIN

DETROIT — Buses are big business for the smallest of the nation's automakers, American Motors.

"They could be the sleeping giant in the transportation industry," says Cruse Moss, president of AM General, an American Motors subsidiary.

Spurred by the energy crisis, many Americans are checking public transportation available to them. They find most alternatives unattractive.

Right now, about 6,500 of the 4,000 buses in use in the United States are more than 12 years old, about as old as they can get and still provide reasonable service. That's hardly an inducement to get Americans out of their cherished automobiles.

"MILLIONS OF Americans who will use the transit buses now being built and those designed for the years beyond have become accustomed to high standards of riding comfort," Moss says. "We must therefore engineer vehicles that provide the comfort and convenience people expect."

AM General is the newest entry into the transit bus field that has been divided among General Motors Corp. and the Flexible Division of Rohr Corp. When

Business today

AM General decided to enter the business in 1971, about 2,000 buses were being built annually.

Moss estimates that between now and 1990, more than $5.5 billion will be invested in buses by urban transit authorities, with 75,000 units needed during an 18-year period to expand service and as replacements.

AM General began full production in early February at its Mishawaka, Ind., plant purchased from North American Rockwell in 1969 and first used to produce military vehicle chassis. It turns out five buses a day and will double that with a total of 500 workers by early summer.

WORK IS WELL under way on the first of 620 buses for Washington, D.C., under a $24 million contract and the company has contracts for 60 buses for Nashville, Tenn., and 108 more for New Orleans.

Buses being delivered to Washington have plush red interiors with carpeting on the floor, sides and ceiling to absorb noise. The seats are a soft cloth which one AM General executive admitted might not be vandal resistant.

"That's the type of interior the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority wanted since they're hoping to attract people to ride because of the comfort," he said. "I don't know what it will look like after it gets into service."

The side windows offer about 25 percent more visibility than the GMC buses on the market through the general appearance follows GMC coaches.

'Minicars' are on the way

Shell Oil forecaster sees the day not far off for the super-small, 45-miles-a-gallon auto

by LEA TONKIN

"Very small cars" by today's standards will probably be commonplace by the late 1980s, predicts Shell Oil Co.'s manager of corporate forecasting and planning, Ray Thomasson.

"The small cars we're talking about are minicars," Thomasson said at a recent Illinois Petroleum Council meeting in Chicago. He described these autos as weighing less than 1,000 pounds and with 45-miles-per-gallon fuel efficiency.

"They would be used as the second vehicle of a multiple-car fleet," he continued. "You can still have your big car."

The prospect of motorists tooling around in minicars is only one of many lifestyle changes in the works, says the Houston, Tex., forecaster. Coping with persistent energy shortages is going to spark an all-out conservation drive, said Thomasson. Conservation measures could cut fuel consumption by 4.5 million barrels a day by 1980, and 8.5 million barrels a day by 1990.

THE LARGEST potential energy

savings is in the transportation sector. And the largest chunk of transportation-related cutbacks would be in the form of gasoline usage by compact, subcompact and minicars, he said. Substantial fuel price boosts or controversial government action can bring this changeover about, said the forecaster.

A massive switch to smaller autos could mean unemployment problems, Thomasson conceded. Smaller cars would contain less steel and other materials, and a slowdown could occur among supplier industries.

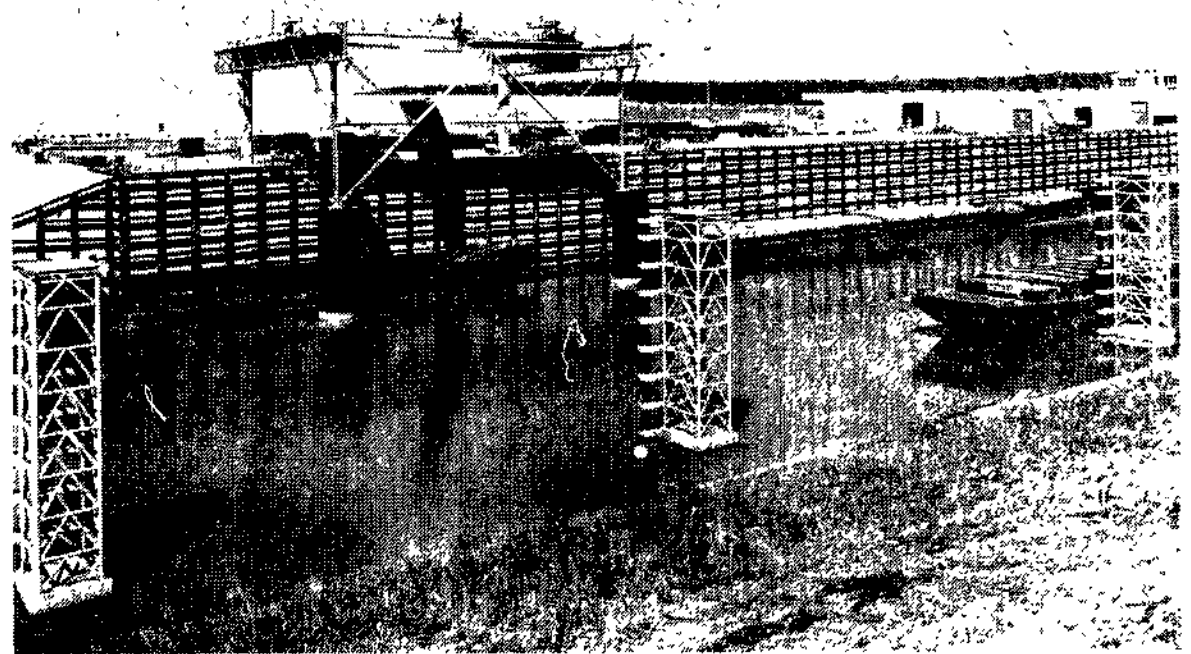

Greater use of mass-transit facilities and car pooling systems is forecast by the Shell Oil representative. The use of school buses for municipal transit during off-hours is one possibility, he said.

PRIVATE HOMES offer energy-saving possibilities second only to transportation, Thomasson continued. Compliance with strict insulation standards, lowered thermostat settings during the heating season, higher settings during the cooling season, elimination of unnecessary lighting and increased efficiency of home appliances are among the measures which can be taken. Improved efficiencies in commercial and industrial buildings will also result in significant energy savings, Thomasson said.

"We're no longer going to buy plastic throwaways in the same quantity," said Thomasson. He adds that in the short term, "The air may not clean up as rapidly as we want it to."

Conservation programs, development of added energy resources and oil imports should enable the U.S. to meet its immediate energy needs, he predicts. "We may be able to get very close to energy self sufficiency by 1990," Thomasson says, adding that consumers will then move on to worries about lifestyle rather than energy.

Bob Lahey's column

With work, Percy can gain Presidential nomination

A friend who worked very hard for the reelection of Richard M. Nixon in 1972 has a theory about what the Republican Party must do for survival in 1974.

To put it simply, his advice is: Abandon Richard Nixon.

The friend is an experienced, while not grizzled, and battered, while not broke, veteran of wars both on the political front and on the picket line. He is that rare bird, a dedicated labor man and a dedicated Republican.

He worked for Richard M. Nixon not only in 1972, but in 1968, and in 1960. In his heart, he is convinced that his efforts in diluting labor support of Democrat George McGovern, and before him Democrat Hubert Humphrey, in Illinois, were substantial factors in Nixon's first narrow victory and his subsequent national landslide.

Before going on, it must be noted that he also considers Richard Nixon among the best of presidents in history.

What he thinks of Nixon and friends as Republicans is another matter.

His thinking is simply that Richard

Charles Percy

Richard Nixon

Nixon abandoned the Republican Party after his election to the White House in 1968, that Nixon has brought disaster upon competent Republican candidates throughout the nation, and that the only way out for the party is to disassociate itself, publicly and emphatically, from Richard Nixon.

His scenario for change: The leading names of the Republican party put aside for the moment their 1976 presidential ambitions and form a united front to persuade the voters of America that it was Richard Nixon, not the Republican Party, which brought Watergate upon us.

Picture Charles Percy, Nelson Rockefeller, Gerald Ford, Elliot Richardson, Howard Baker, Barry Goldwater, Ronald Reagan (you may add to or subtract from this list according to your own views without changing the point) invading the hometown of such a beleaguered Republican candidate as, for instance, U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th.

Young appears headed for certain defeat, according to reports leaking out from his own private poll. The Republican debacles in the Michigan and Ohio special elections reinforce the fear of many Republicans that Young is going to be among the many fallen warriors of the GOP come November.

But what if Percy, Rockefeller, Ford, Richardson, Baker, Goldwater, Reagan came to Young's district? What if Sam Young stood up, too, and said Richard Nixon betrayed my party, and I can no longer claim him as a Republican — though I will continue to support what is good about his presidency?

Well, for one thing, those who are still loyal to Nixon and believe in his eventual vindication would be damn mad.

But the script has the answer to that dilemma. The answer is that if Young and dozens of other Republican congressmen are defeated in November, then Nixon will be hamstrung in the last two years of his presidency, during which his hard-core supporters swear that his role in history will be salvaged.

If Nixon supporters turn their backs on candidates who declare publicly that the disaster confronting the Republican Party is the sole responsibility of Richard Nixon, then they face the great possibility of leaving their President standing almost alone before a hostile Congress.

If Republican ranks are decimated in Congress, they are likely to remain that way for a number of years. Should another Republican then succeed Richard Nixon, he too would be hamstrung.

Consider this other part of the script: Richard Nixon picked himself up off the political floor after defeats in a presidential and gubernatorial election by barnstorming the nation, picking up political IOUs from every corner of the continent on behalf of other candidates.

The Republican who does the most to stem the impending tide of election defeats is the Republican who will go to the next convention with the advantage.

If there is a Republican around who can snatch defeat from the jaws of disaster, he could well be the man that the party turns to in 1976. Percy and others who want the 1976 nomination would do well to lay aside their own time schedules and study this script.

Kissinger notebook

Views of a world traveler

by WILBUR G. LANDREY
UPI Foreign Editor

WASHINGTON — Traveling with Henry Kissinger is like traveling with a game of hars' poker.

This is no reflection on the quality of Kissinger's diplomacy nor on the truth of the reporting by the newsmen running to keep up with him.

It is the description of the game a group of five or six of the 14 reporters along on his Middle East mission play with the serial numbers on dollar bills in their few spare moments — waiting for Kissinger beside the pyramids, in the aisle of the airplane in flight, sitting in the reception room of the Al-Riassa palace in Riyadh.

Occasionally someone wins by unexpectedly telling the truth about his hand.

The Air Force 707 is hardly in the air before Kissinger has donned his light blue traveling sweater and is back among the press seats to joke with his friends among the reporters. In a typical pose, his hand is in his waistband with a thumb hooked over his belt.

One running joke is about Helmut Sonnenfeldt, the State Department counselor who is one of Kissinger's closest advisers. Kissinger likes to pretend that Sonnenfeldt, like Kissinger a German-born Jewish refugee from Nazism, is trying to get his job.

Sonnenfeldt has been measuring his State Department office, Kissinger says, and will probably move in when he is away. Kissinger maintains he probably will not be able to get back into the country.

In Damascus, said to be the world's oldest continuously inhabited city, it had been raining this winter for the first time in four years. The Barada, a stream beginning high in the anti-Lebanon mountains between the city and the sea, is full, and Damascus is the daughter of the Barada which gives life to its oasis. The crops will be good.

In Israel, driving from Ben Gurion Airport up towards the rock strewn Judean Hills to Jerusalem, the orange groves of the lowlands are heavy with unpicked fruit and it sometimes carpets the ground. One reason is that many of the workers were in the army for the October Arab-Israeli war, and some are still there.

At a party in Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy got a noted oriental belly dancer to dance for Kissinger. A pool report by the NBC correspondent described Kissinger's reaction to her dance:

"... a spotlight drilled the smoky cabaret air, and Najwa Fouad undulated out of the darkness in a Scherezaidic costume. If you squinted it was Rita Hayworth. Nobody squinted."

"The movements which followed defied verbal description..."

"Your secretary of state watched intently, almost stolidly, his face masking any impulses which may have made him wonder why Le Duc Tho never brought him to a place like this."

"His lap remained inviolate."

The last is a reference to one time when a dancer did sit on his lap.

Three or four hours sleep a night is almost the maximum for the staff and accompanying reporters and sometimes it is less. Baggage has to be outside of hotel room doors for pickup as early as 5:30 a.m., hours before the plane leaves.

That results in half naked correspondents on occasion, they groggily having forgotten to hold out a shirt, or socks or underpants. You can spot these unhappy creatures climbing on the bus for the airport in the chill of early morning, wearing a raincoat wrapped tightly around them and an uncomfortable smile.

Riyadh, the capital of Saudi Arabia, sits in the middle of the desert. From what we can see, there is little of the old mudwalled town left. Forms of modern concrete construction are rising everywhere, and there are traffic jams downtown at four in the afternoon.

There is more oil here than any place else in the world. There are no lines in front of the gas stations.

In Jordan, the police wear spiked helmets in the old Prussian style.

At the airport, Kissinger does better inspecting the honor guard than he has done on some previous occasions. This time, he keeps step with the music but on exactly the opposite foot as the escort officer.

In Morocco, on a previous visit, he got 50 feet ahead of the escort officer and then tried to shake hands with him as he held an upright saber.

Kissinger left his native Germany as a Jewish refugee boy of 15 during the Nazi years. He has returned many times before, but this is the first as American secretary of state. In his talks with German leaders, however, he speaks English and they speak German. His German is no longer up to precise formulation he explains.

"If I speak to you in English," he said in his airport statement, "it is because my vocabulary when I left Germany was better developed for football than for international affairs."

The plane takes off from Brussels for home. Kissinger will soon appear, in his sweater, and in the back of a game of liars' poker is going on (UPI)

Reye's coverage hit

Your newspaper has become a continued source of informative reading pleasure for our family.

However, I feel I must tell you that, speaking as a Mom who has just nursed four children through the flu (all at once!) I feel your reporters did all of us at home taking care of sick children (and judging from school attendance records, there are quite a few) a real disservice in over-emphasizing the story on Reye's Syndrome (Feb. 19).

I want to know what's happening in the world around me, I use the newspaper as a communication link. I realize the need to keep the public informed on the issues. But wow! I was frightened by the story. When my children are ill I cannot help but be worried.

'C'mon, Gene, back the RTA'

On April 12, 1973, State Representative Eugene Schlickman introduced House Bill 1209 which 1) amended the CTA Act and have them take over public transportation in the six-county suburban area and 2) was to be governed by a seven man board.

Several things puzzle me. Why did he want to extend the CTA to suburbia? Why didn't he get any co-sponsors for his poorly thought out and badly drafted bill?

And most important why didn't he get his bill passed? And finally why is a seven man board superior to a nine man board?

Come on, Gene, please stop flim-flaming the public and get behind the RTA effort. You had your chance and failed. Because your bill failed then all bills should fail? Ridiculous!

The RTA bill was put together by the Illinois Transportation Study Commission

Laud's Crane's foe

I'm pleased to know that Philip Crane finally has some good competition in the person of Betty Spence.

I am also pleased to know that Betty Spence and her family live in the 12th Congressional District.

If she is elected it will be nice to be represented in Congress by someone who lives in the district and not one who merely visits when it is time to campaign for reelection.

It would also be pleasing to be represented by a member of the majority minority.

Local growth backed

Northwest suburban downtowns don't have to shrivel up and die. In fact, from what we've been hearing in recent weeks and months, some are even moving towards a long-overdue revival.

Three communities in particular — Palatine, Mount Prospect and Des Plaines — have ignored the predictors who think all shopping in coming years will take place at Randhurst and Woodfield.

Local leadership, especially with the backing of local banks, is assuring us that at least these three local communities are moving towards high-grade downtown shopping and residential facilities in coming years — and that's good news.

Let's examine the three communities:

—In Palatine, a plan was announced last week that could bring high-rise office and theater buildings, a pedestrian mall and movie theaters and other buildings to the downtown.

A group of Palatine businessmen, calling themselves the New Palatine Committee, has developed the plans, which would require extensive zoning changes.

—The Mount Prospect State Bank is seeking to build a six-story bank building in that suburb. The new building is considered a key to revitalization of that village's downtown district.

—Des Plaines is moving ahead with plans to develop a "super-block," which will include new extensive development in Des Plaines' decaying central district. Groundbreaking should take place this spring.

There shouldn't be anything especially startling in these developments, for they represent the involvement of ordinary local businessmen and bankers, all of whom can provide the expertise and funds to encourage a return to the downtown shopping areas.

Other local communities, however, are all too willing to ignore this development potential. For those that lag behind in such development, shuttered stores and empty streets will be an increasing prospect in coming years.

Attractive local downtowns will never replace regional shopping centers, but they should not be viewed as replacements. Rather, they serve a special need of supplying local goods and services, a service which Randhurst and Woodfield cannot duplicate.

A healthy downtown can reflect a healthy suburb — a suburb which isn't afraid of planned, orderly growth to counteract the possibility of inner city decay. In that manner, we salute Palatine, Mount Prospect and Des Plaines for continuing to grow in an orderly and organized fashion.

How good is senior-citizen housing? Let's look at a complex in Skokie...

"G-12." Tenants of the Cook County Housing Authority's senior-citizen center in Skokie meet for an afternoon bingo game. Bingo and other activities are organized by the Skokie Park District.

THE ARMOND D. KING housing center in Skokie looks like any other modern apartment building. But here you must be at least 62 to get in.

'We're independent here. We don't ask our children for anything...'

by KAREN BLECHA

Click-click-click-click — the Bingo numbers bounced off the sides of the wire cage, spinning, tumbling, maybe spinning out a winner this time, someone who would get a can of spinach if only she could place five numbers in a row.

"I-29." A hand went up.

"Is your hand up or isn't it up, Martha? If it's up then put it all the way up so we can see that it's up. Let's not waste any time. Read back the numbers."

Spinach, soup, maybe a can of V-8 juice, would be her prize. Once trinkets and gadgets were given to winners. But a trinket doesn't mean as much as food when all you've got to live on is Social Security and the grocery prices are going up every day.

It was two o'clock on a Wednesday afternoon like any other Wednesday afternoon for the elderly women gathered in the first floor activities room for a bingo game. A few years ago — 15, 10, maybe only two — these ladies would be back in their own homes thinking about starting dinner for the family or at work counting the minutes until 5 p.m. and quitting time. But today, like many days now, they sit in this room, their sanctuary, keeping busy getting old in a country designed around the young. Playing a game some of them once thought was only for children, Catholics and carnival-goers.

BINGO passes the time for the residents of the Armond D. King Housing Center in Skokie, one of two senior-citizen projects in this area built with federal money by the Cook County Housing Authority for low-income persons at least 62 years old. The other center is in Niles. Currently CCHA has plans for senior housing centers in Des Plaines, where construction is under way, and Arlington Heights, where a site search is on.

CCHA officials say the new centers will resemble the one in Skokie — a 10-story elevator building with 126 apartments filled with 125 female and 18 male residents, a first-floor lounge, activities room, outside patio and arts and crafts room.

The two-year-old building looks like any other average, nonplush apartment building with tiled hallways, a few potted plants in the lobby. A large bulletin board in the hallway reveals the activities scheduled for the week — exercise, book review, social, a big Saturday night dance later in the month. A notice says Abner Mikva, candidate for the 10th Congressional District seat, is coming to speak. His speech should be well attended: senior citizens like to talk about their problems with someone who may be able to do something about them.

Money is one of those problems and it's not surprising residents of CCHA housing prefer a can of soup to a trinket. To qualify for CCHA senior citizen housing, yearly income (Social Security, pension, wages, savings interest, dividends) for a single person can be no more than $4,900; a couple cannot make more than $5,600. Assets (property, stock, bank accounts) can be no more than $15,000.

SENIORS also must be able to take care of their own apartments, although a maintenance man lives in the building for tough repair jobs. At Skokie, a village public health nurse visits every other week to check tenants' blood pressure and weight.

Residents pay 25 per cent of their yearly income as rent which at Skokie ranges from $20 to $75 a month, according to Joyce Dantzer, manager of both the Skokie and Niles projects. Residents also pay for their electricity.

The apartments are not large, only adequate with a living room, bathroom, bedroom and a small kitchen with refrigerator and electric stove. But residents call it home. In the Skokie building, where about 75 per cent of the tenants are Jewish, many doors are protected by a mezuzah, a symbol of the faith. Home wouldn't be home without one.

ALICE HARTSTEIN, 68, and her husband Harold, 70, who moved to the complex when it opened, have a mezuzah outside their door. As far as living there goes, Mrs. Hartstein, fresh from a bingo game, puts it best:

"We are not unhappy here. The rent is right. It is pleasant for us. What else can you ask for with the income you got? We could not afford to live in another apartment paying $100 to $175 a month rent. Here we are able to get along. We are independent; we do not have to ask our children for anything."

The Hartsteins moved to the King center from an apartment in Skokie. Formerly owner of a Chicago newsstand, Hartstein gets no pension. The couple lives on $215.30 a month Social Security and the little money he makes working 24 hours a week in the men's locker room at the Jewish Community Center, only three blocks away. He is one of the few tenants — one of the lucky ones, some elderly say — who could find a job.

The couple pays $70 a month for their apartment, tastefully decorated in blue and filled with pictures of their three daughters, seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Mrs. Hartstein keeps busy with shopping, singing, and visits with a sick sister. She likes to play bingo, although if she wins she gives the prize away "to someone who needs it more." Her husband doesn't have much time for the game with his job, but he likes to sit in when he has the chance. Every summer they spend a few months with their daughter in San Francisco, a trip their children pay for.

They have few complaints about the apartment. The bedroom should have a sleeve for an air-conditioner like the living room does because sometimes it gets too hot to sleep. Mrs. Hartstein thinks the refrigerator should be self-defrosting because "some of the little old ladies" in the building can't do it themselves. There is good bus transportation every day but Sunday, and Sunday is a day many of the tenants want to go out.

OTHERWISE, life is what you make it at the King Center, the couple say. If you want privacy, you can have it. If you don't, you can live that way too. No one is forced to socialize. The biggest advantage to living at the housing center according to its tenants, is the independence. The residents don't have to be a burden on anyone, not their children, not other relatives.

The Hartsteins first heard of the senior citizen housing before it was built, but they really didn't want to move there.

"We didn't like to move in here. We had never taken from the government before and we did not want to. But we could not afford to live anywhere else," Hartstein said. "We didn't like to tell people where we were moving. Some folks would say, 'so you're moving into the old people's home.'"

SATISFIED residents Harold and Alice Hartstein like living in their small apartment at the King center in Skokie. They enjoy the independence and "not having to be a burden" on children.

Once they moved, they adjusted. Once they adjusted, they liked it. Now they would never think of moving anywhere else.

LUCKILY, the Hartsteins got their application in on time. According to CCHA rules, qualified elderly who live in the town where the housing is built have first choice. Then comes parents of the town's residents. Currently, according to Mrs. Dantzer, there are 50 elderly Skokie residents and 600 parents of residents on the waiting list. And the turnover is slow.

Mrs. Dantzer advises eligible Des Plaines and Arlington Heights residents who want to apply do so as soon as the application acceptance date is set, which for Des Plaines should be in the next 60 to 90 days. According to the 1970 Census, Arlington Heights has 3,036 residents 65 and older. A survey taken in Des Plaines says there are 3,941 there. CCHA knows they will have no problem filling the centers.

The Hartsteins know they were lucky to get in and they are grateful. "Thank God for these buildings," Mrs. Hartstein said. "The government should build a lot more of them."

The environment

Thermal pollution rules outlined

by LEA TONKIN

The federal Environmental Protection Agency finally proposed regulations this week to restrict thermal pollution by electric utilities. If the regulations are adopted pending a 90-day wait for public opinion, Commonwealth Edison Co.'s nearby Zion nuclear power stations would be among the first group of power plants where the closed cooling systems would be required.

The standards are drawn up under the authority of the federal Water Pollution Control Act as amended in 1972. Guidelines for 27 major industries, including steam-electric power generation were to be issued by late 1973.

According to Nancy Flowers of the Lake Michigan Federation, White House pressure delayed the proposed standards for electric utilities. A suit was filed by the National Resource Defense Council to prod the EPA into compliance, and the successful suit finally resulted in action this week.

The cooling systems would be required on all electric power generating plants built after July, 1977. For existing plants, a series of deadlines ranging from July, 1978 to July, 1983 is proposed. The twin reactors at the Zion station would come under the 1978 compliance category for plants of 500 megawatts and up.

According to Miss Flowers, thermal effluent discharge has significant effects on the eco-systems in localized areas of Lake Michigan and other bodies of water. There is increasing concern that the proliferation of power plants along the Lake Michigan shoreline may have long-range effects on the overall lake temperature, she said.

More studies are needed to determine specific effects of thermal pollution, she adds. This is seconded by David Rossin, assistant director of environmental affairs for Edison. He contends that there are "no environmental benefits" to be gained in the construction of closed-cycle cooling systems at Edison generating stations.

A total of 28 Edison stations would be affected by the regulations, and the cost for the cooling systems would reach as high as $1 billion for construction and maintenance, he said. Rossin said a 3 to 5 per cent inefficiency would be created in the use of the new systems, and costs would have to be passed along to consumers.

"The lead time on these facilities is three to five years," adds Rossin. He said Edison and a number of other utilities are expected to object to the proposal before the July 31 deadline. Even if the proposals are adopted in their present form, Edison stands a good chance of qualifying for exemptions to the standards, Rossin says. The upshot is likely to be years of delay as utilities seek variances to the EPA regulations.

AEC probes nuclear plants

Commonwealth Edison's nuclear power plants also are drawing a good deal of attention from the Atomic Energy Commission. First, there is the investigation of a "mini-explosion" at Edison's Dresden station near Morris, Ill., last month, and a second recent explosion at its Quad Cities plant near Cordova, Ill. Minimal damage is reported by the utility.

A March 13 hearing before the Atomic Safety and Licensing Appeal Board of the AEC is slated in Bethesda, Md., to consider operating license proceedings for Edison's Zion station, Units 1 and 2, located in Zion. The board had authorized the issuance of an operating license, subject to certain conditions, for the units in October 1973. Arguments on exceptions to the decision, based on safety and environmental issues, will be heard by the appeal board.

The AEC is also issuing for comment the draft of an environmental statement for Byron Station nuclear plant, units 1 and 2. The units are proposed for construction in Ogle County, Ill., by Edison. The commission seeks comment on the statement from government agencies and the public. After consideration of the comments, a final statement will be issued regarding issuance of a construction permit. Comments should be sent by April 15 to the Deputy Director for Reactor Projects, Directorate of Licensing, U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, Washington, D.C. 20545.

Picking a college—sometimes it's harder than winning a title

Ed Fitzsimons has a problem. Before it's resolved, he might find it even more challenging than the state swim meet.

In case you haven't read it already or tuned in late for the delayed TV broadcast Saturday, St. Viator's star swimmer won the 50-yard freestyle state title. He also barely missed winning the 100 freestyle and anchored the 400 freestyle relay to a second.

Such accomplishments are just dreams to hundreds of Illinois swimmers: goals that will never be achieved.

When he succeeded in the 50, "Fitz" recalled thinking about "going to practice and wondering whether it was worth it. When you're up on the starting block (for the award ceremony), you know it's all worth it. I was pretty happy."

For the present, the heavy, continuous, sometimes boring and almost always exhausting workouts have ceased. Now Ed Fitzsimons is faced with a mental workout — picking a college.

When you consider the cost of a college education (about $26,000), you'd think a young man would leap at the chance for an athletic scholarship. But Ed has always wanted to attend the University of Notre Dame. However, believe it or not, this famous college doesn't have swim scholarships.

Still, two brothers and a sister are now enrolled with one brother — Rick — on the varsity swim team. Ed would love to join him.

Besides no scholarships, there are other hangups for Ed. He's a member of a large family for one thing — nine children in all. Even though his father is a biochemist, it's been difficult helping the oldest children with college expenses, according to Ed.

And then there's the difficulty of being accepted by this very selective institution. According to Irish head swim coach Dennis Stark, "before the girls were on the scene, the school turned down four for every five who applied." Now the odds of becoming a member of the 8,500 enrollment is even tougher. (Ed is presently carrying a 3.6 grade point average out of a possible 4.0.)

Finally, the large number of college scholarship offers along with the thought of adding more burden to his parents may eventually change his mind. There is a certain prestige in receiving a full ride scholarship, too.

"I don't know if I could turn that down or not," says "Fitz" of those offers. He's received several already, with more to come in the next couple of weeks. "If it was a good school, it would be hard to turn it down."

"I want to go to Notre Dame. If it didn't accept me, I'd go to the schools that have contacted me."

John Fleck, Ed's coach the last three years, is naturally hoping he'll go to a school with a solid swimming program. Fleck thinks his prize pupil will be a "good 200 man, 100 and 50 man" in college. "His 200... there's a lot of potential that hasn't been reached yet."

"I feel very privileged to have coached him," says Fleck. "It took me a while to really get to know him."

"He's very quiet. I think swimming's done a lot for him. It's helped draw him out quite a bit."

Having talked with Ed a year ago after he led his team to the Suburban Catholic Conference title, I can attest to his becoming more outgoing.

As far as future goals are concerned, Ed says he'd "like to swim in the nationals."

If he goes to Notre Dame, he might become the first national qualifier in the school's history.

One thing's for certain — whoever lands this 6-3 flash will have caught a whopper... And a winner.

Four survived. Four more put their uniforms away for another year.

That was the story last night as regional tournament play continued for Herald area basketball teams.

Arlington, Prospect, Fremd and Notre Dame picked up the victories and will return to action Friday evening in the championship action.

CARDS DECK FALCONS

Arlington reeled off seven straight points toward the end of the first quarter and was never headed again as they thumped Forest View 61-48 to advance to the finals of the Falcon-hosted regional tournament.

In what was somewhat less than brilliant floor play for both sides, the hosts added in a poor shooting game and the Cardinals were fully ready to capitalize on this shortcoming via the rebounding of Dan Donahue. The triumph also made amends for a defeat dished out by Forest View to Coach George Zigman's crew at the very outset of the conference season.

Donahue went on to score 20 points, teaming with guard Steve Loughman to provide most of the ammunition in the Card attack. It was Donahue's free throw that broke open a 10-10 opening stanza deadlock, while later close-in bank shots by both Donahue and Loughman provided the guests with a 17-12 first period lead.

The Redbirds padded their lead to 10 by intermission and appeared on the verge of settling the issue for good early in the third quarter. Forest View missed their first six shots from the floor while Doug Betters canned a pair from the base line, Donahue chipped in another free toss and Loughman drove for two, providing Arlington with a 40-23 bulge.

Then the guests went cold, however, and the Falcons climbed right back into contention. Craig Brinkman and Larry Monroe poured in 15 points between them over a four-minute span, Monroe scooping in a layup on a nice feed from Mike Meyer to cap the rally and put their team within range, 42-36.

Arlington was back on top by 10 when the fourth quarter started but turned the ball over twice and the hosts moved right back within seven. The Cards countered at that point on consecutive baskets by Jerry DeSimone, Dennis Gaare, Donahue and Donahue again to pretty much sew things up.

Monroe paced the losers with 21 points and Brinkman had nine. Loughman bagged 16 for the Cards, who will now tangle with Wheeling for the fourth time this season in the 7:30 Friday title tilt.

KNIGHTS WIN THRILLER, 61-58

Prospect senior Mike Bzdelik came off the bench and pumped in 15 points, including a clutching free throw with three seconds remaining, to eliminate Elk Grove, 61-58, and send the Knights against Hersey in the Hersey Regional championship Friday at 7:30.

Bzdelik's heroics overshadowed new single-season scoring champion Ken Pollitz whose 10 points gave him 621 for the year and wiped out the 13-year-old area record of 617 by Palatine's Ron Kozicki.

Bzdelik, Prospect's third guard, was summoned when Al Black was whistled for his fourth personal foul with 1:29 still remaining in the first period.

The six-footer inspired a thrilling stretch drive by the Knights that found him canning a 15-foot baseline jumper to forge Prospect ahead, 57-56 with :50 left and then icing the decision with the first-half of a bonus situation at the :03 mark.

Elk Grove, relying on its quickness and defense, jumped on top, 11-4, midway through the opening stanza and Black's loss to the Knights should have made the Grenadiers' job easier.

But with frontliners Paul Withey, Doug Bonthron and Bob Thompson controlling the board, Bzdelik penetrated for four points before the half, added four more in the third quarter and finished with eight over the final eight minutes.

The Grenadiers, paced by Pollitz' 19 and 16 more by Greg Kelley, bowed out of the state tournament with a 14-12 record. Withey's team-leading 21 points will carry the 9-13 Knights into the championship.

FREM D ROLLS

Fremd won its opening round regional basketball game at Schaumburg Wednesday, 75-62, over crosstown rival Palatine by employing an effective half court press on defense and controlling the boards at both ends of the court.

Fremd's victory enables it to move on to a Friday title meeting with Conant, winner over Schaumburg on Tuesday. Leon Kasuboske's Vikings are now 10-15.

Ron Finck's Pirates, who ended the season at 9-11, fell behind quickly, as Fremd's Paul Weber, Doug Mize and Bill Frank built a 9-0 lead in less than four minutes on classy playmaking and accurate shooting. Palatine never got closer than six after that.

Viking guard Ken Hanks was an important part of the offensive attack, setting up numerous scoring plays and contributing 11 plays to himself.

But the big factors for Fremd were Frank and Mize, who gathered the bulk of the rebounds, and Weber, whose all-around play sparked the win. The three Vikes combined for 50 points — Frank led with 18 and Weber and Mize had 16 each.

Palatine stayed close on 10 first-half points by Mark Mara and some long range shooting by Joe Lillibridge, but they trailed at the half, 35-24.

Fremd's press forced countless Pirate turnovers, leading to several easy fast-break layups for the Vikes. The lightning attack increased the nine-point lead to 18 in a matter of moments in the third quarter.

A late comeback attempt by Palatine sputtered when Lillibridge and Jim Arden fouled out.

Mara led all players with 19 points, Arden had 12 and Lillibridge 8.

NOTRE DAME WINS EASILY

Maine South against Notre Dame — that's the championship pairing for 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Class AA Notre Dame Regional.

The host Dons advanced by winning, 60-47, Wednesday over Maine West before a small crowd.

With Clem Naughton scoring a game high 20 points, the Dons were never behind. They led, 10-2, after the first quarter. West's only points were a field goal by Dan Myska. Naughton had six of Notre Dame's first 10 points.

The Warriors made a strong run during the third quarter, outscoring Notre Dame 20-12. But they still trailed 40-32 entering the last quarter.

'Sky King'—a queen to cadet divers

by K. C. MASON

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — Capt. Maxine "Micki" King has proven her courage in competing under difficult circumstances and she has kept her sense of humor against 4,000-to-1 odds.

Capt. King, known as "Sky King" to the cadets she coaches on the Air Force Academy Diving team, knows becoming an Olympian takes lots of practice and even more determination to try, try again.

The 29-year-old winner of the gold medal on the three-meter board at the 1972 Olympics in Munich said:

"I'm more deeply involved in athletics as a 'has-been' than I was when I was a competitor. I get an equal amount of satisfaction in coaching and watching the fellows improve. I use them as a replacement for my own achievements and feel lucky I can fill the gap left by withdrawing from competition."

Capt. King also is the first woman administrative officer in the history of the athletic department at the 4,000-cadet academy. As the assistant business manager of the department, she handles everything from selling programs at football games to scheduling events for non-revenue sports such as baseball, wrestling, swimming and diving.

She said something amusing happens every day, but the men don't treat her any differently because she is a woman.

"I don't want them to act different because of me," Capt. King said. "Diving and athletics should be a release from their school work and I don't want them to feel inhibited. They don't hide their emotions if they mess up a dive."

"I'm immune from women's lib problems such as equal pay because of my career in the Air Force. I get paid the same as men with the same education, qualifications and rank. The Air Force is good about that."

Why the Air Force?

"It was the right place at the right time sort of thing," Capt. King said. "As a senior in college at the University of Michigan it was easy to drift along and not worry about my future."

"When I graduated in 1966, I knew I wanted to go to the Olympics but knew I had to work to subsist. The Air Force came to me, stationed me where I could get the best coaching and agreed to be my sponsor. I had a job and a valuable, responsible career and at the same time could continue my diving."

The diving for Micki started at the Pontiac, Mich. YWCA, when she was in her early teens.

"I entered my first competition when I was 15," she said. "That's kind of late by today's standards but soon I was practicing two or three times a week."

Michigan diving coach Dick Kimball kept her going in college.

"By the time I was 18, I was in two-a-day practices and learning all the dives I needed to become a national competitor," she said. "My first title was on the 10-meter platform at the National AAU championships in California my junior year."

Then came the international events.

"I was 24 years old at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico," she said. "That wasn't young age wise but I was totally new to such a huge and magnificent event. That kind of wows you and it's easy to get wrapped up in the splendor and not compete well."

"In Munich, there wasn't anything to surprise me and I wasn't snowed."

Micki shed her courage at the Mexico City events. She made her last dive in the finals with a broken arm.

"I was going into my second to last dive when I miscalculated a take off and struck the diving board with my arm and broke it," she said. "I wasn't able to pull my last dive off very successfully and so dropped from first to fourth place."

Capt. King said her trainer and coach knew her arm was broken but let her finish anyway.

"I had been training for it since I was 18 years old," she said. "That's a number of years to dedicate to something and it never occurred to me not to dive. The Olympic caliber in an athlete means you don't give up when you're that close."

She laid off a year before deciding to train for the games.

"I found that I missed not diving and that I still had a lot of diving in me," she said. "It just killed me to watch meets so I decided I didn't just have to watch."

The determination paid off with her gold medal in 1972.

Micki is now one of four women instructors at the Academy — the other three teach languages — and said her Air Force job still makes her happy.

What about women cadets at the Academy?

"I think women being enrolled in the academy is a way off — perhaps two or three years," she said. "There is no way that one or two girls are going to get in and be students but they might make it in the size of a squadron 100."

"It would be an interesting development to say the least but I think there would be problems adjusting. The guys here have different goals in life other than marriage and family. Any wishy-washy girl who comes here looking for a husband just isn't going to make it."

MSL coaches name all-conference team

by PAUL LOGAN
Swimming Editor

The Mid-Suburban League coaches named 13 athletes to their all-conference swimming and diving team earlier this week.

Leading the list was Charlie Dunn of Arlington, the first four-time winner of this honor in the five-year history of the league. Dunn won a league title every year of his prep career.

Scott Bolin, also a senior, was right behind with his third unanimous honor. His freshman year, Bolin was an honorable mention selection.

Also repeating from last year were Joe Nitch, a junior, of Arlington and Brent Bolin, a sophomore from Elk Grove.

Joining this select team of unanimous choices were also Doug Schlak and Kevin Redig of Forest View, Paul Lindquist and Bill Modica of Wheeling, Jeff Speakman and Tim Brennan of Hersey, Jim Henry of Elk Grove, Brad Busse of Prospect and Kiernan Mack of Arlington.

Landing honorable mention billing

were these athletes — Chris Tague and Bob Larue of Hersey, Dan Woodruff of Buffalo Grove, Chris Prinslow of Prospect, Dixon O'Brien, Pete Wroblewski and Rob Carstens of Arlington and Jeff Slack and Ken and Tom Stahke of Rolling Meadows.

Palatine, Arlington win in hockey play

Arlington and Palatine were the only local winners last weekend as playoffs continued in the Chicagoland Metropolitan Hockey League.

With Jeff Gardner scoring four goals and two assists, Arlington swamped Hersey, 8-1. Gardner has nine goals in his last two games.

Dan McSweeney scored one goal and assisted on two others as Palatine blanked Fremd, 3-0. Other Palatine goals were by Mark Langer and Mark Dietrich.

Both the Arlington and Palatine wins were recorded in division A games. The other A results had Deerfield beating Glenbrook South, 4-0; and Lane Tech shutting out Prosser, 6-0.

In AA games, Maine South beat Rolling Meadows, 5-1. Russ Riendeau scored the Mustangs' only goal. Notre Dame was a 3-2 winner over St. Victor. The losers goals were by Bob Bettis and Thompson.

Millner, Heldt earn second team berths

The Skyway Community College Conference announced its all-star basketball teams this week, and a pair of Harper Hawks were selected to the second squad.

Mike Millner and Steve Heldt were the only two Hawks to be named out of 16 players honored on a first team, a second team and a list of honorable mentions.

The top testimonial went to Leo Grimes of Waubesa, who was selected as the league's most valuable player. Grimes averaged nearly 28 points per game as he led his team to the co-championship of the Skyway Conference.

Five others were picked to the first team — Tom Kalsow of Elgin, Steve Pappas of Mayfair, Keith Bolton of Lake County, and Leamon Allen and John Tencredi of Triton.

Pappas was the league's top scorer with a 25.3 average and Allen led in rebounds with 19.7 in 14 games.

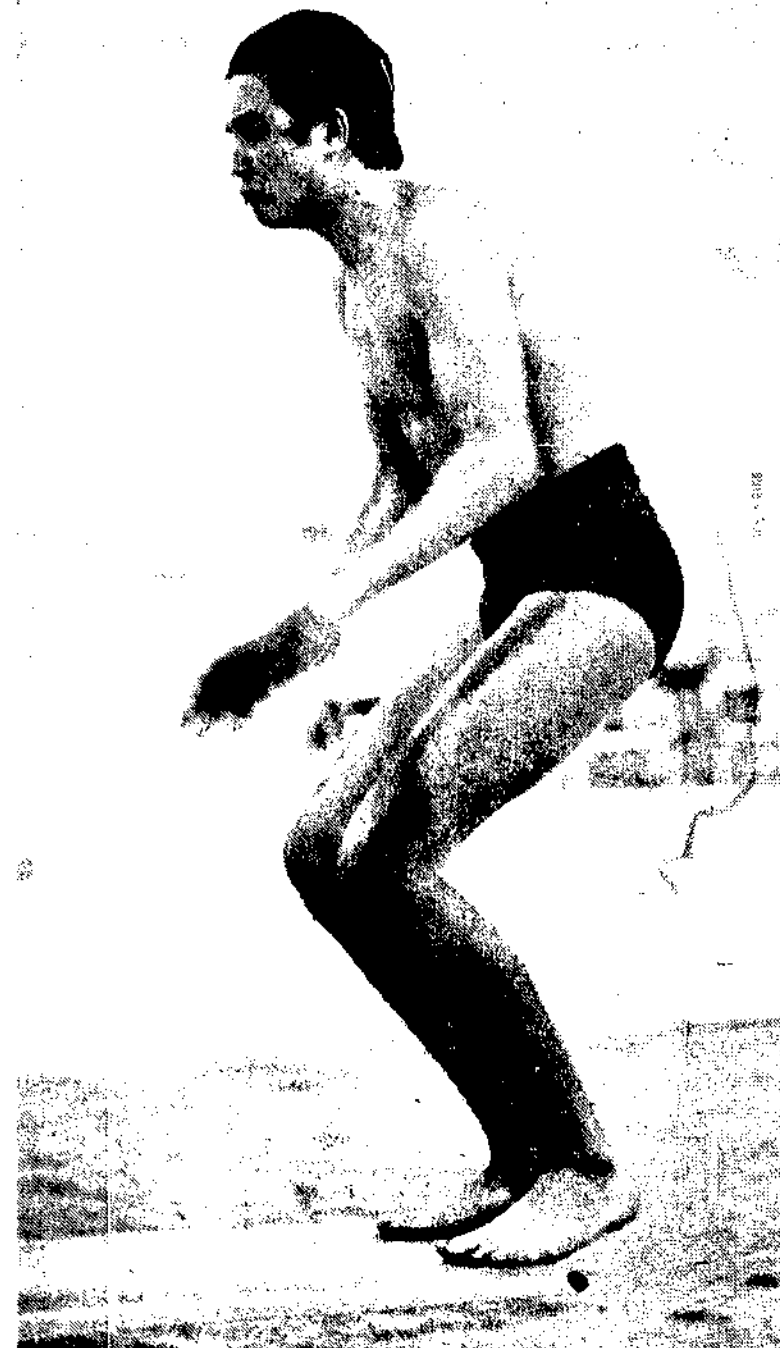

On the second team were — Millner, Heldt, Dan Welter of Oakton; Dale Grosinsky of McHenry, and Bob Hall of Waubesa.

Five players were given honorable mention — Rich Bingaman of Elgin, Tony Reibel of Oakton, Lender Coney of Triton, Buzz Soderman of Lake County, and Randy Blazier of McHenry.

Heldt, who made honorable mention last year, is a Hersey graduate, and Millner attended Elk Grove.

Wildcats, Hawks win to reach title contests

Wheeling and Maine South enjoyed big third quarters Tuesday evening and advanced to the championship games at area regionals.

Shortly after halftime, St. Viator's Bill Foreman hit two quick baskets, cutting the Wheeling margin to only 10.

The Lions' crowd erupted as it had done for all the team's 20 points. Although St. Viator had only a 2-19 record coming into Forest View's regional basketball tourney Tuesday, its fans seemed to still believe in an upset. Besides, last year's Lion team nearly turned the trick at Wheeling in the tourney, barely losing 40-39.

However, both teams went cold over the next couple of minutes. Then Wildcat Bob Westrich found the red-hot hand. He connected for seven of Wheeling's final 11 baskets of the period as the heavily favored Wildcats pulled away for good to a 20-point lead. They maintained it the rest of the way for a 77-57 victory.

Besides hiking the record of Coach Ted Ecker's team to 18-6 on the season, it also lifts the 'Cats into the championship game Friday at 7:30. They'll play the winner of the Forest View-Arlington game, and the title action will be broadcast on WWMM-FM, 92.7.

Westrich, more noted for ball hawking and defense, nearly surpassed his season high (21) with 20 points.

He was followed by George Kange (17), Bill Pickler (12), Scott Keenan (10) and Bill Kenney (8). Kange's total is impressive for he missed nearly the entire second period because of fouls.

Leading the Lions was 6-foot-8 sophomore Glen Girard with 18. Right behind was St. Viator's and the Suburban Catholic League's top pointmaker — Terry Keenan — with 15, six below his average. Paul Kastner had 10 and Steve Hansen chipped in eight points.

Keenan had the job of shadowing Keenan. The Lions' hustling senior leader had a tough night, both trying to score and in hitting the floor. He shook off the bumps and bruises to score 13 of his points in the last three quarters.

MAINE SOUTH NOW 22-1

Maine South, the state's No. 1 ranked team, advanced to championship play in the Notre Dame regional by defeating Maine East, 77-45, Tuesday night after a sluggish start.

The Hawks, who improved their season record to 22-1, will play the winner of last night's Maine West-Notre Dame game. The title match is set for 7:30 p.m. Friday.

South built a nine-point lead after the quarter, 17-8, but didn't look impressive in building a 29-20 halftime margin.

Then came the second half, and it was an entirely different picture. The Hawks allowed Maine East to draw within seven points, leading 35-28, before scoring 16 straight points.

Only a basket by East's Mark Berns at 0:14 interrupted the surge as Maine South scored 18 of the final 20 points during the third quarter.

The Hawks led, 53-30, after three periods, then outscored the Demons, 24-15, during the final eight minutes. Defeat left Maine East with a final season record of 9-15.

South's offense was paced by 17 points from guard Tim Bopp and 16 by senior forward Pete Schmelzer. Senior wing John Reilly added 12 points, including eight during the opening period. The Hawks' only other double figure scorer was Pete Boesen with 10 points. Denny Kladis scored eight.

Keith Larson topped Maine East's attack with 11 points on five field goals and one free throw. Derrick Brown scored eight points, all during the last quarter. Berns, Mark Mahoney and Mike Cohen scored six points apiece.

Billiards champion coming to Des Plaines for show

Jimmy Caras, five time World's Pocket Billiard Champion, will appear Sunday March 17, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., in a Pocket billiard exhibition at Brunswick Billiard Mart, 613 West Golf Road, Des Plaines.

Brunswick's billiard expert will first demonstrate billiard fundamentals, concluding with an exhibition demonstration of his famous skill and trick shots. Afterwards, he will give personal instruction to those who request it.

Caras, at 17, earned the title of "Boy Wonder of the Pocket Billiard World" by defeating Ralph Greenleaf in an exhibition match in 1927. Greenleaf was then world billiard champion.

In 1936, he won the World's Champion Pocket Billiard title. He did it again in 1938, 1939 and 1949. In 1967 he captured the U. S. Pocket Billiards Championship for his fifth title. He shares in the world's record high run of 127.

Two movies produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were made on Caras' trick shots. The films played in theaters throughout the world.

On the nationally televised ABC "Wide World of Sports" presentations, Caras beat Willie Mosconi 125-82 for the 1962 National Invitation Pocket Billiards title. He repeated in 1963 with a 125-26 victory over Mosconi.

Woodfield Wildcats falter

The Toronto Tri-Stars outskated the Woodfield Wildcats, defeating them, 6-3, Saturday night, despite two more goals from Wildcat Darrel Skramstad. The Woodfield winger has figured in six of his team's last nine goals.

On Saturday, the Stars started quickly and had a three-goal lead before the Cats could score. Woodfield was killing a penalty when Mike Hall broke away toward the Star goalie. His shot was stopped, but the rebound went to Skramstad, who slapped it into the net.

The Stars scored again to go ahead, 4-1, but the Wildcats got one back as LaCroix passed the puck from behind the net to Saltzman, who quickly put it behind the Toronto goalie. The first period ended 4-2, Stars.

The second stanza began in a flurry as the Cats pressed deep in Star territory. Hall passed to Bob Zimmerman, who in turn sent the puck to Skramstad. The youngster notched his second tally of the game and it was 4-3. Even though Woodfield outshot the Stars 16-2 in this period, they still trailed by two, 5-3 at the end of two periods.

The third period was a defensive test for Toronto as they tried to hold onto its lead. The Stars were up to the challenge, even scoring an insurance goal into an empty net.

"88¢ FOR PADDING. 88¢ FOR INSTALLATION. THAT'S NOT A BARGAIN, IT'S PRACTICALLY CHARITY."

It's like having a brother in the carpet business.

When you buy jute back carpeting, the one thing most people don't realize is that the price you pay isn't all you pay. Unless padding and installation are included (and they usually aren't) you can add about another $3.50 a square yard. And that can turn a bargain carpet into not such a bargain carpet. But for this sale, the pad and installation cost only 88¢ each a square yard.

ALL OUR RUBBER BACKED CARPET IS ALSO REDUCED FOR THE 10-DAY SALE. SALE ENDS SATURDAY, MARCH 9th.

Fire nearing training camp site decision

Chicago Fire owner Tom Origer will make a training camp site decision sometime this week for his World Football League entrant.

Origer told the Herald Wednesday morning that his options are Northern Illinois University, Lake Forest College or Maryville Academy in Des Plaines. Lake Forest is the former summer home of the National Football League St. Louis Cardinals.

Origer said cost and convenience to all interested parties will be the overriding factors that affect his choice.

Dave Anderson was next as he scored unassisted in the second period. Anderson scored his second on an assist from Loessi. Anderson completed his hat trick with his 3rd goal in the 3rd period with assists from Loessi and Muratori. Tony Loessi then closed the scoring with assists from Brian Bartlett and Anderson. Bartlett and Andy McElman played strong games on defense to help John Hunter in the Jaycee goal.

Palatine Jaycees 4, Flames 4

Palatine played one of their better games as they tied a very strong Flame team, 4-4 at Woodfield. John Hunter and Tom Ahern shared the goalkeeping for Palatine and both played a very good game. Mike Muratori helped the Jaycees cause with his 5th hat trick of the season. Muratori put Palatine on the board first as he took a neat pass from Doug McBride and went in alone on the Flame goalie, beating him from 15 feet out. Rick McElman also assisted with Palatine behind J. J. Tony Loessi put the puck past the goalie on passes from Anderson and Peterson to close the margin to 3-2. The Flames scored again to go up 4-3. Muratori then took a pass from Eric Achterberg and scored on a slap shot. Starting the 3rd period it was 4-3. The equalizer was scored as McElman passed to Muratori on the left side who in turn set up Anderson for a shot and Muratori poked in the rebound for the tie.

Tom Smith shows his car and takes home trophies

The great legion of Corvette sports car owners admire their multi-thousand dollar beauties with adoring reverence and change nary an item on Chevrolet's most famous product.

But not Tom Smith.

Starting with a new front end and working all the way back to different taillights, Smith has spent $14,723 on his Vette. That includes the original price tag.

You could literally call Smith, of 1633 N. Chestnut, Arlington Heights, a Showman. That's because he shows his modified 1972 Corvette at custom auto competitions.

His rookie adventure into this glimmering sport occurred last December at McCormick Place. Smith took a third among 12 cars in the Semi-Sports Custom category. Classes are determined by the number of alterations from the stock model.

In February, at the International Amphitheatre, the Smith Corvette took top honors. He competed against some of the same cars that were shown two months earlier at McCormick Place.

"The only way you can win money at the shows is to take top custom car," Smith said. "But the cars that win the real money are the ones that travel to all the shows and have 40 or 50 thousand dollars invested in the cars and displays.

"I can't compete with them," he said, "but it sure is fun just to win the trophies."

Smith decided to customize the Vette front end when his headlights began sticking closed in cold weather. He designed the body modifications which extended the front end seven inches. Dick Scully of Wheeling performed the fiberglass and custom paint work. It took nearly 18 months.

Other changes included a front end spoiler and large rectangular headlights imported from Brazil. A black wire mesh grille and exaggerated air ducts behind the front wheels were added.

The rear bumpers were cut off and rechomped. The rear end was lowered three inches and all Chevrolet or Corvette emblems were removed. Enlarged fender flares were added front and rear.

A performance option included chrome Hooker headers. Smith mounted Good-year tires on Ansen Sprint semi-chrome mag wheels.

He designed in 1971 Pontiac tail-lights and 1967 Corvette stock parking lights.

GT racing mirrors, which match the car, are another change.

Twelve coats of stock Vette blue paint were put on and each was hand rubbed. On top of that went four coats of violet pearl mist overlay lacquer, also hand rubbed. Then, two coats of clear lacquer and over 85 coats of Super X wax.

"I still have the interior to change but I won't do that until this summer," Smith said. "I plan to put crushed blue velvet on the door panels, console and the dash.

"We'll have handstitched button tufted naughyde on the seats and door panels. Also, thick, heavy shag carpeting on the floor and section behind the seats."

With his show car in "limbo" so often, Smith needs something to drive. So he's got another Vette, a 1966 white convertible with 427 engine and four-speed transmission.

Oh, his show car sees the road occasionally, "when the weather is real good," Smith said.

But you can bet this is one car that won't be driving around on any ice or snow!

Smith's Corvette — a winner in Semi-Sports Custom

York rolls past Knight trackmen

The Prospect track team took it on the chin Tuesday in a dual meet with York, but coach Joe Wanner discounted the significance of the 92-16 score.

"This kind of meet gives the team the best competition they've got," the Prospect head man said. "The big advantage is that it shows your team exactly where they stand. The purpose is not to beat the weakest team you can find, but to do your best against strong teams."

The Knights managed their first place finishes, one second, and a pair of thirds in competition with a potent York squad. Rich Reithal led the way for Prospect with a top spot in the 50-yard dash (.05.8) and a third place in the 880 (2:07). Rich Van Den Bussche captured first place in the high jump with a leap of six feet. Mike Rekowski was a runner-up in the long jump (19-2) and Rich Podgorny was third in the two mile run (10:25).

Arlington frosh 2nd in tourney

Paul Wei, a freshman at Arlington High School, finished second in the boys 14 and under championship of the Chicago District Tennis Association.

Wei lost to Wilmette's Bob Frei 6-4, 7-6 in the finals. He reached the showdown battle after disposing of Bruce Breschia 7-6, 6-2.

The two weekend tourney was held at the Oak Brook Racquet Club. A field of 32 started play.

10-cent issue will honor poet Robert Frost

The U.S. Postal Service will issue a 10-cent commemorative stamp honoring Robert Frost, American poet and four-time winner of the Pulitzer Prize.

First-day ceremonies will be held March 26, the centennial of Frost's birth, at Derry, N.H. The stamp continues the American Poets series. Previous issues have honored Edgar Lee Masters, Emily Dickinson and Sidney Lanier.

The Paul Calle design of the Frost stamp is based on a photograph taken by David Rhinelander of Hartford, Conn. It will be printed in black on the Cottrell press with 50 stamps to a pane and one plate number.

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send their requests to Frost Stamp, Postmaster, Derry, N.H. 03308, enclosing the proper remittance, which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

WHEN IT BECAME apparent that new stamp supplies would not be delivered in time to meet the heavy Christmas demand for postage, the island of St. Vincent, W.I., overprinted three of its current denominations to meet the need. Those overprints — 30-cent overprinted on 5-cent value; 40-cent overprinted on 8-cent value, and $10 overprinted on $1

by Bernadine M. Rechner value — are now available, by mail, in limited supplies, from St. Vincent Philatelic Service, General Post Office, Kingstown, St. Vincent, W.I.

Your remittance should be in East Caribbean (E.C.) funds (one E.C. dollar equals approximately 50 cents U.S.) and should be sent in the form of an international money order or bank draft. Personal checks will be accepted but must include an additional $1 (E.C.) to cover bank charges.

THE UNITED Nations Postal Administration will participate in three philatelic exhibitions during the month. They are:

- March 14-16, BEPEX, Paramus, N.J.
- March 29-31, WESPENEX, White Plains, N.Y.
- March 30-31, SEAPEX XI, New Bedford, Mass.

EVEN THOUGH it's costing 2 cents more for first class surface mail, the new regular issue 10-cent U.S. stamps ("Crossed Flags, Mr. Zip and the Jefferson Memorial") are a refreshing change.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Lancelot wins with stout heart

Sir Dinadan, the worst player among the knights of the Round Table, had one saving grace. He could be depended on to lead his partner's suit.

Thus, he slapped his five of hearts on the table as soon as the bidding ended. The 10 was played from dummy.

Lancelot, the peerless knight and bridge player, was sitting East. He saw that he could take his king of hearts and knock out dummy's ace, but there would be no way for him to score tricks with any low hearts. Thus, the contract would surely make if he played his king.

He also saw that he might lose his king, if he held it back, but what was an overtrick to a man who could take on nine knights at the same time. Lancelot wanted to defeat the contract and played his nine of hearts.

South won the trick and led his seven of diamonds. If he had guessed to lead a club he would have made five notrump, but he guessed wrong and led a diamond.

Dinadan went right up with his ace. Then he dutifully led a second heart to establish the rest of the hearts for his partner.

Now the best South could do was to cash the good spades and diamonds and concede the last four tricks to Lancelot.

Cop needn't give you a break...

Q. I always thought the police were required to give a driver 24 hours during which he could come up with a valid driver's license and avoid a ticket for driving without it. Isn't that the law?

A. Before issuing a ticket for failure to produce a driver's license, a sympathetic policeman may give a local resident an opportunity to show up at the police station with a valid license that was inadvertently left at home. However, this is an accommodation to a citizen and not required by law.

The law requires that a driver shall have a valid license "in his immediate possession at all times when operating a motor vehicle" and be prepared to show it on demand by a policeman. A ticket for his failure to do so can be, and usually is, issued on the spot. However, the charge is dropped if the driver shows up on his day in court with a license that was valid at the time of his arrest.

Q. Is it illegal for a person to raise bees in his backyard, in a residential area?

A. Not necessarily. According to the Illinois Department of Agriculture's Division of Apiary Inspection, the raising of bees is governed by local ordinances. Check with your municipal officials.

Large cent good long-term investment

Collecting coins

by Mort Reed

The "Encyclopedia of U.S. Coins" shows a total of 149,841,186 large cents minted from 1793 through 1857. The Red Book values given here establish the large cent as an impressive long term investment with the greatest gains being made in pieces in top condition.

By contrast, the first United States one cent piece was roughly 50 per cent larger than today's penny and weighed 3 1/2 to 4 times as much. On the coin market the value comparison is even greater.

A Type I with a "Chain" reverse and America abbreviated "Ameri" carries a value of $2,300 to $2,600 for a specimen in very fine condition. It is the first of two Flowing Hair devices struck from hand engraved dies in 1793.

THE SECOND IS Type II with a Wreath reverse valued from $1,200 to $1,500 in the same condition. This variety displays a three-leaf sprig or a "strawberry" leaf between the date and truncation of the neck.

Type III, also issued in 1793, bears a well-groomed head of Liberty with a staff and Phrygian slaves cap leaning over the left shoulder. This coin in very fine condition will command $2,500 to $3,000, depending on the amount of detail shown.

From 1796 through 1807 the Type IX bore what is commonly referred to as a "Draped Bust." Its market values run from $65 to $2,500 depending on the date and condition.

Since most of these early coins were struck from hand engraved dies each issue shows an individual characteristic that makes it a collectors' specialty. Some involve double struck motifs, doubled dates, variations in hairdos and the reverse wreath and two different sizes in the one-hundredth value fraction under the wreath.

FROM 1808 through 1814 the Type V took on still another facial appearance. This time the designer reversed the direction of the "Classic Head" and encompassed it with 13 six-pointed stars. The reverse is not unlike that of previous issues except for the fact that the wreath is made up of one continuous branch rather than two sprigs tied at the bottom.

The profile of Type VI is "Coroneted" and was coined from 1816 through 1839 but leaving much to be desired in the way of beauty. The chinless Liberty was the work of Robert Scot and William Kneass. Two sculptors known for their outstanding artistic ability but it definitely was lacking in this instance.

Retail value of this specimen runs from $150 to $2,500, depending on the date and uncirculated condition.

Type VII is the "Braided Hair" variety and last of the large cent issues, coined from 1839 to 1857. Sculptured by William Kneass, this profile is a slight improvement over the Type VI.

Depending strictly on which of the many varieties called for under uncirculated condition, this coin will retail for $100 to $700.

We have some news to share with our neighbors.

Kemper Insurance has grown a lot since we moved here to Long Grove two years ago. In fact, we've outgrown our name.

Insurance alone simply doesn't fully describe us anymore. Because, in addition to writing all types of insurance, we're in reinsurance, investment advisory services, banking, consumer finance, real estate and safety consulting.

So now we've changed our name to the Kemper Insurance and Financial Companies. And the publicly-held corporation which is a part of these companies is no longer Kemperco. Now it's Kemper Corporation.

We also have a new corporate symbol and a new look to our advertising; all designed to reflect our spirit of service and growth.

Many of you have helped us grow. Even more of you will be helped by our growth. It will hopefully mean more jobs for people in this community. More business for local stores and services.

And, of course, we'll continue to actively support such important community activities as Toys for Tots, Dobe School, Omni House, United Way, Explorers and Junior Achievement. In addition, we're planning other programs which will enable us to serve the community even better.

We've grown in more than name. We've also grown in the ability to help all our neighbors.

We're with you for the long ride

"Pueblo." Rerun of an excellent teleplay about the situation surrounding the seizure of the U.S.S. Pueblo by North Korea in 1968, and the subsequent investigation by American authorities.

The Waltons. An impoverished book salesman gets the family's last $3 as down payment for a set of the Harvard Classics, and, instead of sending the money to the publishers to bind the contract, uses it to buy a doll. 7 p.m. Channel 2.

Flip Wilson Show. With Lena Horne, Bob and Ray, Tony Randall. 7 p.m. Channel 5.

HOLLYWOOD — Cathy Lee Crosby, no relation to Bing, is a spectacular blonde beauty who used to beat Billie Jean King regularly on the amateur tennis tour and now has focused on an acting career.

She plays the title role in "Wonder Woman," a 90-minute television special beaming March 12, one of four pilot shows for ABC's 1974-75 season.

She is tall (5 feet 8) and athletic. Cathy is also extraordinarily feminine and single.

"I HOPE THIS part turns out to be a female James Bond in action, and a real woman at other times," said Cathy. Her strength is her sensitivity.

"I've done my own stunts in the show because I want Wonder Woman to be stylish and feminine. She's not aggressive. And she should be cat-like in her movements, not muscular."

In all the long years of television no actress has managed to popularize a physical woman who manages to out-muscle men, no matter how villainous the heavy. But Cathy thinks she can overcome the odds.

"I think Wonder Woman's kinetic sense of motion makes her different," she said. "She doesn't attack anyone. She tries to avoid physical confrontation. Physically she only protects herself."

"But I think I'm prepared for the physical scenes. I still play tennis whenever I can. And I water ski, sky dive, swim, shoot and ride horseback.

"I GAVE UP tennis and decided against joining the pro tour because I didn't like the life. When I was 15 years old I used to beat Billie Jean often enough. We were, and are, very close friends. I think she's super. I just wanted something more out of life."

Acting promised more. But these days it takes more than astonishing beauty and eye-popping long legs to make the grade in movies or television.

Cathy discovered that fact of life when casting directors turned her away, telling her she was too beautiful for the roles they had in mind.

"I tried to overcome that by wearing the wrong makeup and showing up for interviews with my hair in tangles," she said. "But directors told me they wouldn't believe me as a drug addict, for instance."

SHE DID MANAGE to find roles in a couple of movies, "The Laughing Policeman" and "Call Me By My Rightful Name," along with a handful of television shows.

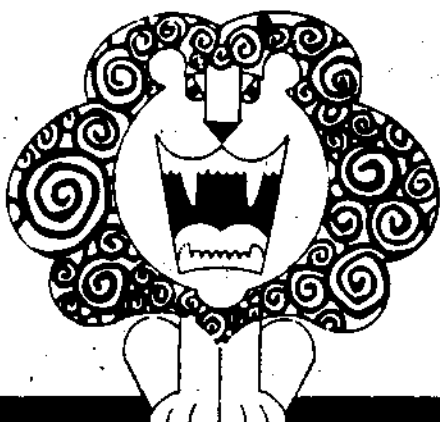

"Wonder Woman" represents her first opportunity to star. The part leaves a lot to be desired. But it is a chance for national recognition.

"I'd like to see this show become a series," she said. "The main reason is that the salary is very good and a lot of people will see me in it. I'm worried about becoming too closely associated with Wonder Woman — like Adam West did with 'Batman.'"

"But if I'm good in it, maybe I can open some doors for movies and other television projects."

"It isn't very realistic playing an intelligence agent who came from a mythological island of amazons," Cathy concluded. "But at least it would be my own show."

Featuring this week:

Robert W. Starck, Realtors

A tour of a multi-office real estate organization like Starck, Realtors, reveals many exclusive customer service benefits.

These benefits start with the president of the firm, Robert W. Starck, who is one of the few Realtors in the area to hold the professional designation of Certified Residential Broker.

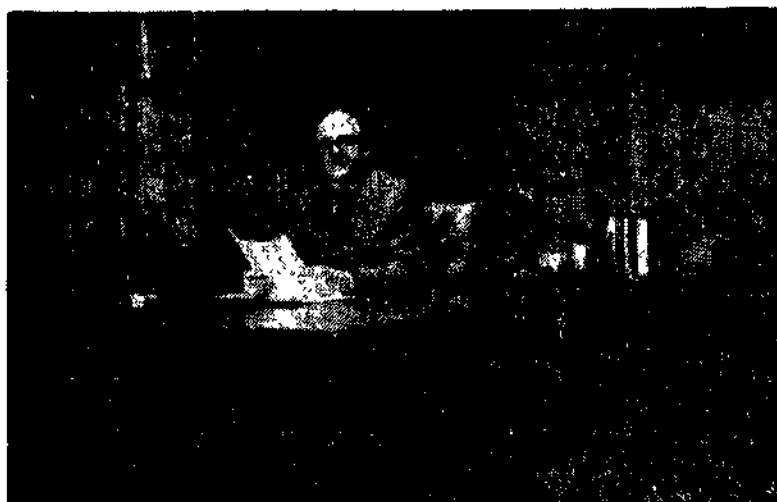

The branch office sales managers have all earned their broker's licenses. They have helped the firm acquire many professional accreditations and awards for excellence in real estate sales during its 14 years in business.

The Arlington Heights office has a special Relocation Department for the orientation of transferees moving into the area. Colored slide and video-tape presentations, brochures and complete housing information are available.

A closed circuit teletype system maintains close communications among Starck offices, and keeps all salesmen up-to-date on new listings. Special merchandising brochures on properties are often printed in the firm's own print shop.

Back-lighted shadow boxes in each office display current listings. "We feel homes have to be properly presented to buyers and this is our method of accomplishing that purpose," Starck said.

As a member of RELO Inter-city Relocation Service, Starck joins with 700 Realtor members having more than 6,000 offices and 600,000 salesmen to assist transferees. Starck enjoyed more than $2.7 million in added home sales in 1973 as a result of this membership. Robert Starck is the past treasurer and is currently a member of the board of directors for RELO.

Robert W. Starck, C.R.B. and president of the firm, has a bachelor of science degree in marketing from the University of Illinois. Starck, born in Palatine and a resident of Mount Prospect for 23 years, is a past president of MAP multiple listing service.

A well-equipped airplane is employed by the firm to take aerial photos of real estate, pick up customers at Midway or Meigs and to save time when business meetings are scheduled within a radius of 800 miles of Palwaukee Airport.

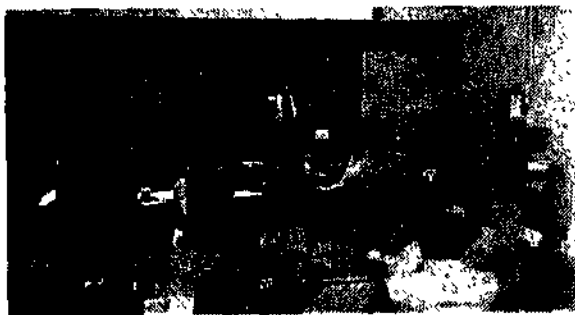

Extensive direct mail and customer-related publications are utilized by Starck. Relocations kits (top) of facts on housing and area data are made available to transferees by the Relocation Department. A general real estate information booklet (bottom) is one method of contact with past customers, corporations and the public.

Starck feels privacy is important to customers and has provided (top) quiet customer counseling areas and private offices for this purpose. Salesmen's offices and secretarial facilities (bottom) are separate from the customer areas in all offices.

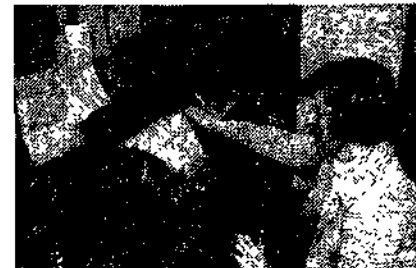

Key functions at Starck, Realtors, are handled by these persons. Philip Kirsten and Starck (left) are accredited appraisers to assist corporations, banks, trust departments and attorneys. In charge of the Closing Department, a unique separate department with Starck, is Helen Boddy (center), a 12-year veteran with the firm. Legal, administrative services and accounting are headed by Andrew P. Starck (right) while Mrs. Jerry Ferguson oversees the computerized accounting bookkeeping and statistical records.

A well-equipped training room in the main office in Mount Prospect will accommodate up to 60 people. New salesmen receive extensive sales training and then continuous re-training as new sales methods evolve. A video tape system is used for role-playing practice sessions and taped lectures.

Starck, Realtors, is the north-west suburban representative of RELO Inter-city Relocation Service, a network of 700 Realtors nationwide and in several foreign countries. As a result of this membership, Starck was sent over 400 transferred families in 1973.

Instant communication is maintained with a closed circuit teletype system that ties together all offices. If a salesman lists a home at 10 p.m., he is able to notify all offices simultaneously by the automatic system which prints out all the facts immediately at each terminal.

Since 1960, a leader in high-quality real estate assistance.

SOLVE THE PUZZLE

There is always at least one right buyer for every house. The problem is to find him. With a hundred REALTOR® members of MLS looking for him, he is much more likely to be found quickly. So why limit yourself to one REALTOR®? List your property with a Computer MLS member and solve the puzzle.

Sheffield Park enters final construction

Levitt Residential Communities, Inc. has begun the final phase of its Sheffield Park subdivision in northwest suburban Schaumburg. The community offers 70 different homesites and seven models from which to choose.

According to Bell Federal Savings of Chicago's yearly survey, Schaumburg led the home building field for the second year in a row with more than 2,000 building permits.

When completed, Sheffield Park in Schaumburg will have 1,158 single-family homes. The community opened in June of 1969.

Included in the price of the featured models which begin at $37,990 are front lawns, oven and range, dishwasher, garbage disposer, carpeting in living and dining rooms and bedroom hall and stairs, deluxe kitchens with hardwood cabinets, stainless steel sink and range hood, patio doors of insulating safety glass with screen, deluxe woodwork and stained stair railings, asphalt drives and concrete walks, ceramic baths with built-in vanities and underground utilities.

Optional items include central air conditioning, masonry and pre-fabricated fireplaces, basements, deluxe appliances, built-in home music system, built-in water softener, storm doors, gutters and downspouts on some models, garage door openers and triple track storm windows.

In addition to Sheffield Park, Levitt is currently building six subdivisions in the Chicago area. They are Deerpath in the north suburban Vernon Hills, Strathmore Grove in north suburban Buffalo Grove, Sheffield Towne and Sheffield Manor both in northwest suburban Schaumburg, Old Farm in west suburban Naperville and Greenbriar in southwest suburban New Lenox. Sheffield Estates, a new subdivision, is planned for Schaumburg also.

Realtors attend training sessions

Eighteen realtor associates from various Rich Port, Realtor offices, recently attended an eight-day training school at the corporation's executive offices in LaGrange.

Among those who attended were Linda Lewison and Delores Roche from the Arlington Heights office and Fred Tock from the Schaumburg office.

Three Starck salesmen complete G.R.I. course at Peoria institute

Five members of the Robert W. Starck & Co., Realtors, sales staff recently attended the week-long Realtors Institute of Illinois, held in Peoria.

Nancy Bartlett, a sales associate in Starck's Mount Prospect office; Bill Cowin, sales manager for the Hoffman Estates office, and Edna Stewart from the Arlington Heights office successfully completed Course III, thereby earning G.R.I. designation.

Successfully passing Course II were Jim and Irene Markgraf, who serve clients from the Schaumburg office. They will return to the Institute next fall to finish their training.

Three one-week sessions comprising a total of 92 classroom hours of study are required for the G.R.I. The subjects covered range from financing to appraising to the legal and tax aspects of real estate. A comprehensive examination is given at the end of each of the three week-long sessions.

Ms. Bartlett, who resides with her husband Don in Mount Prospect, has been associated with Starck for 5 years. Cowin lives in Hoffman Estates, with his wife June and he serves as trustee for the Village of Hoffman Estates. Ms. Stewart presently resides in Arlington Heights with her husband Don. The Markgrafs live in Hoffman Estates.

Realtors take committee posts

More than 1,000 Realtors and executive officers of state real estate associations and local real estate boards assumed their committee positions during the 1974 mid-winter meetings held in Atlanta by the National Association of Realtors. The national association represents 500,000 real estate specialists who subscribe to its strict code of ethics through their membership in state associations and local member boards.

In announcing the appointments, Joseph B. Doherty of Andover, Mass., newly-installed president of the National Association of Realtors, emphasized the impact which programs developed by these committees will have upon the progress of organized real estate.

Doherty pointed out that the recent expansion of the association's membership to include 400,000 Realtor-Associates, who are licensed sales associates of Realtors, has made the National Association of Realtors the largest business association in the world. He pledged to the 80 million property owners of America the use of the association's new organizational and financial strength on behalf of their interests.

Among the national issues of pressing concern to Realtors, Doherty cited the energy crisis, the shortage of mortgage money, proposed national land use laws, and the oppressively high level of taxes on real property and the maladministration of laws governing them. He promised that these and other issues affecting Realtors and their clients would receive the immediate attention of the newly-appointed committee members.

Members of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors are: Jack Keller of Arlington Heights, Membership Committee; H. Edward Smith of Arlington Heights, Educational Policy and Planning Committee; Ralph H. Martin of Des Plaines, Political Affairs Committee; William B. Sebastian of Des Plaines, Realtor Public Relations Committee; John O. McCabe of Mount Prospect, Multiple Listing Policy Committee and Professional Standards Committee; Kenneth M. Gunsteens of Park Ridge, Education Committee.

The fine art of finishing

For some people buying and finishing unfinished furniture is almost a way of life. There are some fine pieces of furniture available at department stores and lumber yards waiting for you to make complete. And some pieces that are not so fine.

Still, the relative cost is less than buying finished furniture and for less money than you might think you can fit out a recreation room, outfit a child's bedroom, even furnish a small apartment.

Remember that your time and material are worth something so don't waste them on junk. Buy well constructed pieces. Whether the results are good looking or just presentable depends on the care with which you do the job.

WHEN YOU BUY, make certain you know how much work you will have to do. Some furniture in this line comes unassembled. Some of it is partially assembled. If you are not too handy with a hammer, nails and screwdriver then look elsewhere. If you are looking to save money you might be ahead if you assemble the furniture yourself but make sure the saving is sizeable enough to warrant the extra work.

If you do put it together yourself, check instructions and material lists thoroughly. Lay out all the pieces on the floor to make certain they are all there. Arrange them so that the best surfaces will be on the outside. Use the kind of construction the manufacturer recommends — generally a combination of finishing nails and glue. Set nail heads by driving them below the surface with a nail set. Then fill the tiny holes with wood filler and sand.

That assembled furniture that you pull out of the big box looks all ready to paint or varnish. No matter how smooth it looks it needs sanding before finishing. Start with number 2/0 sandpaper and finish with 4/0. Brush off sawdust and wipe clean with a cloth slightly dampened with turpentine.

Trim pieces, knobs and handles should be removed and finished separately. Start finishing from the inside, doing the hard-to-reach surfaces first, then the outside.

Do it yourself

IF YOU ARE painting the pieces consider enamel or at least a semi-gloss finish, especially in a child's room or the kitchen. This kind of surface is easy to wash. Apply an undercoat as the paint manufacturer recommends. Brush with the grain and apply evenly. Sand lightly when dry, then put on the finish coat.

A natural finish allows the grain of the wood to show through. Use varnish, lacquer or shellac. The furniture will look better if you deepen the color of the wood before applying the finish. Use an oil stain which colors the wood without hiding the grain.

A color chart will give you an approximate idea of what you will get. Depth of color is controlled by applying thinly and wiping off quickly. Apply with a brush and wipe off with rags. The longer it stands on the wood the deeper the color. End grain will soak up too much stain so seal the grain with shellac first.

ONCE THE PIECE is stained, rub down with a clean cloth, then with fine steel wool.

Fast-drying lacquers are hard to apply with a brush. They should be sprayed on. If you brush them you will have to work fast, applying in long even strokes and not going back over your work, lifting the brush at the end of the stroke.

The same technique applies to using varnish as well.

Work in a clean, dust-free, well ventilated room. Apply several coats, rubbing down with steel wool in between once the surface is thoroughly dry. The final coat should be rubbed down with rubbing compound or pumice to cut the gloss. Finish with a good coat of furniture wax.

Association of realtors hears national speakers

William N. Walker, General Counsel of the Federal Energy Office (FEO), recently warned the nation's largest petroleum suppliers not to discriminate against independent marketers.

Walker said that suppliers will be held strictly accountable for allocating scarce oil and gas supplies under Federal Energy Office regulations on a fair and non-discriminatory basis.

Speaking before the National Association of Realtors in Atlanta, Walker stated: "We have received complaints that some major oil companies are giving preferential treatment to company-owned outlets at the expense of independent marketers."

"FEO rules make it clear that discriminatory practices are not allowed and FEO is serving notice that it will enforce its regulations where necessary to insure against disruption of supply or inequitable treatment during the period when the allocation rules are first being implemented."

Walker stated he is mailing letters to the nation's 23 largest oil companies reaffirming FEO's determination to strictly enforce its regulations. He stated: "Suppliers have an affirmative obligation to provide equal treatment to independent marketers, branded or unbranded, as well as to their own outlets. If the timing and method of a supplier's program for implementing the allocation requirements under FEO regulations has the effect of discriminating against any category or group of purchasers, the supplier may be subject to sanctions under the law."

Walker also called upon Realtors to set an example for the rest of the real estate industry in responding positively and constructively to the energy crisis.

Also addressing the Realtors was Douglas M. Parker, Special Assistant to the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development for Energy Affairs, who alerted his audience to be prepared for determined action on the part of the Administration to minimize the disruptive effects upon the national economy of the energy shortage. Parker promised the Realtors that President Nixon's new budget, which will be released later this week, will contain convincing evidence of this determination.

Parker also reported that the energy shortage is not, at present, a major constraint on residential construction across the country, in spite of local shortages of some building materials, such as brick, because of lack of the fuel necessary for their manufacture.

The HUD spokesman said that his office was carefully reviewing the possibilities of solar energy as a source of home heating and power. "It now appears possible," Parker said, "that, within the next few years, solar energy can present a realistic and economically viable alternative."

Kole Real Estate holds seminar

Salespeople from Kole Real Estate, Ltd.'s Arlington Heights and Palatine offices met recently to review the legal aspects of real estate.

Speaking to the group were Marshall P. Patke and Elliott T. Price of Arlington Heights, who reviewed Illinois real estate broker-lawyer accord and how its various provisions affect the real estate salesperson.

Standard contract forms, escrow, closings, surveys, condominiums, and protection of utility bills, taxes and insurance were some of the subjects covered in the evening discussion and question-and-answer period.

Ed Nowak, Kole manager in Arlington Heights, and Mel Andraschko, manager of the Palatine office, arranged the seminar.

Among those present were Steve Helman of Palatine and Marilynne Costello of Rolling Meadows, members of Andraschko's staff. Nowak's sales team in the Arlington Heights office, where the meeting was held, includes Glen Pledge, Barbara Wirtz, Abe Sojodi, Jo Haase, Lee Shindle, Gene Golemo, Jessie Schroeder, Vince Pennino, Murray Breitberg, Ida Scherer, Tom Murdock, Irene Bourrel and Norma Cajka.

firm who achieved outstanding sales production during their first full year of service. The awards were presented at the company's annual sales dinner recently.

Hot water heating saves fuel

Although one out of every five Americans moved to a new address last year, more than twelve billion dollars was spent on home improvement, and according to the National Better Heating-Cooling Council, even more will be spent this year.

Because of the energy situation, it is expected that a larger than usual proportion will be spent for equipment to cut down on fuel consumption — such as insulation and storm sash.

One area which has generally been overlooked in home improvement is heating modernization, and an increase in the number of boiler and furnace replacements is expected.

For homes with hydronic (hot water) heating, the Council notes that the new boilers will save up to 25 per cent in fuel consumption. Although smaller than the older boilers, they are far more efficient. They are styled to resemble attractive appliances and will blend with any decor.

Since heating is required in almost every home improvement project, the Council recommends the installation of low, wall-hugging baseboard heating panels. Located on outside walls, they will form a barrier against the cold and drafts and assure uniform warmth throughout the room.

Converse Rubber consolidates

Plans for major capital expenditures for the purchase of modern materials handling equipment and for the construction of a new office building next to the Converse Rubber Company Distribution Center in Charlotte, N.C., have been announced by Neil S. MacKenna, vice president, marketing, Converse Rubber Company.

The company spokesman stated that a Distribution Center in Lawrence, Kan., will be closed by September, 1974, and that this operation will be consolidated into the Distribution Center at Charlotte. It is anticipated that the consolidation will result in additional employment opportunities.

When B. F. Goodrich, early in 1972, decided to cease footwear operations, Converse took over the Lawrence, Kan., operation along with the Distribution in Charlotte and a manufacturing plant in Lumberton, N.C. At the time, officials stated that studies were being made of the company's entire distribution system. In the interim, Converse has executed a long term lease for the Charlotte facility which, assures a continuity of operations and employment opportunities at Charlotte.

As part of its overall plan, Converse last year improved its west coast distribution operation when it moved into new facilities in Reno, Nev. Within the last few months its Chicago Distribution Center moved to new quarters in Elk Grove Village.

Converse is the manufacturer of the famous All Star basketball shoe and other athletic, recreation and leisure footwear. It is a subsidiary of Eltra Corporation, a major manufacturer of electrical, sports, and communications products with sales in excess of $600 million annually.

Northbrook community designed for couples with grown children

THE HERALD Thursday, March 7, 1974 Section 3 — 15

It's an unusual concept — a community tailored to fit the lifestyle of the upper income couple whose children are grown.

The sales of Lakeside Terrace homes at Ancient Tree in Northbrook is proving that the concept works. Since Nov. 1 when the sales program began, 11 homes priced from the mid 80's and worth $1.1 million have been sold, nine of them in the first month and two since Jan. 1.

The profile of buyers matches the pattern established by Bluet-Valenti Developers, Inc. before construction began.

Here's how the profile shapes up: ages are from 47 to 62 with an average of 53, 60 per cent head their own companies or are self-employed professionals, none have children living at home and all visited Ancient Tree six or seven times before making a decision.

"There has been a gap in providing variety housing for the mature family which often has had to 'make do' with a house really designed for a younger family in a community of younger families or an apartment or condominium in the city," says Bruce Bluet, spokesman for the developer.

The Lakeside Terrace houses look like single-family homes, but they are built attached to one another and grouped in a U-shape in the manner of an Old World courtyard.

The first homes in Ancient Tree are being constructed on a portion of Sportsman Country Club in Northbrook. Additional phases have been planned to encompass the entire 272-acre country club area, which would produce a community of some 1,600 homes.

Planning for future phases of Ancient Tree provides for the golf course, tennis courts, a pedestrian path system for hiking, bicycling, or leisurely walking as well as a new luxurious club house. Some of these planned facilities will be available as general residential amenities and others on a membership basis.

BELEDERES ON ROOFTOPS, an optional feature of Ancient Tree's Lakeside Terrace homes, can be reached by a spiral staircase from the second story of the home. The room has windows on all four walls and makes an especially bright library or hobby area.

Ram Golf to move to Elk Grove site

A $1,550,000 loan for a period of 27 years has been arranged by Republic Realty Mortgage Corporation.

The security is a 150,000 square foot industrial building located on a 290,000 square foot site at 1501 Pratt Boulevard, Elk Grove Village.

The entire building has been leased to Ram Golf Corporation by Exchange National Bank of Chicago, trustee, for the owner.

Wheeling development finds demand for two bedroom, two bath condos

The Lucerne unit at the Lake of the Winds condominium recreation complex, developed by Meister-Nelburg Company, Inc. has shown that demand is strong for two bedroom, two bathroom condominiums.

Of the $525,000 total sales since the official opening of the models, eleven sales have been for the Lucerne model which is priced from $28,950 to $33,950.

The first building in the 20-acre community of four, low-rise condominium buildings will be ready for occupancy in June. The community is located between Cornell Avenue and Waterman Lane, South of Hintz Road, at 1470 Harbour Drive.

The recreational complex has two tennis courts, a 2,000-square-foot outdoor swimming pool and the Lake of the Winds bath and racquet club. Membership in the Club is included in the purchase price of the condominium.

In the Tudor Tradition...

Almost exactly a century ago, Mark Twain's house in Hartford, Connecticut, was completed. The planning of the house required nearly a year, and the result has been referred to as "part steamboat, part medieval stronghold, and part cuckoo clock."

The house pictured above does not reflect Mark Twain's time — the age of the steamboat. Rather, it bespeaks the prosperity of the Tudors, at which time the fortified medieval house had lost much of its importance. All of the twelve rooms, in addition to the reception hall with a cathedral ceiling and the Great Hall with the minstrel's gallery, are of generous dimensions. Furthermore, you will find the detail work, Tudor fireplaces and traffic patterns of considerable interest.

We will build this house for you on your land, or suggest appropriate sites, for a guaranteed price of $138,000. However, although this low price will be in effect for only a limited time, this residence would also prove to be an excellent investment at a much higher figure.

If you are interested in building this house or would prefer some other exceptional residence of Tudor, French or Georgian origin in the price range of $125,000 and upwards and would like to make the building process a pleasant experience, we invite you to call us for an appointment.

Happy birthday to everybody!

THEY HAD A BLAST — everyone from Flo Dvorak's 3-year-old godson, Matthew Adams, to the 76-year-old Aunt Minnie, with clowns, singers, performers, relatives and friends all sharing the fun with a busload of Maryville youngsters. What a happy way to celebrate your own birthday and everyone else's un-birthday. What sweet music to hear 30 kids chant in unison, "Two-four-six-eight, Who do we appreciate?" — and know it's you!

by ELEANOR RIVES

There's a plaque on the wall of a room at Maryville Academy in Des Plaines that reads, "It's nice to be important, but it's important to be nice."

Last Saturday at a clubhouse in Schaumburg it was hard to decide who was nicer, the two halls of Maryville boys, ages 6 to 12, who came to help celebrate a birthday, or the woman who invited them to share in her celebration.

Flo Dvorak, who lives in Schaumburg's Weathersfield subdivision, just turned 30 years old and doesn't care if the world knows it. Instead of lighting 30 candles, she lit up the faces of 30 Maryville youngsters with a rollicking all-day spree that would delight partygoers of any age.

"IT WAS A dream of mine," said Mrs. Dvorak, an effervescent brunette who breaks into smiles at a word or a glance. "When you have no children of your own to support or put through school, you have a tendency to become self-centered. I'm so fortunate. I have so much to be thankful for. I thought it was time I started helping others."

Flo has a particular empathy for the children of Maryville. Her own mother, age 52 when Flo was born, died shortly after her birth. A devoted aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Navilio, became "Mom" and "Dad" to her, making it unnecessary for her to be placed in a children's home.

AS FLO'S birthday approached, she knew she wanted to do something nice for children — maybe take a small group to the zoo. The more she talked about it with friends and relatives, the more the idea mushroomed until, to her surprise and pleasure, it seemed everybody got into the act.

Maryville got into it by furnishing a bus for transportation, a driver, Sister Magdalen to chaperone the boys and two young men to assist her.

Leonard Naumann and his daughter, Christine, of Schaumburg, and Bob Younglove of Streamwood got into it as clowns, complete with circus make-up.

Tony and Louis Christopher, Flo's cousins, did their part in filling each hot dog and hamburger order individually as the jubilant youngsters bounced from the bus into their Tri-Village Drive-In.

SANDY REIMANN and the Schaumburg Festival Theater group, though in the midst of a major production, took time to get together a children's program. At the clubhouse they performed "Peanuts" character skits, pantomime, monologue, verse and guitar numbers. The young audience was captivated by the feats of Jody Baran of Streamwood, assisted by his sister, Ramona, who produced fluttering white doves out of thin air.

Marian Waesche of the theater group had no difficulty enlisting the talents of a singing group she directs, the "Breaking Out for Jesus" group from St. Columbus Episcopal Church in Hanover Park.

MUSIC LITERALLY filled the air from both the performers and spectators side. Spectators even became performers. Young Anthony kept easing himself in and out of the acts like a real trouper, and, with five other Maryville youngsters, led their favorite number, "Pass it On." Everyone joined in a final chorus of "What the world needs now is love, sweet love."

Flo's friends at Kole Real Estate in Rolling Meadows, where she is employed, caught the "party spirit" too, helping with clown make-up and costumes, lending a hand at the party, furnishing birthday cake and balloons, even sticking around for clean-up.

CLUTCHING CLOWN ice cream cones in one hand and birthday cake in the other, the Children of Maryville, table by table, sang "Happy Birthday to Everybody" because, although it was Flo's birthday, it was everybody's "un-birthday."

Which meant presents — kites, yo-yos, tops, balloons and candy for all.

Shirley Adams of Roselle did some fast-action camera work recording the whole event on film. It's destined to be a future Maryville movie.

The boys at Maryville had grown to know Flo Dvorak as a friend in the weeks before the party as she visited with them, told them of her approaching birthday and asked them to help her have a good day.

"It's great to feel wanted and needed," she said. "That's the feeling I was trying to give the children."

They responded by making her a birthday gift, an orange and green pottery dish.

SHE TOLD THEM of her work in real estate, how she helps people buy and sell houses and asked them each to draw a picture of a house, to be judged at the party and awarded prizes.

Lester, first prize winner, did a meticulous job — a two-story house with curtains in its dormer windows, mountains in the background, a rocking chair on the porch and "Flo Dvorak" carefully inscribed on the mailbox. Peter won second prize because he included part of his neighbor's house too. Conrad's magnificent dwelling, third prize winner, bore a "For Sale" sign and selling price of $345,105. The three boys won "togetherness" prizes — a mitt, bat and ball.

"Invite me over some day and I'll play a game of baseball with you. Invite me over to fly kites, too," said Flo — and she meant it. And they will.

The novelty's worn off

A woman as maestro

by GAY PAULEY

At first, the music critics took note of Eve Queler as a woman in a man's world — a conductor. Some commented on her handsome legs and brunette good looks.

But it wasn't long until they wrote critiques strictly of her ability to lead opera-orchestra groups and stopped mentioning her sex. "The novelty," she said, "wore off."

All of which is the way Maestra Queler wants things, although she's quite aware that she is helping to break ground for other women conductors.

"The image of the male as leader is slow to change," she said. "We've always just accepted it. I don't push. I can wait. No artist is really patient, though. You have all this music in you and want to make it. I've been allowed to grow."

And that she has done, to the extent that Harold Schonberg of the New York Times recently called her "a fine conductor, which will come as no surprise to those who have been following her work in the last few years."

Mrs. Queler, wife of attorney Stanley Queler and mother of two teen-agers, once conceded she might get more engagements if she were a man — "It's the impresarios who have the prejudice, not the public. The public always has been supportive."

EVEN SO, HER first opera "La Boheme," in 1967, was sung on the stage of New York's Public School 44. "I offered that orchestra to every concert hall in the city," she said of those early years of discouragement.

But matters have improved steadily. So far this year, Mrs. Queler has conducted at Carnegie Hall with the Opera Orchestra of New York, of which she is music director, doing Bizet's "Les Pêcheurs de Perles" with the Met's Nicolai Gedda as soloist.

She then made her debut at London's Royal Festival Hall leading the New Philharmonia Orchestra.

And this week, she returned to Carnegie Hall with the U. S. premiere of Donizetti's "Parisina D'este."

The women's liberation movement has helped her to the extent of "making the public aware," she said. But she is not going to let her sex be a distraction for audience or musicians.

"I'M NOT LOOKING to exploit, to sell tickets," she said. "I don't want to be a fashion plate on stage. Once I wore a sleeveless dress and one critic said my arms worried her."

She's usually in a subdued burgundy or black, a simple dress or evening-type pantsuit.

The musician's been a busy one since childhood. She studied the French horn and piano at New York's High School of Music and Art, attended the City University of New York, and did two spells at the Mannes School of Music, the latter time to concentrate on conducting.

It was at City University she met her future husband — "he was graduating and I was a freshman still wearing braces on my teeth," she recalled. "I've been married since I was a schoolgirl."

The couple's two children are Elizabeth, 14, and Andrew, 17, both talented musicians and at one time singers with the children's chorus of the New York City Opera Company.

Mrs. Queler gained further experience with the American Institute of Orchestral Conducting, with the St. Louis Symphony, and said her biggest break came when she spent a year as associate conductor of the Fort Wayne, Ind., Symphony — "They immediately asked for opera too."

SHE BECAME THAT year a commuting musician still steering the household in New York — a spacious old apartment on the city's upper West Side.

There, what was once a maid's room now is her studio, "right by the kitchen if I'm food watching."

"I have only part-time help," she said. "I do the laundry, pick up the kids' clothes, cook."

"But I get back 20-fold. Without a family who believes in me as a musician, I couldn't have bucked the world."

Safety Council warns

'Don't rattle the baby'

The problem of the battered child takes a new turn.

This time, it's the matter of innocent injury, rather than the angry, explosive and deliberate battering which a parent does and which has been of increasing concern among medical and legal authorities.

"Don't rattle the baby," headlines the National Safety Council (NSC). Babies are more delicate than we realize and even a heavy-handed burping could damage permanently.

NSC refers to skeletal and brain damage, mental retardation, even death as too often sequels to some innocent things parents do with children.

"Many well-intentioned parents think nothing of giving a child a 'good shaking,'" says Dr. John Caffey of the University of Pittsburgh, "even though the cumulative brainbruising may be grave."

He included as dangerous heavy-handed burping, tossing the youngster in the air, "riding the horse" on a grownup's shin, "cracking the ship," or somersaulting a baby by grasping its wrists from between the legs.

Also possibly harmful were too springy a baby-bouncer, the action of a powered rocking horse or a jolting ride in car, on a motorcycle or bike.

Another possible cause of damage, said Caffey, is recurrent exposure to the snowmobile.

NSC quotes Caffey's writing in a recent Good Housekeeping.

The council, in its current newsletter from the women's department, also delves into effectiveness of the federal flame-retardant regulation for children's nightwear.

It is not a signal for parents to "sleep" on the job of safety, NSC says. It urges that parents study the sleepwear regulation, know its limitations and "exercise vigilance" in selecting safe wardrobes.

The federal regulation covers only sleepwear in sizes 0 to 6x, manufactured after last July 29. Pajamas, nightgowns and robes made before that time still may be sold legally. Further, NSC says, "the vast majority of children's garments are still not flame resistant and care must be taken to keep the fabrics away from sources of ignition."

• Ask for a flame retardant garment when purchasing the sizes 0 to 6x sleepwear. Inspect the label yourself, don't rely on the clerk, and in the laundry, follow the practices suggested by the manufacturer to preserve the retardancy.

• Remember that all non-retardant fabrics will burn under certain conditions so keep children away from such as space heaters, stove, matches, cigarettes and barbecue fires.

• Avoid loose fitting, frilly garments. Close fitting, tightly woven, smooth surfaced and heavy fabrics are the best safety buy. Wool is comparatively flame resistant. Synthetics are usually less flammable than cotton, linen and rayon. Synthetics, however, if ignited, can melt and form sticky, syrupy substances that can produce deep localized burns.

• If clothing ignition does occur, teach your child never to run: running only speeds the burning process. Instruct the child to drop to a horizontal position to keep the flames away from the face and to roll on the floor or ground to smother the fire.

If others are present, they can extinguish the blaze by wrapping the victim in rug, blanket or other heavy fabric. Or use water to snuff the flames.

• And if a final reminder for safety were necessary, the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) reports that 3,000 to 5,000 persons die and 150,000 to 250,000 are injured each year from burns associated with flammable fabrics.

Technology

It only makes women work longer

by GAY PAULEY

We working wives knew it all along. Now comes a detailed study of the workload carried by today's female of the species, showing that it is much heavier despite all the hoopla about labor-saving devices.

In short, we're working harder than out mothers and grandmothers. Our family lifestyle has become what one sociologist called "the harried leisure class." The technology of the '70s has not really given us more leisure time.

Present day hours spent in household work compared with half a century ago were examined by Dr. Kathryn E. Walker, who is leading a continuing study of the subject at Cornell University. She says that when home economists first began to study the length of a woman's work week 50 years ago, they found it to be 42 to 49 hours.

Today, the employed woman works a 66 to 75-hour week at combined job and household duties.

"It is probably true," she says "that as we are released from one household job by new products and new services, we choose to give that released time to the things we were not able to get done yesterday or that we had not done as well as we wished."

For instance, because it is so much easier to wash clothes in an automatic washer than on a washboard, we now wash clothing and linens more frequently than we used to and total time spent on laundry has not decreased perceptibly. The same analogy could be worked out for many other kinds of housework.

MISS WALKER, in examining the "why," says the tendency to do more work each week seems to be related to the fact that families have many more goals that they used to — some achievable by doing more household work and some achievable with the extra money earned in outside employment.

In today's affluent world, we encompass more of what we want to do — more acquisitions to care for, more rooms to clean, a bigger yard to mow and plant and prune, more clothes to care for, more foods to choose from and more exotic recipes to prepare.

It is here that she quotes Staffan Burén, a Swedish reference to us all as "the harried leisure class."

Dr. Walker says her findings are based on talks with some 1,400 families selected at random from a large population stratified by rural, urban or suburban location, number of children, age of the youngest and oldest child and, in families without children, the age of the wife.

THE RESEARCH showed the average amount of time spent on housework by employed women ranged from four to eight hours daily. The average for the nonemployed homemaker ranged from five to 12 daily.

She asks whether this means the employed women are more efficient because they have time pressures. "We have no answers," she says. "We can only speculate."

A nursery is provided, and refreshments will be served. The public is welcome.

Gardening catalogs offer gadgets too

Americans spend four million dollars a year on their gardens, and much of that goes for frou-frou.

Each year new garden gadgets are devised to titillate us. Here's a few I've come across that may amuse or inspire you:

Walt Nicke catalog (Box 71, Hudson, N.Y. 12534) offers a trigger release lance ($9.50) for water overhead pots and hard-to-reach places (it looks like a giant hummingbird proboscis). Walt Nicke also carries thatched roof birdhouses made in England and a butterfly book that tells how to plant-for, breed, attract and tame butterflies. (The author was once engaged by Winston Churchill to release hundreds of butterflies at a garden party — must have been some party!)

SPEAKING OF butterflies. The Plant Oddities Club (Basking Ridge, N.J. 07020) offers a hatching kit and live caterpillars. (Don't laugh — attracting butterflies is a big thing in England.) The Thompson and Morgan garden catalog (London Road, Ipswich, Suffolk, England) features two pages of color illustrations on butterflies for the home garden.

Potting shed

by Mary B. Good

This top English nursery had supplied seeds to King Gustaf VI Adolf of Sweden, but I couldn't tell you whether the king got any butterflies! However, the catalog is a real treat.

It's easier to spend $2.50 for a fruit picker (Earl Ferris catalog, Hampton, Iowa 50441) than spend it on a doctor bill after you fall off a ladder trying for the cherries or apples on the top of a tree.

And Earl May (Shenandoah, Iowa 51603) has a strawberry huller for 59 cents, if plucking the little green stems is a nuisance to you. May's also offers a "fright owl" to scare away unwanted birds. (Whatever happened to the scarecrow?)

You can get Garden Guard, an organic insecticide for controlling insects that attack beans, cabbages and many other vegetables from and yet is harmless to animals, pets. (Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., Faribault, Minn. 55021).

SPEAKING organically again. Eco-Systems (1112 S. Plum Grove Road, Palatine, 60067) has Dipel a biological, safe product for snuffing out leaf-eating worms and caterpillars — bagworms, inchworms, cabbage loopers, etc. Dipel won't hurt birds, bees, mantis, fish.

The Earl May catalog has a pretend windmill, but with the energy crisis, you might consider an improvement on the real thing: For $395 you can buy a wind-driven generator called the "Wincharger," which is making a comeback. It is 10 feet high, weighs 135 pounds and has a six-foot propeller. From Dyna Technology, Inc., Sioux City, Iowa, it's just the thing for pumping the water out to the garden during a power failure!

Water Wicks (Mardon Gardens, 182 Sherburn Drive, Hamburg, N.Y. 14075) make nice plant sitters. Wicks automatically give your plants the right amount of water so the little bloomers don't drown when you're not around to mother them.

HANDY NEW garden gadget for watering plants when you're not home is Water Wicks, available from Mardon Gardens of Hamburg, N.Y.

So strike up the band; the parade is coming!

Palatine Center of the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago will strike up the band Thursday, March 28, for Palatine on Parade. The center has organized a parade of more than 20 charitable organizations in the Palatine area, each of which will be represented on the fashion runway and competing for cash prizes.

A luncheon show, the benefit will be held in the Jimmy Durante Room at Arlington Park Towers with balloons, music and decorations in red, white and blue creating the parade atmosphere.

Women's fashions from Marie's Town and Country and men's fashions from Squire on the Square, both Palatine shops, are being selected to give sagging winter spirits a lift, according to Mrs. Fred Brown of Plum Grove and Mrs. James Garts of Rolling Meadows, model coordinators.

Organizations accepting the invitation to model in Palatine on Parade include Buehler YMCA Distaffs, Camp Fire Girls, Clearbrook Center, Countryside Auxiliary of Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society, FISH, Friends of the Library of Palatine, Northwest Community Hospital Women's Auxiliary, Northwest Suburban Branch of the Diabetes Association of Greater Chicago, Palatine Firemen's Association, Palatine Heart Fund, Palatine Jaycee Wives, Kiwanis and Lions, the Palanios Park and Plum Grove Garden Clubs, Registered Nurses, Suburban Service League of Little City and the Women's Club of Inverness.

As each model parades the runway the commentator will give a brief description of the organization represented.

Tickets for the show, which marks the 15th anniversary year of the Palatine Center, are available by calling 397-4206 or from any participating organization.

A Paddock review

'Steambath' not for strait-laced

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Let's get it all out into the open. Regardless of what some people were expecting, there is no nudity in "Steambath" currently playing weekends at the Pub Playhouse in the Mount Prospect Holiday Inn.

Producer/director Al Richman "cleaned up" the production for the suburbs. Everyone wore towels . . . all the time. Yet even though flesh is at a premium, good entertainment is not, made possible by an exciting lineup of actors and solid direction. It's the kind of off-beat show that one normally would have to drive into the city to see.

"Steambath" will not appeal to those people who wince over four-lettered words and growl at sacrilegious material.

If you're not bothered, be prepared to chuckle all the way through.

WHO WOULD EVER depict God as a Puerto Rican steambath attendant who takes turns ordering both impending gloom and happiness? Playwright Bruce Jay Friedman, of course.

Behind, between and all around the vulgarity and travesty Friedman implants a message of life — a man desperately bargains for his whole existence. That message is perhaps too heavily imparted at the end. All the preceding frivolity does not adequately condition the audience to accept the final emotional deluge.

What will be remembered about the two act comedy drama is the ingenious, if not outlandish, concept of designating a steambath as purgatory and God just one of the guys, a man with evil intentions as well as good.

John Gould is superb as God disguised as an attendant. He shows off his power with magic tricks.

Gould's square-muscle physique, deadpan humor and intensity of character set him off in the role. And his props are terrific.

ALSO GOOD ARE the special guests of the steambath, particularly Ted Weiss as the old-timer, Alden Lewis as the "natural, uninhibited" Tandy and Ron Verson as Bieberman, a confused man who finally comes to the realization that he is indeed, dead, his life taken from him long before he was ready.

Joyce Hazard is the gum-smacking flighty blonde who arrives in the steambath worried lest an overdue Bloomington bill might discredit her name before she has the opportunity to return.

Dan Kreisman and Bob Repta are hilarious as blatant homosexuals. Gay as they come, the two talk always in unison and introduce themselves with a chorus line number. Good work . . . it had to take time to master.

ALSO APPEARING in the show are Norm Tobin as the broker and Jack Cohen as Gottlieb, God's assistant.

Minor roles are filled by Donna Alpers, Ron Goodman and Ron Capitol.

Pub Playhouse is receiving worthwhile recognition. Indeed the new theater should, though technical problems spoiled an otherwise enjoyable and successful opening night.

Lighting was off. The house lights were still on even after the play began.

If the audience continues to grow, seating must be arranged to insure good viewing for everyone. A raised platform would greatly increase visibility for those seated in the last rows.

The combo playing next door in the lounge was again distracting. Perhaps a compromise could be made — curtain time moved up and the band instructed to begin immediately following the production.

HOLIDAY INN has a good thing going for it. Surely it would be better to stand behind the Pub Playhouse and help it develop rather than stand in its way.

"Steambath" is playing weekends through April.

AND EVERYTHING NICE ABOUT FOOD

Ocean Perch! Budgeteer's Bounty:

Ocean perch, a fine-flavored protein food, still just costs pennies-per-mouthful — a real bounty for shoppers searching for a bolster for sagging food budgets.

Averaging $1 per pound at area supermarkets, frozen ocean perch retains its price edge over meat and poultry even in today's fluctuating food market. Based on the standard serving (20 grams of protein), ocean perch costs from 15 to 30 cents less per protein serving than competing cuts of meat.

Ocean perch is not lacking in food value either. Besides being an economical source of high quality protein, it contains essential vitamins and minerals. For those watching cholesterol intake, it has only 1.2 grams of polyunsaturated fat per three ounce serving.

In addition to providing nutritious eating at bargain prices, ocean perch lends itself to a variety of cooking methods and dishes. Bubbling in a chowder pot, baked in a tangy sauce, or fried and served with down-south corn fritters, this treasure from the sea is a taste treat for everyone.

All of the following recipes can be prepared using frozen ocean perch fillets, readily available in area supermarkets.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 4 slices bacon, cut up | 2 cups sliced carrots |
| 1 medium onion, cut into thin wedges | 1 tablespoon paprika |
| 2 garlic cloves, crushed | 2 teaspoons basil leaves |
| 2 cans (1 lb. 12 oz. each) tomatoes | 2 teaspoons leaf thyme |
| 2 cups water | 1 tablespoon salt |
| 2 cups dry white wine | 2 pounds, fresh or frozen, ocean perch fillets |
| 2 cups frozen Southern-style hash brown potatoes | 2 tablespoons chopped parsley |

Thaw ocean perch fillets, if frozen. Cook bacon, onion and garlic in a large saucepot over medium heat, until bacon is crisp and onion is transparent. Stir in tomatoes, water, wine, hash browns, carrots, paprika, basil, thyme and salt. Cover saucepot and simmer 1 hour. Cut ocean perch fillets into large chunks and add to vegetable mixture in saucepot. Continue simmering for 5 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Garnish chowder with chopped parsley and serve with grated Parmesan cheese, if desired. Makes 12 1/4 cup servings.

PICKLED PERCH

- | | |
|---|----------------------------|
| 1 pound, fresh or frozen, ocean perch fillets | 2 teaspoons whole allspice |
| 2 cups vinegar | 1/4 teaspoon peppercorns |
| 1 1/2 cups sugar | 5 bay leaves |
| 2 small onions, sliced | 1 teaspoon salt |

Thaw ocean perch fillets, if frozen. Combine vinegar, sugar, onions, allspice, peppercorns and bay leaves in a saucepan. Heat vinegar mixture to boiling, stirring until sugar is dissolved; cool. While vinegar mixture cools, skin ocean perch fillets and cut into 1 1/2 inch pieces. Place pieces in a crock or bowl and sprinkle with salt. Pour vinegar mixture over fish. Cover crock and refrigerate for at least 24 hours. Serve pickled ocean perch as an appetizer with cocktail rye bread or crackers. Makes approximately 1 quart.

PERCH FIESTA

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1 pound, fresh or frozen ocean perch fillets | 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin |
| 2 tablespoons olive oil | 1/2 teaspoon salt |
| 1 small onion, cut into rings | Dash of cayenne pepper |
| 2 garlic cloves, crushed | 2 large tomatoes, cut into wedges |
| 1 tablespoon chili powder | 1 small green pepper, cut into julienne strips |
| 1/4 teaspoon basil leaves | 1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese |
| 1/4 teaspoon leaf marjoram | 1/4 cup sliced ripe olives |
| 1/4 teaspoon leaf oregano | |

Thaw ocean perch fillets, if frozen. Sauté onion and garlic in olive oil in a large skillet until tender. Stir in chili powder, basil, marjoram, oregano, cumin, salt and pepper. Add tomato wedges and green pepper. While vegetable mixture simmers, season perch fillets with salt and pepper. Place fillets on top of vegetables in skillet. Cover and continue simmering for 10 minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove skillet lid and sprinkle cheese and olives over fish; replace lid and let stand until cheese melts. May be served over rice. Makes 4 servings.

PERCH SCANDIA

- | | |
|---|----------------------------|
| 1 pound, fresh or frozen, ocean perch fillets | 2 cups milk |
| 1 pound frozen French fries | 1 teaspoon dill weed |
| 1 can (2 oz.) anchovy fillets | Melted butter |
| 2 tablespoons butter | 1/4 cup fresh bread crumbs |
| 2 tablespoons minced onion | 1/2 teaspoon paprika |
| 1/4 cup all-purpose flour | 2 teaspoons melted butter |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt | |

Thaw ocean perch fillets, if frozen. Put frozen French fries in a buttered 2-quart baking dish. Bake in a pre-heated 400-degree oven for 15 minutes. Meanwhile prepare white sauce. Drain oil from anchovies into a 1-quart saucepan; set anchovy fillets aside. Over medium heat melt 2 tablespoons butter in saucepan with oil; add onion to butter mixture and cook until tender. Stir in flour and salt. Gradually blend milk into flour mixture until smooth. Bring sauce to a boil stirring constantly; continue boiling and stirring for 1 minute. Add dill weed. Pour cream sauce evenly over potatoes and arrange anchovy fillets on top. Season ocean perch fillets with salt and pepper and place on top of potatoes and anchovies. Brush fish with melted butter. Toss bread crumbs and paprika with 2 teaspoons melted butter. Sprinkle bread crumb mixture over fish. Bake 30 minutes more or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Makes 4 servings.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1 pound, fresh or frozen perch fillets | 1/2 teaspoon crushed red chilies |
| 2 cups yellow cornmeal | 2 egg yolks, beaten |
| 1/2 cup all-purpose flour | 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten |

Place 1 1/2 cups of cornmeal mixture into another bowl and add drained corn; set aside. To remaining batter, stir in 1/2 cup boiling water and red chilies. Blend in egg yolks and fold in egg whites. Pat ocean perch dry; cut large fillets in half and sprinkle with garlic salt. At Louise Eischen's house

Baked goods are favorites

by LOIS SEILER

The table is ringed with smiles when Mrs. Albert L. Eischen of Arlington Heights serves her sweet chocolate cake for dessert. Baked goods are Louise Eischen's specialty, and this cake is a favorite of her children, Lisa, 7, Kurt, 10, Wayne, 14, and Robert, 13, who requests it for his birthday.

"It's nothing so unusual," Louise modestly explained, "but it never disappoints me and always disappears in a hurry."

This is not a fudge cake; it is high and light in texture, with a mild sweet chocolate flavor. Louise usually makes it in three layers, filling it with a fluffy white icing. It is as handsome in appearance as it is appealing to taste.

Her husband, Al, enjoys a piece of coffee cake for breakfast, so Louise often makes an Orange Juice Cake or a Butter Coffee Cake. Both are baked in a spring tube pan, but are dissimilar in taste and texture.

GRATED ORANGE rind and walnuts flavor one cake, and dates may be added, if desired. An orange syrup is spooned over it while hot, and this seeps into the cake adding more flavor and making the cake very moist.

Sour cream is used in the batter for the butter coffee cake, giving it an exceedingly nice texture. It has a filling and topping of sugar, cinnamon and nuts.

In addition to being a delightful way to start the day, both cakes are excellent to serve for coffee parties.

Louise candidly admits that she prefers baking to cooking because she feels it is more creative and it pleases her family. Along with this interest, her hobbies include swimming, water skiing and music. A mezzo soprano, Louise sings in a quartet and performs with the Fine Arts Puppeteers. She also belongs to the Northwest Chapter of Lyric Opera and substitute teaches for District 25.

SWEET CHOCOLATE CAKE

- 1 4-ounce package German Sweet Chocolate
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup boiling water
- 1 cup margarine
- 2 cups sugar
- 4 eggs, separated
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups cake flour, sifted
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup buttermilk or sour milk

Melt chocolate in boiling water and cool.

Cream margarine and sugar; add eggs one at a time, beating well. Then add vanilla and chocolate and mix well.

Sift dry ingredients together and add to batter alternately with buttermilk, beating until smooth. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites.

Line two or three 9-inch layer pans with greased waxed paper. Pour in batter and bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Let cool in pans 10 minutes; remove and cool on racks. Frost with fluffy white frosting.

FLUFFY WHITE FROSTING

- $2\frac{2}{3}$ cup sugar
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup light corn syrup
- 2 egg whites
- 3 tablespoons water
- $\frac{1}{8}$ teaspoon cream of tartar
- $\frac{1}{8}$ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Place sugar, corn syrup, egg whites, water, cream of tartar and salt into the top of a double boiler. Beat over boiling water with a rotary beater until the mixture stands in peaks. Remove from heat and blend in vanilla. Continue beating until frosting is thick. Use as filling and frosting for chocolate cake.

ORANGE JUICE CAKE

- 1 cup butter
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 egg yolks
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 1 tablespoon warm water
- 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 2 cups lukewarm milk
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped dates (optional)
- Grated rind of 2 oranges
- 1 cup chopped walnuts

Cream butter, gradually adding sugar. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating well. Dissolve soda in warm water and beat into batter.

If dates are used, let them soften in the lukewarm milk. Add milk to batter alternately with flour in small amounts, mixing well with each addition. Stir in rind and nuts.

Turn batter into a greased and floured spring tube pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes.

In the meantime, combine:

- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar

Juice of 2 medium oranges

When cake is done, remove from oven and slowly spoon over it the orange juice — sugar mixture. Prick slightly with toothpick if necessary to help juice seep into cake. Cook in pan; do not invert.

Remove from pan when completely cool and serve.

BUTTER COFFEE CAKE

- 1 cup butter
- $1\frac{1}{4}$ cups sugar
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon baking soda

Cream butter and sugar; add beaten eggs, sour cream and vanilla. Beat well and gradually add flour which has been sifted with baking powder and soda. Mix well.

In the meantime, prepare the following filling-topping mixture:

- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup finely chopped pecans
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon cinnamon

Mix ingredients together.

Pour half of the cake batter into a buttered, 9-inch tube spring pan. Sprinkle with half of the filling-topping mixture. Pour remaining batter over this and sprinkle with remaining topping. Bake at 350 degrees about 50 to 45 minutes or until done. Sprinkle confectioners' sugar on top while hot. Do not invert pan. Let cool in pan 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from pan and let cool on rack. Do not invert. Serve warm.

Here's easy oven meal for Sunday night guests

For a Sunday night supper or other informal occasion, it's nice to have dishes which can be prepared before guests arrive and need only short-term baking in the oven before putting on a buffet.

Two such dishes we served to a bridge group, are Corn and Oyster Bake and Baked Spiced Fruit. They were prepared to accompany baked ham and relishes.

The ham was cooked well in advance of the meal and kept just warm. I chose a five-pound canned ham because of convenience, placing in a baking dish with fat side up and coating with a preparation of equal parts (one-fourth cup) of honey and beer and one tablespoon yellow mustard. Bake $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 hours at 350 degrees, basting with the mixture.

The Corn and Oyster Bake may be put together a couple of hours before serving. Drain thoroughly one pint oysters. Combine two cans (16-ounce) yellow creamstyle corn, one beaten egg, one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth teaspoon prepared mustard. Add drained oysters mix.

Pour into a well-buttered two-quart casserole and dot with two tablespoons butter. When ready to bake, cover top with one-half cup fine bread crumbs, and put into a 350 degree oven for 45 minutes.

THE FRUIT DISH is prepared this way. Drain No. 2 cans of pineapple chunks, pear halves and Queen Anne sweet cherries. Use juice for another purpose. Now drain a No. 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ can of sliced peaches and reserve the juice separately.

Put peach juice in a sauce pan, add three whole cloves and a stick of cinnamon. Simmer for 15 or 20 minutes until juice has absorbed spice flavors. Allow to cool, discarding cinnamon and cloves.

Prepare one and one-half cups bread cubes (crouton size) and butter them in a skillet. In a deep heat-proof casserole mix fruits and bread cubes. Mix spicy peach juice with one-half cup tawny port wine. Pour over and bake 25 minutes at 350 degrees.

Boil low-acid foods

The best way to avoid botulism poisoning in home-canned low-acid foods is to boil them before testing.

Place the food in a pan, bring quickly to boil, cover and boil rapidly — at least 20 minutes for spinach, corn, meat, poultry, fish and seafood, and at least 10 minutes for other low-acid products, says the USDA.

If the food foams or has an off-odor or doesn't look right, during or after heating, discard it without tasting. And if you can't wash the jars and lids at once, rinse them and put them out of reach of people and pets.

Essential nutrients

Vitamin D helps build strong bones and teeth. Milk with vitamin D added is an excellent source. So is direct sunlight.

Vitamin E acts as a biological preservative of unsaturated fats. Sources are whole grain breads and cereals, vegetable oils, nuts, dark green leafy vegetables and organ meats.

Iodine aids in proper functioning of the thyroid gland. Sources are iodized salt and seafood.

Iron combines with protein to make hemoglobin, the red substance in blood. Sources are liver, organ meats, shellfish, dried beans and peas.

Vitamin A promotes normal growth and keeps skin, eyes, and mucous membranes healthy. Sources are liver, egg yolk, dark yellow and dark green leafy vegetables, butter, margarine, whole milk and whole milk cheese.

Vitamin C ascorbic acid helps build strong body cells and blood vessels and also aids in healing wounds and broken bones. Sources are citrus fruits, fresh strawberries, tomatoes, cantaloupes, raw or undercooked green peppers, cauliflower, broccoli, kale and cabbage.

Chef Louis cooking in concert

He offers wit and wisdom

by MONICA WILCH

When you're a celebrated professional, you can get away with making outrageously shocking pronouncements.

And so it is with Chef Louis, who presides over the cuisine at The Bakery, 2218 N. Lincoln in Chicago.

Chef Louis, who looks as though he enjoys eating what he cooks, visited Palatine recently to promote the Treasure Island food store in the Countryside Mall.

"If you think I do this commercial for Treasure Island for money, you are absolutely right," Louis told the women in his thick Hungarian accent.

But he went on to explain that all proceeds from his cooking demonstrations go to charities, and, while he deftly made cuts in the fresh mushrooms, he described the organizations who would benefit from last week's program.

Suddenly, Chef Louis threw the mushroom he was working on into the audience. As the women gasped, he calmly began explaining how to make proper cuts in a mushroom, and then tossed several more into the audience.

Getting down to business, Chef Louis announced that he would prepare Beef Stroganoff — "the right way."

Using ready-cut sirloin, he began by browning the meat in a combination of oil and butter. This mixture, he explained, would allow him to achieve a high temperature without unpleasant burning.

NEXT, HE sprinkled the meat with salt, pepper and paprika and added some Kitchen Bouquet. After browning the meat, he sauteed the fresh mushrooms in the same pan juices.

Then, he made the sauce out of these pan juices and a pint of sour cream, pouring a little of the hot juice into the cold sour cream first before combining all in the pan. He added only a slight amount of water — about two tablespoons — to the mixture.

As he completed the dish, a woman asked about freezing mushrooms.

"Some people freeze their big toes," Chef Louis replied disdainfully. Needless to say, he strongly advised against freezing mushrooms — or anything else. Even if it's on sale.

"Buy to eat it, not to store it. The home freezer is nothing but a frozen food holding cabinet. Don't pay interest and storage by buying fresh food and putting it away in the freezer."

Chef Louis' second act was the preparation of a dinner for a woman in the audience, who had purchased the ingredients from him at Treasure Island. The entree was a 3½-pound family steak, which at Treasure Island is a round steak cut.

"I COMMIT the first sin," Chef Louis announced as he vigorously patted salt all over the meat, much to the horror of his audience. Soliciting from the women their time-honored reason for not salting meat before cooking — because it will draw out the juices — Chef Louis demanded, "Why do you believe that silly fairy tale?"

He then tutored the women in their high school chemistry, explaining how unsalted water (the juice inside the meat) will draw on salted water (the juice on the surface) until the salt content of the two is equalized. Thus, salting makes the juices go into the meat, not out.

Chef Louis then pan-fried the meat at a high temperature, turning it often. Someone asked about broiling it.

"Whoever invented the broiler should be hung!" he sputtered. "The only way to make a decent steak is to pan fry or grill."

He didn't explain why, but I believe I'll stick to broiling anyway. Because, to my un-gourmet eye, Chef Louis' masterpiece looked burned on the outside and raw on the inside!

CHEF LOUIS calmly pours a salt-and-seasoning mixture over a piece of beef in preparation for cooking, explaining that salt actually pulls the juices in, not out, as people think.

Super Seafood Sandwiches

Seafood Sandwiches save on energy and money

Super Seafood Sandwiches are an excellent way to utilize versatile pre-cooked fish portions. These portions are cut from frozen blocks of fish fillets into a variety of sizes and shapes. The cut pieces are dipped in batter and coated with breading. They are always sold frozen but take only a few minutes to prepare and heat through.

For Super Seafood Sandwiches the fish portions are heated, the buns toasted and the cheese softened atop the portions — all in the oven. The total cooking time is only about 15 minutes — making this sandwich an energy saver as well as budget-saving. Shredded lettuce, a catsup-onion mixture or tartar sauce may be added.

To complete the menu featuring these sandwiches includes potato chips, assorted relishes and macaroni salad.

SUPER SEAFOOD SANDWICHES

6 frozen precooked breaded fish portions (3 ounce each)
8 hamburger buns, split
2 tablespoons soft margarine

3 slices (3 ounces) American cheese, cut in half ½ cup catsup
¼ cup finely chopped onion
5 tablespoons tartar sauce
¼ cup finely shredded lettuce

Arrange fish portions in greased shallow baking pan. Place in hot oven, 400 degrees. Bake 15 minutes or until fish portions are heated through. While fish is heating, spread cut surfaces of buns with margarine and arrange, cut side down, on baking pan. Place in oven five minutes before end of heating time. Two minutes before end of heating time, top each portion with a cheese slice and allow to soften. While fish is heating, combine and mix catsup and onion. To assemble sandwiches, spread bottoms of buns lightly with tartar sauce and top with shredded lettuce, a fish-cheese portion, a dollop of catsup-onion mixture and bun top. Makes 6 sandwiches.

Tartar Sauce — Use a commercial tartar sauce or make your own by combining ¼ cup salad dressing and 2 tablespoons well-drained sweet pickle relish.

Entertain inexpensively with Salmon Souffle Pie

Soaring food prices and restricted shopping expeditions are no reason to give up entertaining if you keep it simple and plan ingeniously.

Instead of asking friends to dinner, invite them to gather around your blazing fire to enjoy a hot toddy and a hearty appetizer. Or conclude an evening of cards with hot coffee and one superb supper dish, such as Creamy Salmon Souffle Pie.

This dish is easy to make and despite its luxury look, is surprisingly inexpensive. The appetizing color of the salmon gives the pie a festive appearance, and the sweet, mild flavor of the salmon combined with cream cheese and eggs turns the most casual occasion into a party.

For a nutritious family meal add a wedge of pie and a tossed salad.

CREAMY SALMON SOUFFLE PIE

Pastry for a 9-inch pie
7 1/2 ounce can salmon

- 6 ounce package cream cheese
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 4 eggs, separated

Pimiento for garnish

Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry. Drain salmon, reserving the liquid, and sprinkle salmon chunks over the bottom of the pastry.

Combine the cream cheese and lemon juice. Gradually beat in reserved salmon liquid, the salt and the cream. Beat egg yolks lightly and stir into the cheese mixture. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold gently but thoroughly into the egg yolk-cheese mixture. Spoon over the salmon in the pastry lined pan and bake in a preheated 375 degree oven for 45 minutes, or until the top of the pie is lightly browned and the filling is set. Garnish before serving with pimiento "fish."

Serve hot in wedges to 6 people.

Fresh fish offers benefits of good nutrition, economy

Although Midwesterners do not have the abundance or variety of fresh fish and seafoods available to coastal residents, many canned and frozen selections abound in local supermarkets.

We're still able to reap the nutritional and economical benefits from such offerings in daily menus. The National Marine Fisheries Service reports that a variety of fishery products are available currently in the Midwest. The best buys, according to Marine Fisheries, are fillets of ocean perch and turbot, both selling for less than a dollar a pound. Another good buy is dressed whiting which can be often purchased for under 50 cents per pound.

THE FRESH products cited as good buys are fresh fillets of ocean perch, whole white fish and pan-dressed smelt.

Products abundant currently on a nationwide basis include salmon (filleted and in the round), flounder fillets and fish sticks and portions.

Following are recipes from "Mother's In The Kitchen," a cookbook by Le Leche League International. The recipes, submitted by members, are wholesome, nourishing dishes of aid homemakers in planning family meals.

CHOPSTICK TUNA

- 1 can cream of mushroom or celery soup
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 can (3 ozs.) chow mein noodles
- 1 can (6 1/2 ozs.) tuna
- 1/4 to 1/2 cup salted cashews
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- Dash of pepper

Combine soup and water in ungreased casserole. Add all the other ingredients, saving a few chow mein noodles for top. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes. Serves 4 to 6.

BAKED FISH EN PAPILLOTTE

- 1 pound fish fillets
 - 1/3 cup melted butter
 - Parsley
 - Lemon juice
 - Salt
 - Dill weed
 - Carrots, optional
 - Onion rings, optional
 - Swiss cheese, optional
- Use any kind of fish fillets. Thaw if

Franfare

by Fran Heckart

necessary, sprinkle each piece with salt and pepper. Make a sauce of melted butter and remaining ingredients — use all quantities to taste. Make squares of aluminum foil for each piece of fish, spreading each with some of the butter mixture. Place a fillet on each; garnish with thinly sliced carrots, onion rings and cheese, if desired.

Divide remaining butter sauce evenly among fish fillets, pouring over each. Fold up foil securely to make a packet. Place on baking sheet and bake at 400 degrees for 20 to 40 minutes, depending upon the thickness of the fillets. Fish is done when it begins to flake when tested with a fork.

This can also be made in a large, flat casserole with a tight-fitting cover.

SARDINE SPREAD

- 1 can sardines
 - 2 ounces cream cheese or Neufchatel cheese, softened
 - Horseradish
 - Chopped parsley
- Drain oil from sardines and mash them with a fork. Combine with softened cheese, adding horseradish to taste. Decorate with parsley. This is good on crackers or small squares of rye or whole wheat toast. May be a snack or served in regular sandwich with lettuce and tomato.

Egg shopping tips

When buying eggs, if there is less than a seven-cent price spread between one size and the next smaller size in the same grade, you're probably getting a better bargain by picking the larger size.

It's important to use U.S. Grade AA or A eggs for frying and poaching, while Grade B with their less thick whites and flatter yolks are good for general cooking and baking.

There is no difference between brown and white eggs in nutritional value, quality or taste — the only difference is the color of the shell.

Household hints

Food will stay frozen in a freezer in case of power failure for about two days if the freezer is full and the door is not opened.

If your garbage disposer picks up an unpleasant odor, try running through it a tray of ice cubes and several orange or lemon rinds.

Make sure your range is on the level — if it is on uneven ground, cakes won't rise evenly.

Refrigerator interiors can be cleaned with a solution of baking soda and water; exteriors with lukewarm sudsy water.

You are what you eat

Food is the basis of life. In a new booklet prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, that point is made.

"Food is the source of health and well-being, it gives you the energy you need for every day living, affects your weight and height and even your strength to a great extent. In other words, everything in life begins with food and there is much to the saying — You are what you eat."

Easy salad-casserole meal

Despite an over-indulgence in fad diets which is usually followed by an over-indulgence of pizzas, colas, hamburgers, hot dogs and french fries, teen-agers more and more enjoy whipping up something simple for the gang to eat.

An Orange-Spinach Salad and a Wagon Wheel casserole are easy to throw together, are filling and take little cleanup. Serve with garlic bread or homemade wholewheat bread and ice cream for dessert.

ORANGE SPINACH SALAD

- 2 cups spinach, torn into bite-size pieces
- 1 cup lettuce, torn into bite-size pieces
- 1 cup orange sections
- 1/2 cup Edam cheese cut into strips
- Garlic-flavored oil and vinegar dressing

Combine spinach, lettuce, orange and cheese in large salad bowl. Just before serving toss with dressing. Makes 6 servings.

WAGON WHEEL CASSEROLE

- 2 cans (1 lb. each) pork and beans in tomato sauce
- 6 frankfurters
- 1 cup Edam cheese, cut in thin strips
- 1 cup Edam cheese, shredded
- 1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Pour beans into a 1-quart shallow baking dish (square or round). Cut a slit down length of each frankfurter. Place strips of Edam cheese in slits. Arrange frankfurters on beans in spoke fashion, cheese side up. Make a paste of brown sugar, mustard and Worcestershire sauce. Spread over frankfurters and cheese. Shred cheese in center of wheel.

Bake at 450 degrees for 20 minutes or until beans are hot and frankfurters are browned. Makes 6 servings.

Breadsubject of new cookbook

"The Complete Book of Breads" by Bernard Clayton Jr. (Simon and Schuster) is the most recent in a rapidly growing list of cookbooks on the subject. Minutely detailed directions make it especially good for beginners. Clayton's cheese casserole bread is also easy, because it needs no kneading.

In a large bowl, combine 2 cups of bread or all-purpose flour, 3 tablespoons of sugar, 1 tablespoon of salt and 2 packages of dry yeast. In a saucepan, combine 2 cups of hot tap water — 120-130 degrees, 1/3 cup non-fat dry milk and 2 tablespoons of shortening at room temperature. Gradually add liquids to dry ingredients and beat 150 strokes with a wooden spoon or 2 minutes at medium speed with electric mixer. Scrape bowl occasionally. Add 1 1/2 cups grated Cheddar cheese, and 1 beaten egg, both at room temperature and about 1/2 cup of flour to make a thick batter but not so thick it stops the mixer. Beat at high speed 2 minutes or 150 strokes with the spoon.

With a spoon, stir in about 2 more cups of flour or enough to make a stiff but manageable batter. Cover bowl with plastic wrap and put in a warm place 80-85 degrees until batter has doubled in volume — about 40 minutes. Stir down, beat vigorously about 30 seconds, and turn into greased casseroles of 1 quart or less capacity, filling them half full. Bake 45 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted in the center emerges clean, in a preheated 375-degree oven for metal pans or 350-degrees for glass or ceramic. Turn onto racks and cool. Makes enough batter for two 1-pound pans or casseroles.

Many styles of pasta

Italian pasta comes in more than 120 shapes and sizes, each with its own name, and Italians want things to stay that way.

A pasta maker's spokesman said a market survey a few years ago showed housewives were overwhelmingly against a suggestion to reduce the variety of pasta to six or eight types. "Everyone chooses sizes as if it were a vital matter," he said.

Although generally food prices are continuing to rise, several products have declined since Feb. 18. According to a price survey on Monday, ground beef went down nine cents. Bacon and whole broiler-fryers also averaged declines of five cents each. Ocean perch fillets and pork chops rose three and four cents, respectively.

Increases noted for dairy products include American processed cheese and margarine which rose four and two cents. Milk and eggs remained stable while butter declined one cent.

Fresh produce is reaching the market again and declines of seven and four cents were recorded for lettuce and celery. However, white potatoes increased another two cents per pound.

The average cost of salad oil jumped seven cents. Two-cent increases were noted for spaghetti and grape jelly, but other prices remained fairly stable.

Recorded prices are based on averages obtained from four area food stores on Monday of each week.

Rice and eggs

Try this budget-wise combination

If prices at the meat counter have you close to tears, move along to the dairy case. Eggs are high in protein and a good substitute for meat at any meal.

They need a little dressing up, though, to be featured at dinner! While eggs are nutritious and can be served as the entire tree, they don't seem to be as filling as meat. And that's where rice comes in. When stirred into the egg mixture and baked, or when served as the base for an egg dish, rice adds the bulk and satisfaction so necessary at mealtime.

And to satisfy your budget, rice costs only two to three cents per half-cup serving! Egg prices vary from eight to 10 cents each. A meal that starts with a half cup of rice and two eggs starts out with a base price of about 23 cents per serving. Add a few cents worth of chopped onion, less than a penny's worth of herb or spice, and less than a dime's amount of cheese and you have a dish that tastes good, is most nutritious, and really satisfies.

SUNNYSIDE RICE

1/4 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2 cups cooked rice
Salt and pepper to taste
6 eggs
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Sauté onion and green pepper in butter until tender but not brown. Add rice and seasonings. Cook until hot. Make 6 indentations with back of a spoon. Break an egg into each indentation. Sprinkle with cheese. Cover and cook until eggs are of desired doneness. Serve with broiled tomatoes, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

"Beef up" scrambled eggs with rice, cheese and seasonings. It's a quick lunch or dinner idea to satisfy the heartiest of appetites.

SCRAMBLED EGGS AND RICE

1/2 cup chopped green onions
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 cups cooked rice
6 eggs, beaten
1/3 cup milk
2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
Sauté onions and green pepper in butter until tender crisp. Add rice. Combine eggs, milk, and seasonings. Pour over vegetables, cook, stirring constantly, until eggs are done. Sprinkle with cheese. Makes 6 servings.

A perfectly delicious way to serve rice and eggs. Seasonings and grated cheese are added and the mixture is baked in a loaf pan. When sliced for serving, the hard-cooked eggs in the center show up nicely. For lunch, top the slices with a tomato sauce and serve with a salad. Or serve instead of potatoes for dinner.

GOLDEN RICE LOAF

1/2 cup unsifted flour
1 1/4 teaspoons salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon sage
2 1/2 cups milk

2 cups grated sharp Cheddar cheese
3 tablespoons grated onion
3 cups cooked rice
3 eggs, slightly beaten
3 hard-cooked eggs
Combine flour, salt, pepper, mustard, sage and about 1/3 cup of the milk, stir until smooth. Stir in remaining milk. Cook until thickened, stirring frequently. Add cheese and stir until cheese is melted.

Remove from heat. Stir in onion, rice, and slightly beaten eggs. Line bottom of greased 8 1/2 x 4 1/2 inch loaf pan with wax paper. Put about half of the rice-cheese mixture in bottom of pan. Arrange hard-cooked eggs length-wise in center. Cover with remaining rice-cheese mixture. Set in pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees for about 1 hour or until set. Let stand in pan about 5 minutes. Unmold. Slice to serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Tempting Tuna Kabobs

Tuna goes to a party

A good candidate for your next cocktail party is tuna, done up in bite size balls and served as the stars of some tempting kabobs. The balls are easy to make, just mix canned tuna with quick or old-fashioned oats. Both the tuna and the oats are low in cost, yet they produce a tidbit that is rich in eating enjoyment.

Add an egg for binder and seasonings for flavor, and shape into balls. Roll in a mixture of pancake mix and Parmesan cheese. Cooking means a mere minute or two in deep hot fat. Thread them on skewers with cherry tomatoes, pickles and olives for an unusual appetizer. For a hearty entree simply make the tuna balls larger.

TEMPTING TUNA KABOBS

Tuna Balls:

Two 7-oz. cans tuna, drained and flaked
3/4 cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked

2 eggs, beaten
2 tablespoons minced onion
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Coating:

2/3 cup pancake mix
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Large stuffed green olives
Cherry tomatoes
Sweet pickle chunks
Cocktail onions

Combine all ingredients for tuna balls. Shape into 24 small balls. Roll in coating made by combining pancake mix and cheese. Fry in hot deep fat (375 degrees) 1 to 2 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve on wooden skewers or toothpicks with olives, tomatoes, pickle chunks or onions. Makes about 2 dozen appetizers.

Additional relish for old favorite

A really dressed-up version of a ham loaf blends smoked ham, lean pork, cranberry-orange relish and pineapple slices. This attractive Cran-Ham Loaf goes well with a mixed green salad and scalloped corn. For dessert serve a light prune whip.

CRAN-HAM LOAF

2 cups ground smoked ham
1 pound ground lean pork
3 cups cornflakes
1 cup (1/2 pint) light cream or half and half
2 eggs
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons prepared mustard

1 jar (14 ounces) cranberry-orange relish
3 pineapple slices

In a bowl, mix ham, pork, cornflakes, cream, eggs, onion, salt and mustard. Add half of the relish and stir until well blended. Grease a 9x5x3-inch loaf pan and arrange pineapple slices on bottom. Spread pineapple with remaining relish. Top with ham mixture pressing firmly to prevent air spaces. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 1 1/2 hours. Loosen edges and invert on a platter. Drain off excess juices. Garnish with additional pineapple, orange slices and sprigs of parsley if desired. Makes one 9x5x3-inch loaf.

Village to buy golf course by next year?

by JOE FRANZ

A recommendation to purchase the Buffalo Grove Golf Club course with village funds is expected to be made in the near future, The Herald has learned.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said Wednesday that officials hope to make the club village property by early next year. Buffalo Grove trustees approved a multi-family development fronting the course earlier this year on the condition the village could purchase the open area.

The Phoenix Construction Co. plans to build 840 townhouses, townhomes and condominiums on the 61 acres surrounding the golf course. The village board will not pass an ordinance approving the zoning until an agreement is reached for purchase of the golf course.

LARSON, VILLAGE Pres. Gary Armstrong and the village attorney have met with the owners of the golf course and have worked out a tentative agreement. The agreement is expected to be delivered to the village hall this week, Larson said.

The three men believe the village will be prepared to take over operation of the golf course by Jan. 1, 1975. It was originally predicted the course could become a municipal facility as soon as this month, but Larson said more time will be needed.

Within two weeks, Larson plans to submit a recommendation to the village board. It will review the recommendation and possibly ask for some revisions before entering into an agreement with the golf course owners.

THE OWNERS have offered to sell the golf course to the village for $11 million. The 120-acre course was appraised more than a year ago and that price was said to be the fair market value. If anything, Larson said the value has increased since that time.

According to officials the village can afford to buy the golf course without an increase in property taxes. The course will be obtained at no cost to residents and will be entirely self-supporting, he added.

The village, he said, has received financial statements from the owners which show the golf course will be a money-making operation.

According to Larson, there are a number of ways the village can go about financing the golf course. However, village officials have not yet decided which method would be the most advantageous for the village.

Two possibilities would be through a revenue bond issue or a general obligation bond issue. The latter would have to be approved by residents in a referendum, but would be better because the village would get a lower interest rate.

OTHER WAYS OF financing it would be through a lease purchase agreement or with matching funds from the federal government. The village was denied federal money last year, but officials say that could change.

Under any of these plans the village would pay for the course with funds obtained through its operation. After operating expenses, there will be sufficient money to pay the principal and interest.

The agreement with the golf course owners, Larson said, probably will allow the village to take over the golf course and pay for it over a five year period.

The Buffalo Grove Park District has requested the village at some future time consider designating part of the property for uses other than golf. Armstrong said he would be willing to discuss the possibility with the park district.

In the future, village officials have said the golf course may have additional facilities, such as tennis courts, swimming pools and picnic areas.

by BETTY LEE

For the past 13 years Mr. and Mrs. John Keyzer of Rolling Meadows packed up their camping trailer and loaded the kids into the car for summer vacation. But not this year.

They were planning to go to California, but because of the lack of gas, the Keyzers are thinking of other ways to take their vacation without worrying about gas. Last year they camped in Florida and getting gas was no problem.

"We have been giving it a lot of thought," said Keyzer. "We want to go to California but now it looks like it's out of the question. I guess we'll have to wait and see what the gas situation's going to be."

The Keyzers were browsing at the gleaming campers, trailers and motor homes at the sixth annual Camping and Travel Show at the Arlington Park Race Track yesterday.

Dealers there know they won't be selling as much of their wares as they did last year at the show. The people are nervous about getting gas, they said.

BILL KERVIN, president of the Chicago and North Western Recreation Vehicle Dealers Assn., which is sponsoring the show, estimates a drop of 15 to 20 per cent on sales at the show this week.

"John Q. Public is sure he is being had," said Kervin of the gasoline shortage. "The people are irritable and it's going to take some time to not be frantic about gas." Kervin added the people are becoming skeptical of whether there is a gasoline shortage.

Along with the decrease in sales, the dealers at the show are expecting a smaller crowd this year. Kervin estimated that 43,000 persons at most will attend, which is about a 30 per cent decrease from last year's attendance of 65,000.

Ernest Andres, who came to the show from Twin Lakes, Wis., was thinking of buying a motor home. "With the gas shortage I wouldn't even consider it," he said.

Other persons were more optimistic about their vacations. Some said they thought the gas shortage will cease by summer and some are considering taking shorter trips.

THE JOHNSONS bought a camper last

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife were camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kervin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped productions, said Kervin. Along with business mismanagement, which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kervin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Ruteway Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hersey on Monday. Hersey is a salesman for a line of trailers and said he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hersey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up.

"You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

"People think that in order to have good camping they have to go far," he said. "They don't realize that places nearby are just as good as those far away."

Though some people are worrying about the gas supplies, the dealers are encouraging people to go out and travel, but closer to home.

The Recreational Vehicle Industry Council has issued a folder on how it is going to confront the fuel shortage.

The council is encouraging the estimated 20 million users of recreational vehicles in the country to travel, but to travel at slower speeds in order to save on mileage and to stay closer to home.

GOING ON A trip may actually help a family to save money the family members would normally have spent on light, gas, electricity, food and other expenses, the council said.

Some of the people attending the show are newcomers to camping and traveling. Others there were like the William Hollands of Fox Lake who travel each year by camper.

"We go to the West coast, Colorado, and across the country," said Holland. Holland and his wife plan to move to California but would have planned to travel less far this summer because of the gas shortage.

For those who are counting on a camping trip this year, there are more than 23,000 campsites within 100 miles of Chicago. It doesn't take more than a tankful of gasoline to go camping, Kervin said, adding he hopes the show, which ends Sunday, will convince people to take shorter trips.

7 area residents chosen for board of new hospital

by LYNN ASINOF

Seven residents representing three suburbs have been chosen to serve on the board of directors for the satellite branch of the Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital proposed for just south of Wheeling.

The board members were chosen so Franklin Boulevard can seek approval for the satellite branch at the April meeting of the state hospital licensing board. If the branch is approved, Franklin Boulevard plans to build a 223-bed facility just south of Wheeling on Schoenbeck Road.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said he was given primary responsibility for choosing the seven board members, who will operate under a larger Franklin Boulevard board.

"They applied, and based on what they had on their qualifications we felt certainly they would be an asset to the board of directors," Scanlon told The Herald yesterday.

Allegedly handled Wickes payoff

Phillips identified as 'bagman' in $50,000 extortion

by BOB CASEY and AL MESSERSCHMIDT
Nicholas Phillips, county zoning board employee indicted in the Wheeling shake-down scandal, has been identified by a key government witness as the bagman who collected $50,000 extorted from Wickes Inc. in 1971 at a North Side Chicago hotel.

The witness picked Phillips' photograph from several others last December, ending an intensive search for the suspected bagman less than two months before Phillips and five others were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The payoff allegedly took place Dec. 30, 1971, at the Lake Shore Drive Holiday Inn, 644 N. Lake Shore Dr., according to information contained in defense motions filed in U. S. District Court by Phillips' attorney, Louis Carbonaro.

IN THE MOTIONS, Carbonaro asked federal prosecutors to reveal the identity of the witness, which has been a closely kept secret since the $50,000 payoff was discovered late last year by investigators.

He also asked U. S. District Court Judge Prentice Marshall to throw out evidence of Phillips' identification by the witness, which he said "was induced by the actions of the (federal) agents" in violation of his client's constitutional rights.

Carbonaro said Phillips, 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was photographed Dec. 2 against his will after he was subpoenaed by a special grand jury investigating corruption in Wheeling village government. The photograph was then compared to photos of other persons by the prosecution witness, who identified Phillips.

The other persons photographed, Carbonaro charged, were "not dressed in similar fashion to the defendant or of similar age, color of hair, height, weight, build or general description."

The defense motions also revealed that the U. S. attorney has records that telephone calls were made between the phones of Phillips and his cousin, James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman also indicted by the grand jury Jan. 31.

STAVROS, 3705 Whirlaway Dr., Northbrook, has been a behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling village government for almost a decade. He faces a total of 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in alleged shakedowns of developers seeking zoning and building permits in Wheeling.

Stavros was not named in either of the two extortion indictments involving Wickes.

According to Carbonaro, the U. S. Attorney's Office plans to submit the telephone records as evidence in the case against Phillips and Ira Colitz, a former county zoning board member charged with aiding Phillips in the alleged shakedown of Wickes.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison acknowledged the existence of the records, which he said "show a relationship" between Stavros and Phillips. Kadison said, however, that "we have no evidence against Stavros in this case."

The Herald has learned that records of calls made from telephones of key suspects and others in the Wickes case provided important leads in tracking down persons involved in the shakedown scheme.

INFORMATION ABOUT the $50,000

payoff apparently was turned up late in the investigation, which started more than a year ago.

Rumors that certain village officials were given truckloads of free furniture by the company at the time zoning was approved circulated in the community for more than a year. Information on the furniture deliveries was given to federal investigators early in the probe by The Herald.

Through company records, the deliveries were traced from a Wickes warehouse in West Allis, Wis., to the homes of two indicted village officials, former trustee Michael Valenza and Building Dir. William Bieber.

Bieber was charged with extortion, conspiracy and perjury in the alleged furniture shakedown. Valenza, also accused of receiving extorted furniture, pleaded guilty Feb. 28 to one conspiracy count after the U. S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second count of extortion.

There has been no indication of any connection between the Bieber-Valenza indictment and the Phillips-Colitz indictment. Bieber, Phillips and Colitz have pleaded innocent.

TRIAL DATE FOR the Phillips-Colitz case has been scheduled for May 6. Judge Marshall is scheduled to rule shortly before the trial on the motion to throw out the photograph identification.

The Phillips defense motions came after a pretrial conference among Carbonaro and the prosecutors, Kadison and Assistant U. S. Atty. Howard Stone. Judge Marshall is expected to decide which defense requests for additional information must be answered by the government.

In addition to the identity of the government's key witness, Carbonaro has asked for records from the Chicago law firm that represented Wickes before village zoning officials in 1971. He also wants to know what happened to the $50,000 his client is accused of extorting from the company.

Sources involved in the investigation say the government has solid evidence tracing the payoff to Phillips, evidence apparently provided in part by the secret witness. What happened to the money after that, sources have indicated, will be up to Phillips to tell.

Carbonaro said Phillips has appeared before the grand jury but the defense attorney declined to comment on his client's testimony. Carbonaro also declined comment when asked if Phillips was present at the Holiday Inn on the day the alleged payoff was made.

ALSO TESTIFYING before the grand jury have been several key officials of Wickes. The decision to make a payoff to obtain zoning for the Wickes store, 351 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling, was made at a high corporate level, The Herald has learned.

The secret witness, however, apparently is not a company official. One source described him as an "outsider."

When the witness confronted investigators with his knowledge of the payoff, he had only a description of the bagman who picked up the $50,000. He described the man as dark, slender, just under six feet tall and 30 to 40 years old.

Armed with the description, investigators began to scour Wheeling in search of known associates of officials believed to be involved in the shakedown scheme. Apparently, telephone records helped trace the bagman to the telephone of a county official.

Phillips was eventually subpoenaed by the grand jury and was photographed twice for identification purposes, after a federal building camera malfunctioned the first time. His photograph was then shown to the government witness and Phillips was identified as the bagman.

Architect recommended for public works garage

A special committee in Buffalo Grove has recommended an architect for the proposed public works garage and the village is expected to award a contract for construction soon.

Trustee Thomas Mahoney, chairman of the committee, Wednesday said his group interviewed five architects before making its decision. He asked that the name of the firm chosen not be made public until the four other firms are notified by the village.

According to Mahoney, the village board agreed with the committee's recommendation in an executive session Monday night, but a formal agreement must be signed before the matter becomes official. The village attorney is reviewing the agreement and it should be ready for board consideration within two weeks, he said.

ALTHOUGH THE village board must make the final decision on the site for the garage, Mahoney said he believes the 4.9 acres across from the village hall is still the most probable location.

The site is to be donated to the village in exchange for the village board's decision to grant multi-family zoning on three parcels surrounding the Buffalo Grove Golf Club.

"For right now we're still looking at the site across from the village hall. But that could change because it is a village board decision," Mahoney said.

Once the architect is hired, Mahoney said part of his job will be to evaluate possible sites in the area that would be suitable for the garage. "Although the site across the street probably is adequate, it is possible the architect will find it has some shortcomings and will suggest another location," he said.

VILLAGE MGR. Daniel Larson has said the site, at the southeast corner of Lake Cook Road and Raupp Boulevard is the best location available to the village. The site will give public works vehicles good access to all parts of the village and will not create a hardship for homeowners.

The garage will cost an estimated $500,000 and probably will be paid for with federal revenue sharing funds. Larson has suggested the village take out a loan and repay it over a five-year period as the funds become available.

Mahoney said the size of the garage has not been determined. The architect, he said, will aid the village in determining what type of facility is needed to fulfill the village's needs.

Larson said a garage is badly needed because vehicles stored outside deteriorate much faster and also are open to vandalism. He estimates the village loses as much as $25,000 annually because it does not have a garage.

In addition to being a shelter for vehicles, the garage will give public works employees an adequate place to repair and maintain equipment.

Mahoney said he is hopeful construction on a public works facility could be started by this fall. The decision, he said, however, must be made by the village board.

Local corruption in probe continues

by LYNN ASINOF

Investigations of official corruption in Wheeling and other Chicago suburbs will not be affected by the dismissal of the special federal grand jury which recently indicted six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials.

Samuel Skinner, chief of the U. S. Attorney's Office special investigations division, yesterday told the Herald that matters handled by that grand jury will be transferred to other grand juries.

"We have several additional grand juries sitting," Skinner said. "The matters that have not been resolved will be transferred to the other grand juries. The transfer is already under way."

Skinner said the Wheeling investigation is continuing, as are the investigations in other suburbs. The U. S. Attorney's Office has said more indictments are expected in the Wheeling case.

The 10 men and seven women on the special grand jury were discharged Tuesday by Chief Judge Edwin Robson of the U. S. District Court. The grand jury, empaneled in March 1972, returned more than 200 federal indictments during its two year existence.

SKINNER PRAISED the grand jury and said it was dismissed because it had been sitting longer than any grand jury in the history of the Northern District of Illinois.

"They did yeoman duty, and since there are other juries sitting it would be unfair to inflict any further hardship on them," Skinner said.

Currently, seven federal grand juries are in existence. Four are special grand juries, and three are regular grand juries that have been granted extended terms, according to Skinner.

In dismissing the 17-member panel, Judge Robson praised their two years of work. "We are deeply indebted to each of you," he said. "This community is a much better place because of the service you have rendered."

Most recently, the grand jury indicted six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials after a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses.

ONE OF THE SIX, former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit extortion last week. The guilty plea came after the U. S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second charge of extortion against Valenza. Sentencing is scheduled for April 2.

Others indicted and pleading innocent were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman and behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling government; Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee and Stavros' cousin; William Bieber, Wheeling building director; William Hart, former Wheeling trustee, and Ira Colitz, county zoning board member who resigned following the indictments.

Trial dates have been set for March 25 in one of the Stavros cases and for May 6 for Colitz and Phillips. Other trials have not yet been scheduled.

The grand jury was responsible for indictments against Hoffman Estates officials and developers involved in a zoning scandal. It also returned indictments against almost three dozen Chicago policemen.

The group started out with 23 persons, but illness and pregnancies reduced the number during the two years.

7 area residents picked for hospital board board include:

• June Orlovski, 667 S. Milwaukee Ave., chairman of the Wheeling Youth Commission.

• Leland Wilson, 417 Meadowbrook Ln., a member of the Wheeling Relations Commission and wife of Wheeling Park Board commissioner Hugh Wilson.

• Wilbur Glen Davis, 15 E. Jeffrey Ave., husband of beautification committee chairman Esther Davis.

• Joel J. Meyers, 101 Meadowbrook Ln., who listed his occupation as manager of technical employment.

Appointed from Buffalo Grove were:

• Richard J. Roman 488 Longwood Dr. a former member of the Wheeling Library District Board, who was appointed in Oct. 1971, and resigned last year.

• Arthur E. Sager, 160 Buffalo Grove

Rd., who works for a fire alarm manufacturer. Sager said yesterday that he applied for the board position because "I thought it would be a good way to become active."

THE FINAL BOARD member is Marty Amsler, 1316 Tano Ln., Mount Prospect. Amsler, a former professional football player with the Chicago Bears and the Green Bay Packers, said he applied for the board because it seemed like a worthy cause.

"I think a hospital is needed up in our area," he said, noting the distance to other hospitals in the Northwest suburbs.

Scanlon said in all probably less than a dozen residents applied for the board positions. He said, however, that many of the applicants said they would serve "if needed."

THE BOARD members met with hospital representatives last week for a final review. Scanlon said that if all goes well and state approval is granted, the board's structure and activities will become more defined. Plans for the hospital were first announced last fall by Scanlon. Hospital consultant Norman Davis has worked since that time preparing studies on the need for a hospital in the area.

Decisions on the full-range of services to be offered by the hospital have been delayed until state approval is granted. At present, however, the hospital is not planning to include either a pediatrics or obstetrics ward.

Franklin Boulevard is continuing to negotiate for property on Schoenbeck Road between Dundee and Hintz roads. An option on the property is needed before plans can be presented to the state hospital licensing board.

'Good lead' in fire at theater

Schaumburg police Wednesday were working on a "good lead" in connection with the arson fire Tuesday night at the Woodfield I Theatre.

Richard Rodems, 62, of Palatine, the manager, who suffered a heart attack at the theater after the fire, was listed yesterday in serious condition but improving at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Police report 100 patrons were safely evacuated from the theater after two explosions went off seconds apart at 10:10 p.m. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

THE EXPLOSIONS, believed to have been caused by two cans of lighter fluid found at the scene, were followed by flames which spread along the back stage area to backdrop and curtains. Boxes and rubbish were also found which appeared to have been deliberately stacked in the backstage area.

The incident was the second arson attempt this week. On Monday night, caps removed from a gas meter at the theater caused gas to leak and a lighted cigarette was discovered nearby.

"It was business as usual" yesterday, said Edward Seguin, spokesman for ABC Great States Theatres, owners of the local film house.

Passes or refunds were offered in the lobby as patrons of Woodfield I departed because of the fire, he added.

Band supporters plan paper drive

The Wheeling High School Instrumental League will conduct a paper drive March 29 through April 1.

Papers may be dropped off at Heritage Park, 222 S. Wolf Rd., and at Wheeling High School. A permanent paper bin is located behind the Wheeling municipal building, 253 W. Dundee Rd. Members of the Wheeling band will also pick up papers weekly. Arrangements may be made through Shirley Missing, 537-2923.

Mrs. Missing said a private company is now operating in the area picking up paper and selling it for recycling.

It should not be confused with the Wheeling Instrumental League which will donate proceeds from its paper drive to the Wheeling High School bands, she said.

Harper expands courses at library

The second eight-week session of community education courses offered by Harper Junior College at the Wheeling Public Library will include classes in handwriting analysis, genealogy and interior design and decorating.

Handwriting analysis will be taught from 7 to 9 p.m. Mondays beginning March 11. Classes in genealogy will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursdays and interior design and decorating will be available from 10 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

There is a fee for the courses, and classes are subject to cancellation if enrollment in each is less than 12 persons.

For further information, call the Wheeling library at 537-4011 or enroll directly with the Harper College Continuing Education office by calling 397-3000, extension 301.

Stevenson High wrapup Muralist will give demonstration

Chicago muralist Mark Rogovin will give a demonstration and talk next Thursday, March 14, at Adlai Stevenson High School, Dist. 125, Prairie View.

The all-day program, titled "Walls Alive," will include the painting of a mural on one of the walls of the school by a group of students under Rogovin's direction.

The mural, as an art and political form, with special emphasis on the Mexican and Chicano murals, will be the theme of the artist's talk.

Rogovin, muralist with the Public Art Workshop, is a graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design and received a master of fine arts degree from the Art Institute of Chicago. He also studied with David Alfaro Siqueiros, Mexican muralist.

Science fiction award

Bob Bergland, Stevenson High School senior, won the top award in the school library's science fiction writing contest which ended this week.

Bergland received a $25 savings bond for his story, "Black Knight to White Rock."

Other winners included Mark Eibert for his story "A Question of Loyalties," Jennie Johnson for "A Twist of the Mind" and Wendy Wolf for "Sunset."

'Stellar evolution' lecture

Dr. William Buscombe, Northwestern University astronomy professor, lectured on "Stellar Evolution" to freshman astronomy classes at Stevenson High School this week.

His address, which included a discussion of the physical processes taking place among stars and the distribution of galaxies in space, was video-taped for use in other classes.

Nurses' aid honored

Debbie Poutlon, a mid-term 1974 Stevenson High School graduate, recently completed a six-week nurses' aid course with highest honors at Conell Memorial Hospital.

Debbie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Poutlon of Mundelein.

Forest View boundary vote Monday?

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A change in the boundaries of four Dist. 214 high schools will affect students living in Mount Prospect Elementary School Dist. 57 and Wheeling Elementary School Dist. 21 if it is adopted by the Dist. 214 Board of Education Monday.

The Dist. 214 administration has recommended that Forest View High School students living in Dist. 57 be sent to Prospect High School next year and Hersey High School students living in Dist. 21 be sent to Wheeling High School.

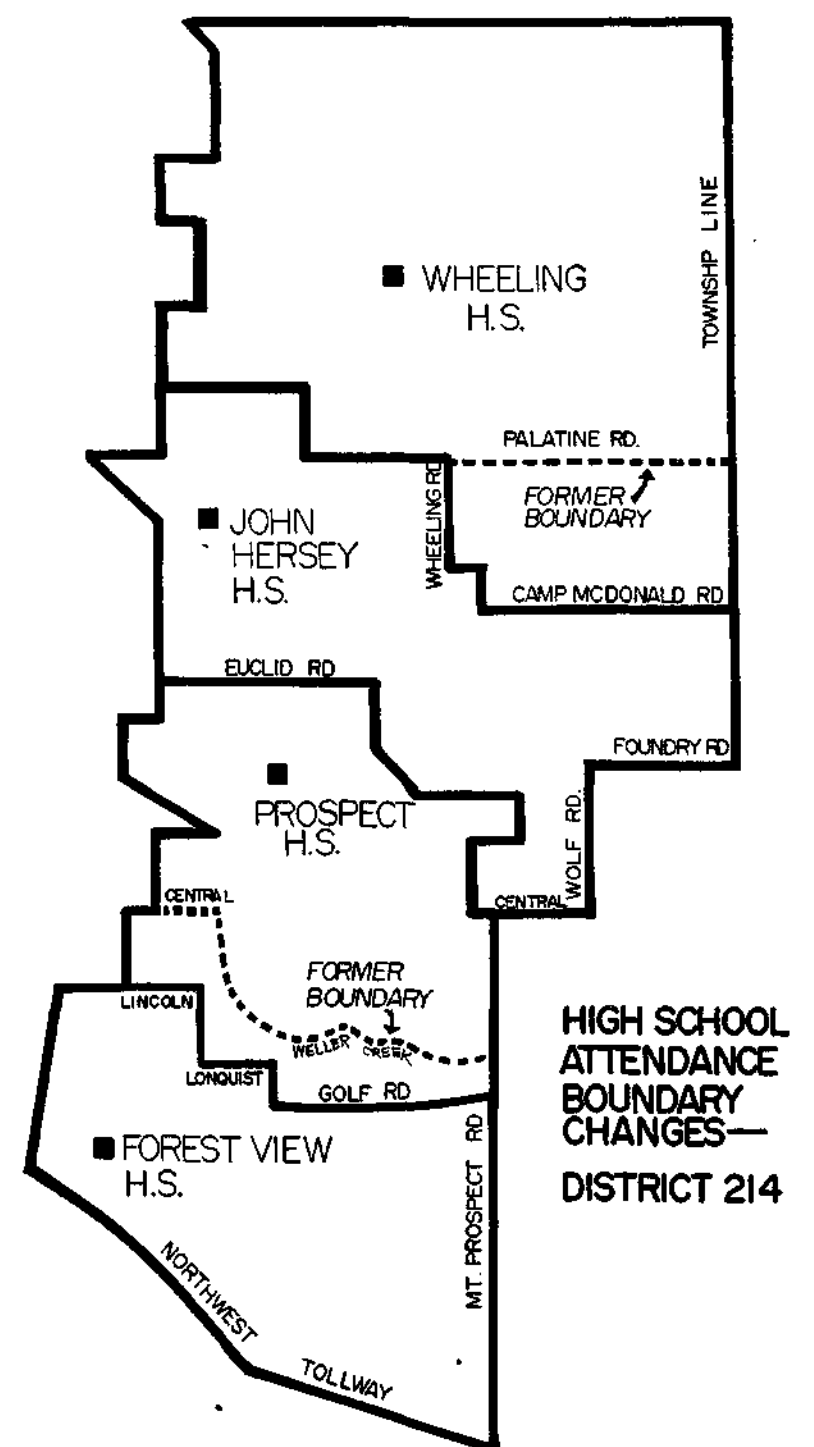

The change in boundaries would be effective next September but Dist. 214 officials have asked the board to give students the option of staying in their original school. All students now attending Forest View or Hersey would have the option of staying there until graduation, next year's incoming freshmen would have the same option and so would students whose older brothers or sisters attend the original school. Free bus transportation will be provided by the district for students who decide to stay in their original school.

DIST. 214 officials originally proposed a boundary change to relieve overcrowding at Forest View High School. All Dist. 214 schools are designed for 2,500 students except Hersey which has a capacity of 2,750. Enrollment next year at Forest View is expected to be 2,915 and projections show the enrollment will peak in 1977 with 3,320.

If the boundary changes are not made Hersey will have 2,790 students next year, Prospect will have 2,395 and Wheeling will have 1,960. Dist. 214 officials have now decided to change the boundaries for Wheeling and Hersey High Schools to balance enrollment there. Wheeling's enrollment is lower than the other schools because the area has a large number of apartment units which have not generated as many high school students as school officials anticipated.

The boundary change would remove students from Forest View and Hersey and place them in Prospect and Wheeling. The Dist. 57 area affected by the change generates about 110 high school students per year and the Dist. 21 area generates about 100 students per year.

The Dist. 214 board moved its meeting

Monday at 8 p.m. from the board room to the Prospect High School auditorium so parents can attend the meeting and express their views on the recommended changes.

THE BOARD has had two meetings to discuss the boundary change in recent weeks. Both were attended by parents, primarily from the Des Plaines area of Forest View High School who came to ask the board not to move their children to another high school.

Thinks schools will get full share of aid

Walker aid cutbacks won't hurt schools here: Gill

by JILL BETTNER

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said yesterday he is confident Gov. Daniel Walker's decision this week to withhold an estimated $12 million in state aid to Illinois school districts this fiscal year will not adversely affect local schools.

Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

Gill said he believes the governor

plans to transfer unused funds in State Supt. Michael J. Bakalis' office to make up for the projected deficit. Gill's belief is based, he said, on information obtained from legislators, the Illinois Assn. of School Administrators and the Illinois Assn. of School Boards.

WALKER ANNOUNCED Monday he will not ask the state legislature to pass a deficiency appropriation to cover the deficit created last summer when the governor cut the original school aid appropriation by $45 million.

Several other local superintendents have expressed the fear that Walker's decision not to seek a deficiency appropriation will mean that Illinois school districts will receive only 11 state aid payments this fiscal year instead of the scheduled 12.

"The governor has not said that he'll wretch on the payments," Bill said. "I'm sure we'll get the 12th payment and the governor has every intention of transferring funds in Bakalis' office."

Such a transfer would have to be approved by the state legislature in the coming spring session, Gill said. Although Walker would have the power to veto a measure to make the transfer, he probably wouldn't because it would be a bad political move, Gill added.

IF, FOR SOME reason, the state did not come through with the 12 full payments Dist. 21 is scheduled to receive this fiscal year, Gill estimated the district would lose as much as $250,000.

The budget for the 1973-74 school year was determined on the basis of 12 equal state aid payments, the superintendent said. If the 12th payment is dropped, the district probably would have to issue tax anticipation warrants (TAWs) to make up the loss.

"I'm sure we could issue enough TAWs to cover the difference, but that would be taking local money when it's the state's obligation to provide those funds," Gill said.

"I really believe we're going to get the money, but if we don't you can bet we're going to raise hell about it."

THE LOSS OF the promised 12th state aid payment to Dist. 96, which serves the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove and Long Grove would amount to about $23,600, according to Supt. William Hitzeman.

A recent change in property assessments in Lake County, which has rolled back rates to 1972 levels, has already cut the estimated revenue in that district by at least $91,000.

The new assessment plan will also cause a delay in distribution of tax monies to Lake County schools, forcing Dist. 96 to issue TAWs to cover operating costs for about two months next summer.

Hitzeman said he was not aware of any plan to transfer state funds to meet the 12-payment schedule.

Youth, 19, home on leave

by JOE SWICKARD

"I didn't really think about it. I was just thinking about stopping the cab," said Marine Pvt. James T. Beck.

Beck, 19, of 2315 Olive, Arlington Heights, interrupted his leave from Camp Lejeune, N.C., Tuesday night to stop a runaway car before it crashed into a building in Harwood Heights.

"I was driving down Montrose when this cab turned left in front of me. A woman was leaning out the window yelling and I could see there wasn't a driver," Beck said.

Deborah Pagni, Chicago, had just entered the cab driven by James Russell when she got "a funny feeling."

Miss Pagni said, "I had just told him the address and I got a funny feeling. The driver was super quiet and you know cab drivers usually talk a lot. I looked at him and I could see he was having a heart attack."

Pvt. James T. Beck

Russell was struggling for breath and trying to control the cab, she said. "I knew something was wrong but there was nothing I could do. I was afraid to jump into the front seat. The only thing to do was jump out, so I did," she said.

"THE LADY JUMPED out and she was screaming that the driver had had a heart attack. So I stopped my car and ran after it," Beck said.

"I was running behind the cab and the guy was chasing it. He caught it in time. He jumped in and stopped it before it hit the building," Miss Pagni said.

Beck, a former member of the swimming team at Maine East High School, chased the cab as it headed for a brick apartment building. It took him about 30 yards to catch the cab which was traveling driverless at 10 to 15 miles per hour, according to Miss Pagni.

"I got in and stepped on the brakes I looked at the driver first and then called in on the cab's radio," Beck said.

Beck stopped the cab two feet from the brick wall.

"I saw he stopped it okay, so I ran to a restaurant and called an ambulance for the driver," Miss Pagni said.

RUSSELL, 45, of River Grove, was taken to Resurrection Hospital for treatment and tests. He was listed in good condition.

"I'll tell you I was scared. It's terrible knowing there's something wrong and you can't help. When I was in the car and yelling out the window I could see people were concerned but they couldn't do anything. I was frightened," she said.

Beck said modestly he did not think of too much at the time. His concern was stopping the cab before it was too late.

"I just stopped my car and started after it," he said.

A spokesman for Gladstone Cab Co., Elmwood Park, owners of the cab, said, "It's great it is really something. We're grateful to the marine for doing something in the emergency."

Year-round and Sunday horse racing proposed

An overhauling of the state horse racing system, including the allowing of Sunday and year-round racing, was proposed Wednesday by the Illinois Legislative Investigative Commission.

The proposed sweeping changes include a "complete ban" on public officials owning race track stock; awarding of racing dates for a three-year period; and creation of a professional three-man racing board.

Arlington Park Race Track president Jack Loomie could not be reached for comment on the new proposals. However, he endorsed a similar bill to allow Sunday racing last year, saying horse racing was not unlike other professional sports such as baseball and football.

The report was the result of a year-long study, headed by Charles Siragusa, executive director of the Investigative Commission.

Present regulations ban horse races on Sundays and limit the racing season to spring, summer and fall.

THE REPORT recommended tracks be given dates over three years. Tracks are now awarded the dates yearly for the upcoming season.

The appointed six-member Illinois Racing Commission would also be scrapped if the report and its recommended legislation becomes law. In its place would be a professional, salaried three-man board, according to the report.

The new report contains portions of several bills to reform racing that were introduced last year. The bills, which would have changed the racing board make-up and permitted the year-round and Sunday racing dates, did not become law.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said of the earlier bills, "I don't think this community would be delighted with Sunday racing."

THE REPORT ALSO urges creation of a statewide race track security force. The commission said current security practices at state tracks are ineffective.

"... the commission believes that criminal practices are not as widespread as some detractors allege, (but) the commission is convinced that a serious problem nevertheless prevails," the report said.

The report was critical of present enforcement of rules at Illinois tracks. "Criminal prosecutions for illegal practices are virtually nonexistent," it said.

The commission said the establishment of a bureau of race track security, funded and operated by the state, would alleviate the problem.

Shelter Inc. seeks couples to serve as foster parents

Area couples interested in serving as short-term foster parents are being sought by Shelter Inc., a local child welfare agency planning to offer care and supervision for temporarily homeless children.

Volunteers are needed to provide emergency foster homes for abused, abandoned, neglected and runaway children in Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships.

Shelter Inc. has been in the planning for a year and a half and the agency hopes to begin operation this spring.

A board of directors was recently elected to head the agency, including representatives from area schools, legal, law enforcement and youth agencies.

The four townships to be served by the agency have granted Shelter Inc., a total of $31,600 for the first year of operation.

The agency is in the final stages of obtaining licensing by the Illinois State Department of Children and Family Services and will work closely with its parent organization as an extension to provide emergency homes in the immediate area.

A training program will be offered for all prospective foster parents. The agency is also looking for volunteers to help with typing, phoning or giving speeches about Shelter Inc., in the area.

Persons wanting to volunteer to help or wanting more information may call Jennie Riechers at 259-2527 evenings, or Susan Roberts at 392-6796.

Behrel may start 'housecleaning' project early

by STEVE BROWN

Although the official start of spring is still several weeks off, Mayor Herbert Behrel appears to be planning a housecleaning of possible major proportions.

Behrel, who has come under fire from two city advisory commissions in the past week over planning for the proposed downtown redevelopment project, said yesterday he will not reappoint Environmental Commission Chairman Richard Tabatt. Tabatt's appointment expires at the end of this month.

In addition to not reappointing Tabatt, Behrel hinted at his regular weekly press conference that he may have plans for a large-scale housecleaning of his sleeve.

"It might be time to bring in some new blood to those commissions," Behrel said.

THE MAYOR HAS blasted both the environmental and plan commissions for their criticism of plans for both the proposed $112 million Superblock office and retail complex and a 400-space parking garage on Ellinwood Street.

The controversy surfaced last week, after the plan commission reiterated its recommendation that the $16 million garage not be located on Ellinwood Street. However, the commission did recommend that the structure be located at Pearson and Prairie streets.

The environmental commission described the project as being unacceptable. The commission said the project would cause additional traffic congestion in the downtown area.

Behrel generally took exception to the charges set down by both groups, indicating he believed they had gone beyond their realm of authority in their statements on the project.

"If there was someone interested in killing the redevelopment project, the plan commission and the environmental commission are doing a good job," Behrel said.

BEHREL REFUSED to elaborate on reports that he was preparing amendments to the city code that would more precisely define the authority of some of the city's advisory panels.

However, The Herald has learned the research for the code changes was sent to the mayor three weeks ago.

"I can't tell you anything at this time. I am not ready to discuss it and I think it would be a bad time to discuss," Behrel said.

He added that he had been thinking of the reported changes for some time. The mayor said he had no idea as to when he might present any changes to the full city council.

"We will present the matter at the proper time," Behrel said.

THE MAYOR ALSO suggested that the fact that the plan commission and environmental commission reports surfaced at the same time was more than coincidence.

While Behrel did not name names, he suggested some aldermen were behind the new move. Several aldermen who have repeatedly voted against Superblock-related issues denied they had any role in the new incident.

IT DOES APPEAR that the new hassle may rekindle a heated council debate on the Superblock issue. Some aldermen who have opposed the matter, privately admitted they were glad to see other citizens raising questions about the project.

Others indicated they might oppose any new nominations to the environmental commission if Behrel does not reappoint Tabatt.

When told of Behrel's comment, Tabatt said it appears the mayor does not want anyone on the commission "who will get in his way."

"There seems to be an indication that the mayor does not want the commission to be of service to the community," Tabatt added.

by BETTY LEE

For the past 13 years Mr. and Mrs. John Keyzer of Rolling Meadows packed up their camping trailer and loaded the kids into the car for summer vacation. But not this year.

They were planning to go to California, but because of the lack of gas, the Keyzers are thinking of other ways to take their vacation without worrying about gas. Last year they camped in Florida and getting gas was no problem.

"We have been giving it a lot of thought," said Keyzer. "We want to go to California but now it looks like it's out of the question. I guess we'll have to wait and see what the gas situation's going to be."

The Keyzers were browsing at the gleaming campers, trailers and motor homes at the sixth annual Camping and Travel Show at the Arlington Park Race Track yesterday.

Dealers there know they won't be selling as much of their wares as they did last year at the show. The people are nervous about getting gas, they said.

BILL KERVIN, president of the Chicago Recreation Vehicle Dealers Assn., which is sponsoring the show, estimates a drop of 15 to 20 per cent on sales at the show this week.

"John Q. Public is sure he is being had," said Kervin of the gasoline shortage. "The people are irritable and it's going to take some time to not be frantic about gas." Kervin added the people are becoming skeptical of whether there is a gasoline shortage.

Along with the decrease in sales, the dealers at the show are expecting a smaller crowd this year. Kervin estimated that 43,000 persons at most will attend, which is about a 30 per cent decrease from last year's attendance of 65,000.

Ernest Andres, who came to the show from Twin Lakes, Wis., was thinking of buying a motor home. "With the gas shortage I wouldn't even consider it," he said.

Other persons were more optimistic about their vacations. Some said they thought the gas shortage will cease by summer and some are considering taking shorter trips.

THE JOHNSONS bought a camper last

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife go camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kervin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped production, said Kervin. Along with business mismanagement which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kervin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Rite-way Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hersey on Monday. Hersey is a salesman for a line of trailers and said he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hersey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up.

"You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

"People think that in order to have good camping they have to go far," he said. "They don't realize that places nearby are just as good as those far away."

Though some people are worrying about the gas supplies, the dealers are encouraging people to go out and travel, but closer to home.

The Recreational Vehicle Industry Council has issued a folder on how it is going to confront the fuel shortage.

The council is encouraging the estimated 20 million users of recreational vehicles in the country to travel, but to travel at slower speeds in order to save on mileage and to stay closer to home.

GOING ON A trip may actually help a family to save money the family members would normally have spent on light, gas, electricity, food and other expenses, the council said.

Some of the people attending the show are newcomers to camping and traveling. Others there were like the William Hollands of Fox Lake who travel each year by camper.

"We go to the West coast, Colorado, and across the country," said Holland. Holland and his wife plan to move to California but would have planned to travel less far this summer because of the gas shortage.

For those who are counting on a camping trip this year there are more than 23,000 campsites within 100 miles of Chicago. It doesn't take more than a tankful of gasoline to go camping, Kervin said, adding he hopes the show, which ends Sunday, will convince people to take shorter trips.

School board member denies he'll move

School Dist. 63 board member Jerry Abern yesterday denied charges that he intends to move outside the district.

Abern, a member of the East Maine elementary school board since September of 1968, said he has no intentions of moving outside Dist. 63 boundaries. He admitted his house has been for sale since December but said he plans to take it off the market April 1.

"We've been trying to sell our house because we want a larger one. We've been looking all over, not just outside the district," Abern said.

The school board member said he hadn't found "any real good buys" and decided not to sell his house.

Dist. 63 residents expressed concern that Abern might not announce plans to move outside district boundaries until after the April 13 school board election. Any vacancies created after elections would be filled by school board appointment.

ABERN, REELECTED to the school board in 1972, has one more year to serve in his term.

Citizen concern over Abern's possible resignation was apparently prompted by an incident last April when a Maine Township High School board member postponed announcing his resignation until after elections, allowing the school board to fill his vacancy by appointment.

A spokesman for the state superintendent of public instructions' office said the school district could add another vacancy on the ballot by asking citizens to vote for three instead of two candidates. He said there is no definite cutoff time for altering the ballot.

Labor unions head the list

Mikva campaign donors told

With political education committees of various labor organizations leading the way, former Democratic U. S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva reported collecting $20,482 in the campaign contributions during the past two months.

Mikva, who is seeking to unseat U. S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, pledged last year to reveal all contributors to his campaign no matter how small their donation might be.

The largest single contribution contained in the second Mikva fund-raising report was made by the Railway Clerks Political League for $3,000. He also received $2,000 from the Chicago Joint Board Political Education Committee.

THE AMALGAMATED Political Education Committee, North Western Officers Trust Account, Machinist Non-Partisan Political League and the United Auto Workers each made $1,000 contributions to Mikva's reelection bid.

While Mikva has been critical of the influence peddling power wielded by some lobby organizations, he said he has set limits to avoid major influence in his campaign by any one group.

"I have set a $3,000 maximum limit on any single contribution so that no one group will have a major influence on the campaign," Mikva said.

He said he has been supported by organized labor groups during his two terms in Congress, but has not allowed their financial support to force him to introduce special interest legislation.

MIKVA HAS BEEN an advocate of publicly financed political campaigns and has testified before Congressional committees reviewing legislation in that area.

Mikva campaign officials announced that of the 377 contributions received during the past two months, more than 200 were less than $10.

"By emphasizing small donations and putting a limit on individual contributions, we are assuring that the interests of a few won't supercede those of the constituency as a whole," said Judy Gaynor, Mikva's finance committee chairman.

Lansing man charged with theft

Des Plaines police have charged a Lansing, Ill., man with theft for allegedly stealing $8,000 given to him by another man in February, 1973, to secure a loan while working as a local loan broker.

The man, identified as Kenneth Summers, 31, was turned over to Des Plaines police Tuesday after being picked up on a local warrant at his home in Lansing by authorities in the suburb.

Des Plaines Police Det. Herb Volberding said that Summers, working as a loan broker for a company known as Kenco out of an office at 999 Touhy Ave., arranged with a man to secure a loan for the purchase of a marina in Murray, Ky.

Volberding said Summers promised the victim, Del Fleming, 32, of Zion, Ill., that Summers would obtain financing for the purchase of the marina and would also become a business partner in the venture.

Fleming put up some $8,000 in earnest money for the service, according to Volberding, who added that Summers disappeared shortly afterward with the amount.

Police were unable to locate Summers for several months until early February when a break developed in the case and his whereabouts were traced. Volberding would not disclose the details.

Summers was released on $5,000 bond and has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court, March 21.

Notre Dame ousts Maine West from regional tourney

Ed Fitzsimons talks about his title, goals

Picking a college—sometimes it's harder than winning a title

Ed Fitzsimons has a problem. Before it's resolved, he might find it even more challenging than the state swim meet.

In case you haven't read it already or tuned in late for the delayed TV broadcast Saturday, St. Viator's star swimmer won the 50-yard freestyle state title. He also barely missed winning the 100 freestyle and anchored the 400 freestyle relay to a second.

Such accomplishments are just dreams to hundreds of Illinois swimmers; goals that will never be achieved.

When he succeeded in the 50, "Fitz" recalled thinking about "going to practice and wondering whether it was worth it. When you're up on the starting block (for the award ceremony), you know it's all worth it. I was pretty happy."

For the present, the heavy, continuous, sometimes boring and almost always exhausting workouts have ceased. Now Ed Fitzsimons is faced with a mental workout — picking a college.

When you consider the cost of a college education (about $20,000), you'd think a young man would leap at the chance for an athletic scholarship. But Ed has always wanted to attend the University of Notre Dame. However, believe it or not, this famous college doesn't have swim scholarships.

Still, two brothers and a sister are now enrolled with one brother — Rick — on the varsity swim team. Ed would love to join him.

Besides no scholarships, there are other hangups for Ed. He's a member of a large family for one thing — nine children in all. Even though his father, a biochemist, it's been difficult helping the oldest children with college expenses, according to Ed.

And then there's the difficulty of being accepted by this very selective institution. According to Irish head swim coach Dennis Stark, "before the girls were on the scene, the school turned down four for every five who applied." Now the odds of becoming a member of the 8,500 enrollment is even tougher. (Ed is presently carrying a 3.6 grade point

Finally, the large number of college scholarship offers along with the thought of adding more burden to his parents may eventually change his mind. There is a certain prestige in receiving a full ride scholarship, too.

"I don't know if I could turn that down or not," says "Fitz" of those offers. He's received several already with more to come in the next couple of weeks. "If it was a good school, it would be hard to turn it down."

"I want to go to Notre Dame. If it didn't accept me, I'd go to the schools that have contacted me."

John Fleck, Ed's coach the last three years, is naturally hoping he'll go to a school with a solid swimming program. Fleck thinks his prize pupil will be a "good 200 man, 100 and 50 man" in college. "His 200 ... there's a lot of potential that hasn't been reached yet."

"I feel very privileged to have coached him," says Fleck. "It took me a while to really get to know him."

"He's very quiet. I think swimming's done a lot for him. It's helped draw him out quite a bit."

Having talked with Ed a year ago after he led his team to the Suburban Catholic Conference title, I can attest to his becoming more outgoing.

As far as future goals are concerned, Ed says he'd "like to swim in the nationals."

If he goes to Notre Dame, he might become the first national qualifier in the school's history.

One thing's for certain — whoever lands this 63 flash will have caught a whopper ... And a winner.

Maine South against Notre Dame — that's the championship pairing for 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Class AA Notre Dame Regional.

The host Dons advanced by winning, 60-47, Wednesday over Maine West before a small crowd.

With Clem Naughton scoring a game high 20 points, the Dons were never behind. They led, 16-2, after the first quarter. West's only points were a field goal by Dan Myska. Naughton had six of Notre Dame's first 10 points.

Notre Dame expanded that margin to 28-12 by halftime. The Warriors drew within an 18-10 deficit before Notre Dame hit the game's next 10 points. Maine went from 5:13 until 0:38 without a point during the second quarter. Then Doug Myers scored a field goal, his only points of the half.

The Warriors made a strong run during the third quarter, outscoring Notre Dame 20-12. But they still trailed 40-32 entering the last quarter.

Glen Dalbke, who played rarely throughout the season, scored 14 points during the second half to keep West in the game. He had eight points during the third period.

A Myers' field goal drew Maine within six points to start the fourth period. But two baskets by John Boyce, his only points of the game, put the Dons back on top, 44-34. They were never seriously threatened afterwards.

Aside from Naughton, Rick Ferima (12) and Mike English (10) were in double figures. Dalbke's point total led Maine with Myers' chipping in 12 and Myska 8 as the Warriors ended their season with a 9-15 record.

'Sky King'—a queen to cadet divers

by K. C. MASON

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — Capt. Maxine "Micki" King has proven her courage in competing under difficult circumstances and she has kept her sense of humor against 4,000-to-1 odds.

Capt. King, known as "Sky King" to the cadets she coaches on the Air Force Academy Diving team, knows becoming an Olympian takes lots of practice and even more determination to try, try again.

The 29-year-old winner of the gold medal on the three-meter board at the 1972 Olympics in Munich said:

"I'm more deeply involved in athletics as a 'has-been' than I was when I was a competitor. I get an equal amount of satisfaction in coaching and watching the fellows improve. I use them as a replacement for my own achievements and feel lucky I can fill the gap left by withdrawing from competition."

Capt. King also is the first woman administrative officer in the history of the athletic department at the 4,000-cadet academy. As the assistant business manager of the department, she handles everything from selling programs at football games to scheduling events for non-revenue sports such as baseball, wrestling, swimming and diving.

She said something amusing happens every day, but the men don't treat her any differently because she is a woman.

"I don't want them to act different because of me," Capt. King said. "Diving and athletics should be a release from their school work and I don't want them to feel inhibited. They don't hide their emotions if they mess up a dive."

"I'm immune from women's lib problems such as equal pay because of my career in the Air Force. I get paid the same as men with the same education, qualifications and rank. The Air Force is good about that."

Why the Air Force?

"It was the right place at the right time sort of thing," Capt. King said. "As a senior in college at the University of Michigan it was easy to drift along and not worry about my future."

"When I graduated in 1966, I knew I wanted to go to the Olympics but knew I had to work to subside. The Air Force came to me, stationed me where I could get the best coaching and agreed to be my sponsor. I had a job and a valuable, responsible career and at the same time could continue my diving."

The diving for Micki started at the Pontiac, Mich. YWCA, when she was in her early teens.

"I entered my first competition when I was 15," she said. "That's kind of late by today's standards but soon I was practicing two or three times a week."

Michigan diving coach Dick Kimball kept her going in college.

"By the time I was 18, I was in two-a-day practices and learning all the dives I needed to become a national competitor," she said. "My first title was on the 10-meter platform at the National AAU championships in California my junior year."

Then came the international events. "I was 24 years old at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico," she said. "That wasn't young age wise but I was totally new to such a huge and magnificent event. That kind of wows you and it's easy to get wrapped up in the splendor and not compete well."

"In Munich, there wasn't anything to surprise me and I wasn't snowed."

Micki showed her courage at the Mexico City events. She made her last dive in the finals with a broken arm.

"I was going into my second to last dive when I miscalculated a take off and struck the diving board with my arm and broke it," she said. "I wasn't able to pull my last dive off very successfully and so dropped from first to fourth place."

Capt. King said her trainer and coach knew her arm was broken but let her finish anyway.

"I had been training for it since I was 16 years old," she said. "That's a number of years to dedicate to something and it never occurred to me not to dive. The Olympic caliber in an athlete means you don't give up when you're that close."

She laid off a year before deciding to train for the games.

"I found that I missed not diving and that I still had a lot of diving in me," she said. "It just killed me to watch meets so I decided I didn't just have to watch."

The determination paid off with her gold medal in 1972.

Micki is now one of four women instructors at the Academy — the other three teach languages — and said her Air Force job still makes her happy.

What about women cadets at the Academy?

"I think women being enrolled in the academy is a way off — perhaps two or three years," she said. "There is no way that one or two girls are going to get in and be students but they might make it in the size of a squadron 100."

"It would be an interesting development to say the least but I think there would be problems adjusting. The guys here have different goals in life other than marriage and family. Any wishy-washy girl who comes here looking for a husband just isn't going to make it."

MSL coaches name all-conference team

by PAUL LOGAN

Swimming Editor

The Mid-Suburban League coaches named 13 athletes to their all-conference swimming and diving team earlier this week.

Leading the list was Charlie Dunn of Arlington, the first four-time winner of this honor in the five-year history of the league. Dunn won a league title every year of his prep career.

Scott Bolin, also a senior, was right behind with his third unanimous honor. His freshman year, Bolin was an honorable mention selection.

Also repeating from last year were Joe Nitch, a junior, of Arlington and Brent Bolin, a sophomore from Elk Grove.

Joining this select team of unanimous choices were also Doug Schlak and Kevin Redig of Forest View, Paul Lindquist and Bill Modica of Wheeling, Jeff Speakman and Tim Brennan of Hersey, Jim Henry of Elk Grove, Brad Busse of Prospect and Kiernan Mack of Arlington.

Landing honorable mention billing

were these athletes — Chris Tague and Bob Larue of Hersey, Dan Woodruff of Buffalo Grove, Chris Prinslow of Prospect, Dixon O'Brien, Pete Wroblewski and Rob Carstens of Arlington and Jeff Slack and Ken and Tom Stahnke of Rolling Meadows.

Trustees appoint McGrenera head of plan board

Elk Grove Village Plan Commission member Richard McGrenera has been selected to act as chairman of the plan commission and Ed Hausner, a former village trustee, has been appointed to a seat on the plan commission.

McGrenera's appointment as chairman came following an executive session of the village board Tuesday.

Hausner's appointment was announced during the board meeting by Village Pres. Charles Zetek.

McGrenera, appointed to the plan commission in early fall of last year is no newcomer to commission service or as an elected official.

He is a former trustee and village clerk and served on the plan commission in the early 1960s.

Hausner, a member of the Elk Grove Village Park District Board for the past nine years will now also hold a seat on the village plan commission.

Zetek described Hausner as a man who has dedicated much of his time working for the community. Hausner, a village resident for the past 16 years, is now serving the second year of a six-year term on the park board.

HE HAS HELD the office of park board president and during the time he worked on the commission the district grew from 23 acres of land and a part-time director to 100 acres, a full-time director and experienced staff.

Hausner is also active in the Illinois Assn. of Park Districts.

Zetek formally accepted plan commission chairman William Shannon's resignation Tuesday. The resignation submitted several weeks ago was not acted on when Shannon submitted it.

Zetek told trustees he wanted to delay action on the resignation until he spoke to Shannon personally about it.

"Shannon told me he cannot reconsider his resignation as chairman or even remain on the commission as a member because of added job responsibilities," said Zetek.

Shannon has served on the commission since his appointment in 1968. He was appointed chairman in June, 1971.

At Ned Brown Forest Preserve

Elk herd will move to a new clearing

by BOB GALLAS

Elk Grove Township's legendary elk herd, a long-time fixture along the north side of Higgins Road in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve, will be moving to a new home by the end of the year.

Their present home is slated to become a lake as part of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed project, and has made it necessary to move the herd to a new location within the forest preserve, according to James Mattson, supervisor for the northwest district of the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Mattson said plans now call for the herd to be moved to the open part of the forest preserve on the northwest corner of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads.

FORESTRY CREWS have already started preliminary clearing work at the site the herd is presently occupying. Mattson said a parking lot will be constructed at the new corner site for visitors and bids will probably be let this summer for a fence enclosure to hold the 12-member herd of elk.

Mattson added the timetable for the move isn't definite, since both federal and state monies are involved in the project, which may cause some delays, depending on the release of funds.

Mattson said the herd probably won't be moved until cold weather sets in this November and the herd moves in to take feed left by forest preserve personnel. Otherwise, the rest of the herd would tend to run off once the rounding up began, according to Mattson.

HOW DO YOU MOVE a herd of wild elk?

"We'll tranquilize them and then load them on trucks for the short trip down the street," said Mattson. The whole move shouldn't take longer than an hour or so," he added.

Two of the herd, one of which is part of what Mattson described as the "old herd strain," will be shipped to an Indiana state park sometime next week.

Another member of the herd which has been running loose since last year is still running free. The 2-year-old male was sighted by several motorists on Higgins and Arlington Heights roads earlier this year, but is now deep within the preserve, according to Mattson. The elk has successfully managed to elude forest preserve and zoo personnel trying to capture it and is becoming smarter with each day of freedom, he said.

Boys' Baseball still needs boys

Elk Grove Boys' Baseball is still in need of youngsters for the coming season.

Although there are openings for boys at all levels, ages 8 to 14, there is a special need for boys to fill the 8-year-old instructional league. Those interested in joining the instructional league can do so by contacting Bob Hagglund at 439-0221.

Registration information for boys 9 to 14 can be obtained by calling Dave Forrester at 437-3579.

Boys' Baseball late registration fees are $20 for the first child, $17 for the second and $14 for the third child in addition to a $10 per family participation fee. The fee is returned at the end of the year if one or both parents donates time by coaching, managing, working in the concession stands or other duties.

Library approves method for reviewing complaints

The Elk Grove Village Library board has unanimously approved a new procedure for reviewing patron complaints on library materials.

The complaint system involves a detailed form which must be filled out by anyone objecting to a specific library selection. The form asks if the person has read the entire book, what specific pages were objectionable, why the passage was objectionable and what alternative selection should replace the book.

The purpose of the system, according to administrative librarian Mary Clark, is to provide a written route to handle patron complaints on books.

MISS CLARK said the complaint system does not mean the library intends to remove books from the shelves. Library policy states that a book may only be removed by court order.

"Instead, it will give us a chance to explain to the person why we selected the book for our collection," said Miss Clark. "After all, we should have had a reason for buying that book — it should have been a good choice in the beginning."

In other action at Tuesday night's meeting, the board heard a report from Miss Clark on the status of a new newsletter, which will be mailed to members of the Elk Grove Village business community next week.

The library newsletter will be mailed to about 1,000 village businesses, listing library programs that would interest businessmen, along with listing other library resources available.

Plans now call for the newsletter to be issued three times per year.

Former principal gets promotion

The former principal at Queen of the Rosary School in Elk Grove Village has been named Provincial Superior of the Midwestern Province of the Sisters of the Resurrection.

Sister Mary Edward, C.R. had been principal of the Elk Grove Village Catholic school for the past 5½ years.

She recently returned from a three-month stay in Rome, spent working with the sisters of the order who had assembled from all parts of the world to review and revise the constitution of the order.

Sisters of the Resurrection are made up of approximately 1,000 sisters in four provinces, serving nine archdioceses and 16 dioceses in six countries. The sisters' world-wide institutions include elementary and high schools, day nurseries, convalescent homes, residences for women, a teacher's college and a hospital.

Village, gas dealers to talk

Service station owners and Elk Grove Village officials will meet "to open lines of communication," at 1:30 p.m. today in the municipal building, 901 Wellington Rd.

Village Trustee Ed Kenna who scheduled the meeting said "We will offer any help we can as village officials and if we do nothing else but open lines of communication, it would be a good meeting."

"It appears as if the gasoline shortage and problems it has created may have eased but it could start again," he said.

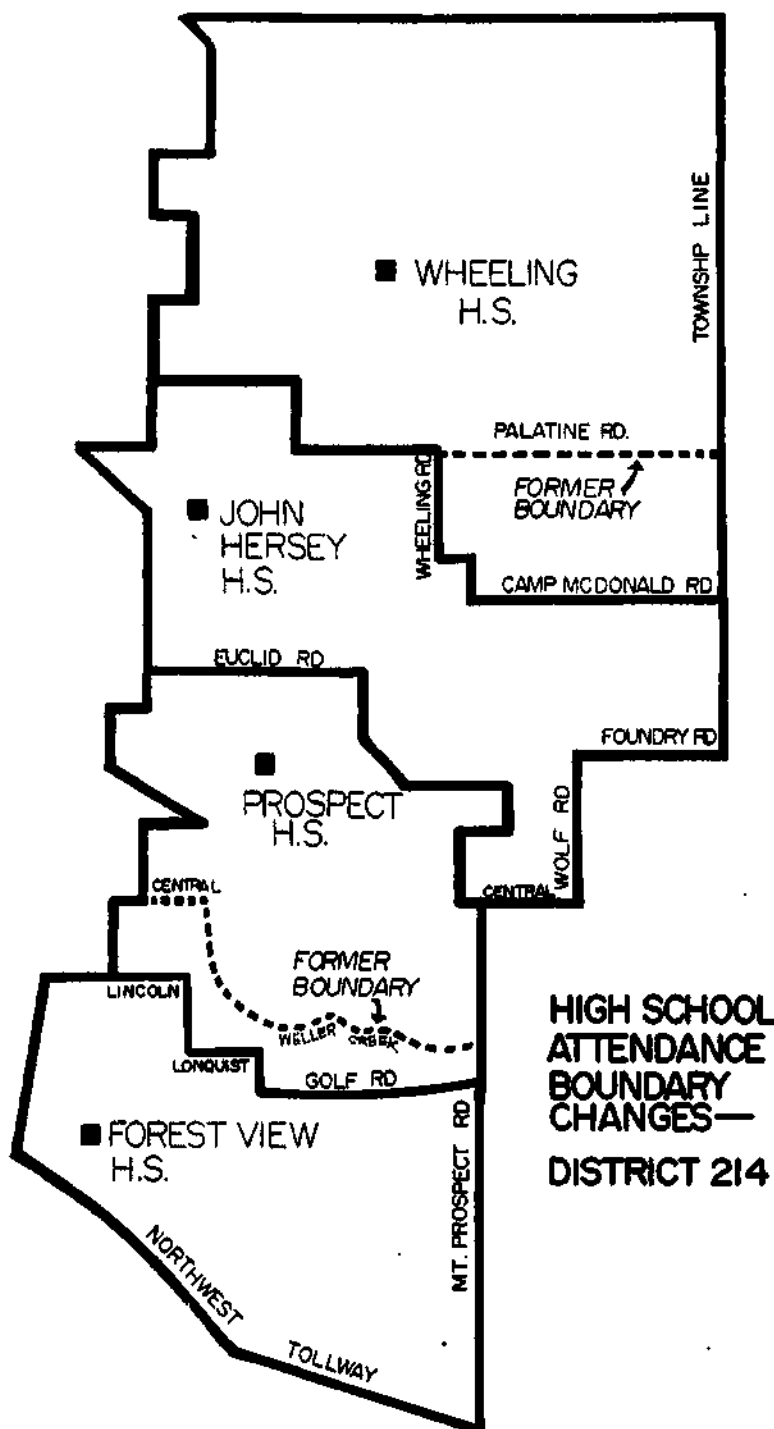

"In the event this happens we could greatly profit from the experiences our village's service stations had during the past several weeks," he added.

The meeting was suggested several weeks ago by Village President Charles Zetek.

Zetek asked Kenna to investigate the benefits of such a meeting, following the lead of Des Plaines and Mount Prospect mayors who had arranged meetings between officials and station owners.

Zetek stressed the meeting would simply be an exchange of information or suggestions from both sides. "We are not concerned with governing operation or telling station owners how to do business," he said.

On school boundaries

Forest View vote expected Monday

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A change in the boundaries of four Dist. 214 high schools will affect students living in Mount Prospect Elementary School Dist. 57 and Wheeling Elementary School Dist. 21 if it is adopted by the Dist. 214 Board of Education Monday.

The Dist. 214 administration has recommended that Forest View High School students living in Dist. 57 be sent to Prospect High School next year and Hersey High School students living in Dist. 21 be sent to Wheeling High School.

The change in boundaries would be effective next September but Dist. 214 officials have asked the board to give students the option of staying in their original school. All students now attending Forest View or Hersey would have the option of staying there until graduation, next year's incoming freshmen would have the same option and so would students whose older brothers or sisters attend the original school. Free bus transportation will be provided by the district for students who decide to stay in their original school.

DIST. 214 officials originally proposed a boundary change to relieve overcrowding at Forest View High School. All Dist. 214 schools are designed for 2,500 students except Hersey which has a capacity of 2,750. Enrollment next year at Forest View is expected to be 2,915 and projections show the enrollment will peak in 1977 with 3,320.

If the boundary changes are not made Hersey will have 2,790 students next year, Prospect will have 2,395 and Wheeling will have 1,960. Dist. 214 officials have now decided to change the boundaries for Wheeling and Hersey High Schools to balance enrollment there. Wheeling's enrollment is lower than the other schools because the area has a large number of apartment units which have not generated as many high school students as school officials anticipated.

The boundary change would remove students from Forest View and Hersey and place them in Prospect and Wheeling. The Dist. 57 area affected by the change generates about 110 high school students per year and the Dist. 21 area generates about 100 students per year.

The Dist. 214 board moved its meeting Monday at 8 p.m. from the board room to the Prospect High School auditorium so parents can attend the meeting and express their views on the recommended changes.

THE BOARD has had two meetings to discuss the boundary change in recent weeks. Both were attended by parents, primarily from the Des Plaines area of Forest View High School who came to ask the board not to move their children to another high school.

THEY BROWSE, examine and ask questions about annual camping and travel show at the Arlington Park Race Track this week are hesitant about buying. The gas shortage has caused some to think twice about long summer vacations.

by BETTY LEE

For the past 13 years Mr. and Mrs. John Keyzer of Rolling Meadows packed up their camping trailer and loaded the kids into the car for summer vacation. But not this year.

They were planning to go to California, but because of the lack of gas, the Keyzers are thinking of other ways to take their vacation without worrying about gas. Last year they camped in Florida and getting gas was no problem.

"We have been giving it a lot of thought," said Keyzer. "We want to go to California but now it looks like it's out of the question. I guess we'll have to wait and see what the gas situation's going to be."

The Keyzers were browsing at the gleaming campers, trailers and motor homes at the sixth annual Camping and Travel Show at the Arlington Park Race Track yesterday.

Dealers there know they won't be selling as much of their wares as they did last year at the show. The people are nervous about getting gas, they said.

BILL KERVIN, president of the Chicago Recreation Vehicle Dealers Assn., which is sponsoring the show, estimates a drop of 15 to 20 per cent on sales at the show this week.

"John Q. Public is sure he is being had," said Kervin of the gasoline shortage. "The people are irritable and it's going to take some time to not be frantic about gas." Kervin added the people are, becoming skeptical of whether there is a gasoline shortage.

Along with the decrease in sales, the dealers at the show are expecting a smaller crowd this year. Kervin estimated that 43,000 persons at most will attend, which is about a 30 per cent decrease from last year's attendance of 65,000.

Ernest Andres, who came to the show from Twin Lakes, Wis., was thinking of buying a motor home. "With the gas shortage I wouldn't even consider it," he said.

Other persons were more optimistic about their vacations. Some said they thought the gas shortage will cease by summer and some are considering taking shorter trips.

"We love camping too much to give it up," said Mrs. Len Johnson of Streamwood. "Even if we go 10 miles it would still be away from home."

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife go camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kervin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped production, said Kervin. Along with business mismanagement, which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kervin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Riteway Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display. Known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit, ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hersey on Monday. Hersey is a salesman for a line of trailers and said he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hersey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up.

"You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

"People think that in order to have good camping they have to go far," he said. "They don't realize that places nearby are just as good as those far away."

Though some people are worrying about the gas supplies, the dealers are encouraging people to go out and travel, but closer to home.

The Recreational Vehicle Industry Council has issued a folder on how it is going to confront the fuel shortage.

The council is encouraging the estimated 20 million users of recreational vehicles in the country to travel, but to travel at slower speeds in order to save on mileage and to stay closer to home.

GOING ON A trip may actually help a family to save money the family members would normally have spent on light, gas, electricity, food and other expenses, the council said.

Some of the people attending the show are newcomers to camping and traveling. Others there were like the William Hollande of Fox Lake who travel each year by camper.

"We go to the West coast, Colorado, and across the country," said Holland. Holland and his wife plan to move to California but would have planned to travel less far this summer because of the gas shortage.

For those who are counting on a camping trip this year, there are more than 23,000 campsites within 100 miles of Chicago. It doesn't take more than a tankful of gasoline to go camping, Kervin said, adding he hopes the show, which ends Sunday, will convince people to take shorter trips.

Village board wrapup

Three-way stop for school corner

Eastbound and westbound traffic on Wellington Street in Elk Grove Village will soon be required to stop at the Chelmsford Lane intersection near Cook Elementary School.

Village officials Tuesday approved placement of a three-way stop sign at the intersection. Chelmsford Lane dead ends at the school site and intersection. At present only Chelmsford Lane traffic stops.

A traffic survey conducted by the village indicated a need for a three-way stop sign on all corners.

Trustee Ed Kenna asked the village to conduct a traffic survey at the Link School and West Glen Trail in that portion of the village west of Rte. 53. "Let's find out now if we have any problems at this new school site and in the future when we know a school is going to be built, let's get the traffic signs in early before problems," suggested Kenna.

Flood insurance offered

Residents of Elk Grove Village who live in an area that is threatened during flood conditions are now eligible to purchase additional flood insurance.

Village Mgr. Charles Zetek said he has notified 155 homeowners of the availability of flood insurance now being offered through the National Flood Insurance Program the village participates in.

Anyone who has not been notified by mail may contact the village hall at 439-3900 for further information.

Donation to NIPC hiked

A donation of $750, which represents a 24 per cent increase over last year's payment of $603 was authorized for payment to the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission by Elk Grove Village officials yesterday.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel noting the substantial increase asked "What do we get for the money?"

Village President Charles Zetek said the research resources of the NIPCA are an invaluable aid to Elk Grove Village. The village also benefits from its regional planning activities, having the benefit of its aid, counsel and can request studies, said Zetek.

COATS AND BOOTS are still a must for young swingers, but the recent warm streak melted the snow off of area play equipment and caused the young at heart to rejoice. Mild weather should hold through today. More nice days should arrive soon. (Photo by Jay Needleman)

High rider demand

Village may expand dial-a-ride bus

During its first week of operation the Elk Grove Village's dial-a-ride bus service has been in such demand that officials are considering expanding it.

At Tuesday's board session Trustee Ed Kenna suggested dropping a scheduled commuter bus no one is riding to the Wood Dale train station and expanding the weekday dial-a-ride service to evenings and weekends.

His suggestions came on the heels of an operations report from Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, transportation committee chairman.

MRS. VANDERWEEL told the board the commuter bus to Wood Dale has had no customers in contrast to the Arlington Heights train station bus which has averaged at least nine a day.

Buses carry 12 passengers. "In contrast, the dial-a-ride service received over 20 calls for rides in its first hour of operation and residents have shown increased interest."

Mrs. Vanderweel said at present the dial-a-ride service operates between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Students have been calling for bus rides to the library and cross-town to babysitting jobs. Other residents have been using the transportation to commercial and residential areas, she added.

"We received exactly one complaint about the dial-a-ride service and that was that it took one woman almost an hour to get through to the 437-3769 call number," said Mrs. Vanderweel. "That kind of complaint pleased me. We can always add a telephone line and it shows people want to have an in town bus," she said.

Cost one way for the dial-a-ride service is 25 cents.

KENNA SAID "Let's expand the service that is selling. Let's put the money we are spending on the driver and bus for the Wood Dale station to work on the dial-a-ride service."

The board decided to review the suggestions in committee noting that the commuter and dial-a-ride services are on trial to determine which service is most used.

Mrs. Vanderweel said she wants residents who have comments about the commuter and dial-a-ride services to contact her at the 439-3900 village hall number with suggestions.

"In the meantime, we must continue the Wood Dale bus to the Milwaukee Road line and hopefully if people call us with time schedule suggestions we can arrive at a departure time customers will want," she said.

THE WOOD DALE bus picks up customers at 11 points in the village between 6:10 a.m. and 6:44 a.m. arriving at the station at 7 a.m.

Trustee Ted Staddler said he wants to be notified when the transportation committee meets. "I'm interested in that Wood Dale commuter bus. I don't use the service now because the scheduling is all wrong. I would have to catch a 6:20 a.m. bus to leave town for the station and then, wait until 7:30 at the station for my train," he said.

Mrs. Vanderweel accepted Staddler's offer to help with any schedule changes that might be worked out in the future and added that some residents who call have asked about a possible commuter bus to the Itasca station.

Year-round and Sunday horse racing proposed

An overhauling of the state horse racing system, including the allowing of Sunday and year-round racing, was proposed Wednesday by the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission.

The proposed sweeping changes include a "complete ban" on public officials owning race track stock; awarding of racing dates for a three-year period; and creation of a professional three-man racing board.

Arlington Park Race Track president Jack Loomer could not be reached for comment on the new proposals. However, he endorsed a similar bill to allow Sunday racing last year, saying horse racing was not unlike other professional sports such as baseball and football.

The report was the result of a year-long study, headed by Charles Siragusa, executive director of the investigating commission.

Present regulations ban horse races on Sundays and limit the racing season to spring, summer and fall.

THE REPORT recommended tracks be given dates over three years. Tracks are now awarded the dates yearly for the upcoming season.

The appointed six-member Illinois Racing Commission would also be scrapped if the report and its recommended legislation becomes law. In its place would be a professional, salaried three-man board, according to the report.

The new report contains portions of several bills to reform racing that were introduced last year. The bills, which would have changed the racing board make-up and permitted the year-round and Sunday racing dates, did not become law.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said of the earlier bills, "I don't think this community would be delighted with Sunday racing."

THE REPORT ALSO urges creation of a statewide race track security force. The commission said current security practices at state tracks are ineffective.

"... the commission believes that criminal practices are not as widespread as some detractors allege, (but) the commission is convinced that a serious problem nevertheless prevails," the report said.

The report was critical of present enforcement of rules at Illinois tracks. "Criminal prosecutions for illegal practices are virtually nonexistent," it said.

The commission said the establishment of a bureau of race track security, funded and operated by the state, would alleviate the problem.

Police have 'good lead' in theater fire

Schaumburg police Wednesday were working on a "good lead" in connection with the arson fire Tuesday night at the Woodfield I Theatre.

Richard Rodems, 62, of Palatine, the manager, who suffered a heart attack at the theater after the fire, was listed yesterday in serious condition but improving at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Police report 100 patrons were safely evacuated from the theater after two explosions went off seconds apart at 10:10 p.m. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

THE EXPLOSIONS, believed to have been caused by two cans of lighter fluid found at the scene, were followed by flames which spread along the back stage area to backdrop and curtains. Boxes and rubbish were also found which appeared to have been deliberately stacked in the backstage area.

The incident was the second arson attempt this week. On Monday night, caps removed from a gas meter at the theater caused gas to leak and a lighted cigarette was discovered nearby.

"It was business as usual" yesterday, said Edward Seguin, spokesman for ABC Great States Theatres, owners of the local film house.

Passes or refunds were offered in the lobby as patrons of Woodfield I departed because of the fire, he added.

Student behavior on buses to be studied by panel

An ad hoc committee to study the problem of discipline on Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 school buses is being formed. William Colburn, assistant superintendent for business, told the transportation committee last night.

Colburn said the committee would consist of several school principals, Supt. Frank Whiteley, Deputy Supt. Joseph Kiszka, several bus drivers, PTA safety chairman and himself.

The committee is being formed in response to a petition signed by 47 of the 65 school bus drivers, asking for immediate action to improve discipline on buses. The drivers said the lack of discipline is causing a safety hazard.

THE AD HOC committee, as set up, will review the problem and make recommendations for changes. These recommendations will be referred to the transportation committee at a later date and then sent to the school board for final approval.

Colburn said he hopes that within 30 days the ad hoc committee will have developed a set of recommendations that can be put into effect before June. The committee is also expected to work on other recommendations that can be put into effect in following years.

Specifically, the committee will:

- Determine the need for changing current procedures.

- Evaluate student punishments for misbehavior on buses and see that policies are followed uniformly throughout the district.

- Establish ways of informing students, parents and drivers about safety rules and policies on transportation.

- Check figures to see if discipline complaints are more frequent this year and discover which bus drivers have been having the most discipline problems.

DEPUTY SUPT. Kiszka said that if a few bus drivers seem to have more problems than others, the committee would not only investigate the drivers' attempts at enforcing discipline, but also the types and numbers of students involved.

At the present time, drivers and principals are being asked to reread the district's existing policies on discipline, Colburn said. The district transports more than 5,000 Dist. 15 students every day and children from several surrounding parochial schools.

THEY BROWSE, examine and ask questions about recreational vehicles, but people visiting the sixth annual camping and travel show at the Arlington Park Race Track this week are hesitant about buying. The gas shortage has caused some to think twice about long summer vacations.

Mugalian, Gerling clash on patronage donations

Incumbent Democratic Township Committeeman Richard Mugalian has charged that township patronage workers gave 2 per cent of their salaries to the party, before he became committeeman four years ago.

Mugalian's statement came during a candidates' debate sponsored by the Palatine League of Women Voters at St. Thomas of Villanova School Tuesday night.

Peter Gerling, who is trying to unseat Mugalian and was township committeeman when the practice allegedly took place, denied the charge. He said a "2 per cent club" has never existed in Palatine Township while he was the township's leading Democratic organizer.

Mugalian said when he defeated Gerling for committeeman in 1970, he ordered the practice stopped and said he sent back several checks from patronage workers. Gerling said "I don't know what he is talking about."

GERLING SAID YESTERDAY however, when contacted by the Herald, that patronage workers used to donate 1 per cent of their salary to the Democratic organization but the practice was "strictly voluntary." He said that when he took over as township committeeman there was no money and the practice of workers giving one per cent of their salaries was only one way to raise money. He said dinner dances and other fundraising events were held. "It's nonsense to think an organization can be run without money," Gerling said.

In Mugalian's presentation to an audience of about 60 persons, he said he hoped "to preserve what is unique among our 30 township and 50 wards that make up the Cook County Central Committee — a truly open, democratic unit of the Democratic Party

On school boundaries

Forest View vote expected Monday

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A change in the boundaries of four Dist. 214 high schools will affect students living in Mount Prospect Elementary School Dist. 57 and Wheeling Elementary School Dist. 21 if it is adopted by the Dist. 214 Board of Education Monday.

The Dist. 214 administration has recommended that Forest View High School students living in Dist. 57 be sent to Prospect High School next year and Hersey High School students living in Dist. 21 be sent to Wheeling High School.

The change in boundaries would be effective next September but Dist. 214 officials have asked the board to give students the option of staying in their original school. All students now attending Forest View or Hersey would have the option of staying there until graduation, next year's incoming freshmen would have the same option and so would students whose older brothers or sisters attend the original school. Free bus transportation will be provided by the district for students who decide to stay in their original school.

DIST. 214 officials originally proposed a boundary change to relieve overcrowding at Forest View High School. All Dist. 214 schools are designed for 2,500 students except Hersey which has a capacity of 2,750. Enrollment next year at Forest View is expected to be 2,915 and projections show the enrollment will peak in 1977 with 3,320.

If the boundary changes are not made Hersey will have 2,790 students next year, Prospect will have 2,395 and Wheeling will have 1,960. Dist. 214 officials have now decided to change the boundaries for Wheeling and Hersey High Schools to balance enrollment there. Wheeling's enrollment is lower than the other schools because the area has a large number of apartment units which have not generated as many high school students as school officials anticipated.

The boundary change would remove students from Forest View and Hersey and place them in Prospect and Wheeling. The Dist. 57 area affected by the change generates about 110 high school students per year and the Dist. 21 area generates about 100 students per year.

The Dist. 214 board moved its meeting Monday at 8 p.m. from the board room to the Prospect High School auditorium so parents can attend the meeting and express their views on the recommended changes.

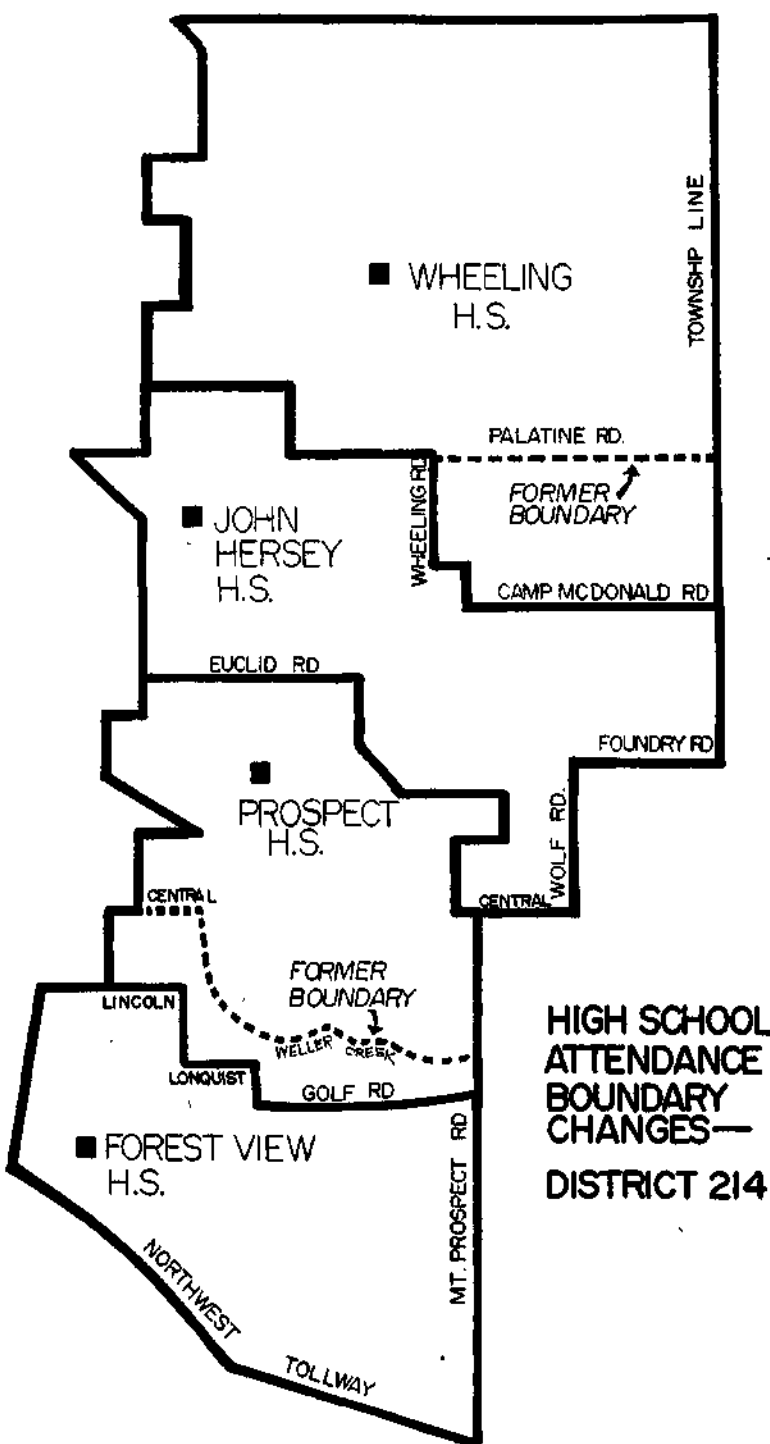

THE BOARD has had two meetings to discuss the boundary change in recent weeks. Both were attended by parents, primarily from the Des Plaines area of Forest View High School who came to ask the board not to move their children to another high school.

One of the boundary changes considered by Dist. 214 officials would have moved Forest View High School students in Des Plaines to Elk Grove High School. The Des Plaines area was shifted from Forest View to Elk Grove in 1966 and back to Forest View in 1970.

Fire hits garage; $1,000 damage

Fire caused an estimated $1,000 damage to a garage at the southwest corner of Hellen Road and Elm Street in unincorporated Palatine Township Saturday night.

Palatine Rural firemen said cause of the fire was unknown. The garage belonged to a family named Russell, but the fire department did not have the owner's first name. The owners of the garage were out of town when the fire occurred.

Horse racing year-round and Sundays urged

An overhauling of the state horse racing system, including the allowing of Sunday and year-round racing, was proposed Wednesday by the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission.

The proposed sweeping changes include a "complete ban" on public officials owning race track stock; awarding of racing dates for a three-year period; and creation of a professional three-man racing board.

Arlington Park Race Track president Jack Loomer could not be reached for comment on the new proposals. However, he endorsed a similar bill to allow Sunday racing last year, saying horse racing was not unlike other professional sports such as baseball and football.

The report was the result of a year-long study, headed by Charles Siragusa, executive director of the investigating commission.

THE REPORT recommended tracks be given dates over three years. Tracks are now awarded the dates yearly for the upcoming season.

The appointed six-member Illinois Racing Commission would also be scrapped if the report and its recommended legislation becomes law. In its place would be a professional, salaried three-man board, according to the report.

The new report contains portions of several bills to reform racing that were introduced last year. The bills, which would have changed the racing board make-up and permitted the year-round and Sunday racing dates, did not become law.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said of the earlier bills, "I don't think this community would be delighted with Sunday racing."

THE REPORT ALSO urges creation of a statewide race track security force. The commission said current security practices at state tracks are ineffective.

The report was critical of present enforcement of rules at Illinois tracks. "Criminal prosecutions for illegal practices are virtually nonexistent," it said.

The commission said the establishment of a bureau of race track security, funded and operated by the state, would alleviate the problem.

Nicholas Phillips, county zoning board employee indicted in the Wheeling shake-down scandal, has been identified by a key government witness as the bagman who collected $50,000 extorted from Wickes Inc., in 1971 at a North Side Chicago hotel.

The witness picked Phillips' photograph from several others last December, ending an intensive search for the suspected bagman less than two months before Phillips and five others were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The payoff allegedly took place Dec. 30, 1971, at the Lake Shore Drive Holiday Inn, 644 N. Lake Shore Dr., according to information contained in defense motions filed in U. S. District Court by Phillips' attorney, Louis Carbonaro.

IN THE MOTIONS, Carbonaro asked federal prosecutors to reveal the identity of the witness, which has been a closely kept secret since the $50,000 payoff was discovered late last year by investigators.

He also asked U. S. District Court Judge Prentice Marshall to throw out evidence of Phillips' identification by the witness, which he said "was induced by the actions of the (federal) agents" in violation of his client's constitutional rights.

Carbonaro said Phillips, 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was photographed Dec. 2 against his will after he was subpoenaed by a special grand jury investigating corruption in Wheeling village government. The photograph was then compared to photos of other persons by the prosecution witness, who identified Phillips.

The other persons photographed, Carbonaro charged, were "not dressed in similar fashion to the defendant or of similar age, color of hair, height, weight, build or general description."

The defense motions also revealed that the U. S. attorney has records that telephone calls were made between the phones of Phillips and his cousin, James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman also indicted by the grand jury Jan. 31.

STAVROS, 3705 Whirlaway Dr., Northbrook, has been a behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling village government for almost a decade. He faces a total of 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in alleged shakedowns of developers seeking zoning and building permits in Wheeling.

Stavros was not named in either of the two extortion indictments involving Wickes.

According to Carbonaro, the U. S. Attorney's Office plans to submit the telephone records as evidence in the case against Phillips and Ira Colitz, a former county zoning board member charged with aiding Phillips in the alleged shakedown of Wickes.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison acknowledged the existence of the records, which he said "show a relationship" between Stavros and Phillips. Kadison said, however, that "we have no evidence against Stavros in this case."

The Herald has learned that records of calls made from telephones of key suspects and others in the Wickes case provided important leads in tracking down persons involved in the shakedown scheme.

INFORMATION ABOUT the $50,000 payoff apparently was turned up late in the investigation, which started more than a year ago.

Rumors that certain village officials were given truckloads of free furniture by the company at the time zoning was approved circulated in the community for more than a year. Information on the furniture deliveries was given to federal investigators early in the probe by The Herald.

Through company records, the deliveries were traced from a Wickes warehouse in West Allis, Wis., to the homes of two indicted village officials, former trustee Michael Valenza and Building Dir. William Bieber.

Bieber was charged with extortion, conspiracy and perjury in the alleged furniture shakedown. Valenza, also accused of receiving extorted furniture, pleaded guilty Feb. 28 to one conspiracy count after the U. S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second count of extortion.

There has been no indication of any connection between the Bieber-Valenza indictment and the Phillips-Colitz indictment. Bieber, Phillips and Colitz have pleaded innocent.

TRIAL DATE FOR the Phillips-Colitz case has been scheduled for May 6. Judge Marshall is scheduled to rule shortly before the trial on the motion to throw out the photograph identification.

The Phillips defense motions came after a pretrial conference among Carbonaro and the prosecutors, Kadison and Assistant U. S. Atty. Howard Stone. Judge Marshall is expected to decide which defense requests for additional information must be answered by the government.

In addition to the identity of the government's key witness, Carbonaro has asked for records from the Chicago law firm that represented Wickes before village zoning officials in 1971. He also wants to know what happened to the $50,000 his client is accused of extorting from the company.

Sources involved in the investigation say the government has solid evidence tracing the payoff to Phillips, evidence apparently provided in part by the secret witness. What happened to the money after that, sources have indicated, will be up to Phillips to tell.

Carbonaro said Phillips has appeared before the grand jury but the defense attorney declined to comment on his client's testimony. Carbonaro also declined comment when asked if Phillips was present at the Holiday Inn on the day the alleged payoff was made.

ALSO TESTIFYING before the grand jury have been several key officials of Wickes. The decision to make a payoff to obtain zoning for the Wickes store, 351 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling, was made at a high corporate level. The Herald has learned.

The secret witness, however, apparently is not a company official. One source described him as an "outsider."

When the witness confronted investigators with his knowledge of the payoff, he had only a description of the bagman who picked up the $50,000. He described the man as dark, slender, just under six feet tall and 30 to 40 years old.

Armed with the description, investigators began to scour Wheeling in search of known associates of officials believed to be involved in the shakedown scheme. Apparently, telephone records helped trace the bagman to the telephone of a county official.

Phillips was eventually subpoenaed by the grand jury and was photographed twice for identification purposes, after a federal building camera malfunctioned the first time. His photograph was then shown to the government witness and Phillips was identified as the bagman.

Area man strikes gold with coin design

A coin design by artist Jack L. Ahr of Arlington Heights was selected yesterday one of three winning designs in the National Bicentennial Coin Design Competition sponsored by the United States Treasury Department.

Mrs. Mary Brooks, director of the United States Mint, told The Herald yesterday the Ahr design was selected by the National Sculptures' Assn. for its appropriateness for the bicentennial year, 1976.

Ahr's design of a revolutionary war soldier playing a drum, will be on the backs of the bicentennial quarters, with the traditional George Washington design on the front.

Mrs. Brooks said the U.S. Mint will strike and issue some billion and one half quarters beginning July 4, 1975 with the Ahr design.

Jack L. Ahr

The two other winning designs were chosen for the backs of dollar and half dollar coins.

"In fact," said Mrs. Brooks, "the quarter will receive much wider distribution than the dollar and half dollar designs and just millions of people will see the Ahr design every day."

AHR, OWNER OF Jack Ahr Design and Sales, 1802 S. Highland, will receive an award of $5,000 for his entry in the competition which began in December.

"We were just sitting on needles and pins this afternoon," Ahr said yesterday. "Then we got a phone call to say that I have won." He has previous experience with metal designs as an artist for a medalion company.

Ahr submitted a plaster model of his design in February and was chosen as one of six semi-finalists. A special committee yesterday met with Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz on selecting the winners.

Ahr's firm specializes in creating design for sales and product promotion products.

At Ned Brown Forest Preserve

Elk herd will move to a new clearing

by BOB GALLAS

Elk Grove Township's legendary elk herd, a long-time fixture along the north side of Higgins Road in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve, will be moving to a new home by the end of the year.

Their present home slated to become a lake as part of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed project, and has made it necessary to move the herd to a new location within the forest preserve, according to James Mattson, supervisor for the northwest district of the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Mattson said plans now call for the herd to be moved to the open part of the forest preserve on the northwest corner of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads.

FORESTRY CREWS have already started preliminary clearing work at the site the herd is presently occupying. Mattson said a parking lot will be constructed at the new corner site for visitors and bids will probably be let this summer for a fence enclosure to hold the 12-member herd of elk.

Mattson added the timetable for the move isn't definite, since both federal and state monies are involved in the project, which may cause some delays, depending on the release of funds.

Mattson said the herd probably won't be moved until cold weather sets in this November and the herd moves in to take feed left by forest preserve personnel. Otherwise, the rest of the herd would tend to run off once the rounding up began, according to Mattson.

HOW DO YOU MOVE a herd of wild elk?

"We'll tranquilize them and then load them on trucks for the short trip down the street," said Mattson. The whole move shouldn't take longer than an hour or so," he added.

Two of the herd, one of which is part of what Mattson described as the "old herd strain," will be shipped to an Indiana state park sometime next week.

Another member of the herd which has been running loose since last year is still running free. The 2-year-old male was sighted by several motorists on Higgins and Arlington Heights roads earlier this year, but is now deep within the preserve, according to Mattson. The elk has successfully managed to elude forest preserve and zoo personnel trying to capture it and is becoming smarter with each day of freedom, he said.

THE HERD MOVES ON. The popular elk herd, located in Elk Grove Township's Ned Brown Forest Preserve will be moving to a new home. Facilities for the herd are planned for the northwest corner of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads. Construction of a fence and parking will start soon.

Mugalian, Gerling clash on patronage donations

"Despite the indictments, convictions, rank nepotism, vote fraud, arrogance and elitism, the machine continues to grind away," Mugalian said. "A great city and county have been in bondage to two generations of an in-bred 'family' of political musclemen."

GERLING SAID he "will not disagree with the Cook County Central Committee if the issues are not in the best interests of Palatine Township. He pledged to "carry out duties and responsibilities of township committeeman and be available any time for anyone in Palatine Township who needs assistance."

The township committeeman election is March 19. Mugalian, a lawyer, also faces reelection as state representative from the 2nd District. Gerling works for the Cook County Highway Department.

No debate at GOP meeting

There was no debate between candidates for Republican Palatine Township committeeman Tuesday night.

The Palatine League of Women Voters invited both incumbent committeeman Bernard Pedersen and challenger Anton Valukas to the forum but only Valukas showed up.

Pedersen has said he will not debate Valukas but rather favors newspaper interviews and other individual efforts by the two candidates to gain support. A spokeswoman for the League said that Pedersen felt candidate nights give off "more smoke than light" on the issues. Valukas has challenged Pedersen to debates on several occasions but Pedersen has refused.

Valukas told he group he "doesn't believe National Party labels should appear in Palatine Township" local elections adding his reason for running for township committeeman is to open up the party. "If we are to survive we must lend an ear to all opinion," he said.

"The party should be as diverse as Percy and Goldwater." Both are good Republicans, he said. "What we have now is a closed corporation... the beginning of the spoils system."

Youth Art Month to be observed

Fifth grade youngsters and older will visit the Palatine Public Library next week to observe Youth Art Month.

Three-dimensional art, this year's theme, will be described through film, slides and reproductions of sculptures in the library's collection.

The program was organized by Children's Librarian Alma Mehn and Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15 Art Department Chairman Josephine Hayden.

Three-dimensional art work by students will also be added to the library display for the month. Classes from Dist. 15 and Palatine parochial schools have been invited to the daytime program at the library, 149 N. Brockway St., Palatine.

Jaycees to sponsor Holiday Inn smoker

The Palatine Jaycees will sponsor a smoker for Jaycees in the area and prospective members March 15 at 8 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, 3405 Algonquin Rd., Rolling Meadows.

Any man between 21 and 35 years of age interested in self-development and community improvement is invited. Prospective Jaycees and Jaycees with a guest will be admitted free and there will be a $5 cover charge for Jaycees without guests. Refreshments, including beer, will be served.

Four afternoons weekly

Parks to rent facility to Headstart

The Salt Creek Park Board has agreed to rent the basement of the Rose Park fieldhouse for four afternoons weekly to Project Headstart.

The basement will be used afternoons Monday through Thursday in order for Headstart to conduct preschool classes for Palatine Township children. The board agreed to enter into a contract to rent the space through July.

Project Headstart is a federally funded education program for preschool children from low income families. Headstart programs exist in the Northwest suburban area, but no program has existed before in Palatine Township because facilities for the classes could not be found.

THE PROGRAM has received a $13,500 grant from the Palatine Township board to supplement its funding. The money is coming from federal revenue sharing funds allotted to the township.

Headstart Director Ann Anderson made the request for the space during a meeting of the Salt Creek board Tuesday.

A contract arrangement has yet to be worked out concerning the monthly rental charges for the basement space as well as the shared cost of insurance and other fees.

Tentative plans call for the basement of the fieldhouse to be used from noon to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, with classes being held from 1 to 3 p.m.

CHILDREN WILL be bused to the location. Classes are tentatively scheduled to begin for 20 preschoolers by mid-March. Classes will be supervised by three staff members.

The program will also purchase its own equipment and chairs.

James DeVos, Salt Creek director of parks and recreation, said the district currently does not use the basement area of the fieldhouse for programs during weekday afternoons. He added, however, that the district's agreement with Headstart will last only until July. At that time if the district will need the basement area for its own programming, the contract probably will not be renewed.

Headstart came to the district requesting the space after attempts to find other locations in the township failed.

In other action at the board meeting Tuesday, the board agreed to adjourn the meeting until tonight to review bids for planned park improvement work. Original bids were rejected by the board because they were too high.

BIDS ARE scheduled to be reviewed tonight, with awarding of contracts tentatively planned for Saturday.

Planned improvements include landscaping, lighting and the purchase of additional equipment for the district's three parks. Tennis courts are also planned.

The improvements are part of the master plan of development for the district for the coming five years.

The district's three parks are Rose Park, located at 530 S. Williams St.; Winston Park, located on Winston Drive and Joyce Street, and South Park, located on Rohlwing Road and Euclid Avenue.

Youth not in danger; dog isn't rabid

The search is off for a dog in the Palatine area which bit a 14-year-old Palatine boy Friday. The dog was positively identified Tuesday and did not carry rabies as had been originally feared.

Palatine Animal Warden Edward Campeau said yesterday that the dog belonged to neighbors of Craig Alexander, 466 Juniper Dr., the boy who was bitten by the dog last week.

Marine saves runaway cab from crash

by JOE SWICKARD

"I didn't really think about it. I was just thinking about stopping the cab," said Marine Pvt. James T. Beck.

Beck, 19, of 2315 Olive, Arlington Heights, interrupted his leave from Camp Lejeune, N.C., Tuesday night to stop a runaway cab before it crashed into a building in Harwood Heights.

"I was driving down Montrose when this cab turned left in front of me. A woman was leaning out the window yelling and I could see there wasn't a driver," Beck said.

Youth charged for cards theft

A 19-year-old Addison youth who had failed to appear in court on a charge by Rolling Meadows police of stealing credit cards has been charged again.

Brandon Page of Addison was arrested Tuesday by Addison police and turned over to Rolling Meadows police for prosecution. Page is accused of the Oct. 24 theft of credit cards from employees of the Chemplex Company in Rolling Meadows.

Page had allegedly been working as a window washer when the thefts occurred. Police said Page was apparently washing windows at the Chemplex site when he allegedly stole credit cards, checks and a small amount of currency from the purses of three women employees at Chemplex.

The cards were then allegedly used by Page and three companions to make hundreds of dollars of purchases at the Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

Page was released yesterday on $2,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Arlington Heights Circuit Court Friday.

Harper police charge youth in purse theft

Harper College security police apprehended an alleged purse thief yesterday and charged him with theft and battery to a security cadet.

Orlando Smith, 18, of 4722 Arbor Ln., Rolling Meadows, was being held yesterday on $1,000 bond for allegedly stealing a purse which contained $5 from the third floor of Harper's "F" Building.

Smith allegedly struck security cadet Edward Dahlquist when the cadet attempted to arrest him after the 12:30 p.m. theft. The purse was reportedly placed as a decoy by Harper police in an effort to solve a number of purse thefts in recent weeks.

Smith is scheduled for an April 11 court hearing in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

tered the cab driven by James Russell when she got "a funny feeling."

Miss Pagni said, "I had just told him the address and I got a funny feeling. The driver was super quiet and you know cab drivers usually talk a lot. I looked at him and I could see he was having a heart attack."

Russell was struggling for breath and trying to control the cab, she said. "I knew something was wrong but there was nothing I could do. I was afraid to jump into the front seat. The only thing to do was jump out, so I did," she said.

"THE LADY JUMPED out and she was screaming that the driver had had a heart attack. So I stopped my car and ran after it," Beck said.

"I was running behind the cab and the guy was chasing it. He caught it in time.

Convicted of shooting wife

A Cook County criminal court Tuesday found Robert Gray, 42, Rolling Meadows guilty of two counts of aggravated battery for the Oct. 15 shooting of his wife.

Gray, 4477 Gettysburg Dr., will be sentenced March 26 by Criminal Court Judge James Bailey.

Gray had been charged originally by Rolling Meadows police with attempted murder after he shot and injured his 40-year-old wife Mary. The shooting took place in the couple's home. Two of the couple's four teen-aged children were home at the time, but were not injured.

According to police, the two had been quarreling when Gray pulled a .22 caliber revolver and fired two shots at his wife. One shot struck her in the shoulder, and the other lodged in a dresser in the master bedroom.

The couple had been involved in divorce proceedings at the time and Gray had been issued a restraining order prohibiting him from harming his wife during the proceedings.

Gray has been held in Cook County Jail since the incident. He will remain in jail until sentencing.

Youths may register for 'Huck Finn' trip

Youths in the Palatine Park District may register now for a March 30 trip to Mill Run Theatre to see "Huckleberry Finn."

Round trip bus transportation and admission will cost $2.80 per child. Children age six or younger must be accompanied by an adult.

The bus will leave the park administration building, 262 E. Palatine Rd., Palatine, at noon March 30, returning at 3:30 p.m. Park sponsors recommend that youngsters bring along their own candy or a treat rather than purchase it at the theatre.

City scholarship program set to get under way

Scholarship applications for Rolling Meadows high school seniors will be available starting Monday.

The scholarship forms must be obtained in person at the Rolling Meadows City Hall, 3600 Kirchhoff Rd. Applications will be available through March 22 at 5 p.m. Students must return the applications to their respective high school counselors by March 25.

Plans for the application procedure were finalized Wednesday during a meeting between guidance counselors from the four high schools serving the city, City Mgr. James Watson and Administrative Assistant Charles Green.

THE CITY PROGRAM will award three scholarships, up to a maximum grant of $1,000 yearly. The program was authorized by city officials last year when a $10,000 scholarship fund was appropriated in the 1974 fiscal budget.

The scholarships will be awarded on the basis of high school work including academic achievement, extracurricular activities and work experience. Winners will be notified on May 7.

A six-man panel headed by Green will select the winners. The panel will include Lols Mazza and James Craig from Rolling Meadows High School, Ellen Post from Sacred Heart of Mary High School, Jean Thelmer from St. Viator High School and Marty Edwards from Fremd High School. All are guidance counselors at the schools.

The scholarships will be paid directly to the school which the recipient will attend. The grants will pay for the cost of tuition up to $1,000 to any accredited college, junior college, trade or vocational school in the country.

Renewal of the scholarships will be based on the student remaining in good standing academically at the school he attends on a continuing full-time basis.

APPLICANTS for the grants must be graduating high school seniors who have been residents of the city for at least two years and who will continue to be residents of the city during their years in school.

Applicants must also be in the upper one-third of their graduating class and must be planning to attend an accredited two- or four-year college or university or a certified vocational school or technical institute as a full-time student.

The student's field of study will not be limited.

Financial need of a student's family will not be a basis of selection winners, city officials have said.

The scholarship program had been sought by city officials to provide financial aid to middle income families who are unable to meet the rising costs of higher education but who are being denied financial aid from most scholarship plans in favor of low-income families.

Panel to seek to improve discipline on school buses

An ad hoc committee to study the problem of discipline on Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 school buses is being formed. William Colburn, assistant superintendent for business, told the transportation committee last night.

Colburn said the committee would consist of several school principals, Supt. Frank Whiteley, Deputy Supt. Joseph Kiszka, several bus drivers, PTA safety chairmen and himself.

The committee is being formed in response to a petition signed by 47 of the 65 school bus drivers, asking for immediate action to improve discipline on buses. The drivers said the lack of discipline is causing a safety hazard.

THE AD HOC committee, as set up, will review the problem and make recommendations for changes. These recommendations will be referred to the transportation committee at a later date and then sent to the school board for final approval.

Colburn said he hopes that within 30 days the ad hoc committee will have developed a set of recommendations that can be put into effect before June. The committee is also expected to work on other recommendations that can be put into effect in following years.

Specifically, the committee will:

- Determine the need for changing current procedures.
- Evaluate student punishments for misbehavior on buses and see that policies are followed uniformly throughout the district.
- Establish ways of informing students, parents and drivers about safety rules and policies on transportation.

- Check figures to see if discipline complaints are more frequent this year and discover which bus drivers have been having the most discipline problems.

DEPUTY SUPT. Kiszka said that if a few bus drivers seem to have more problems than others, the committee would not only investigate the drivers attempts at enforcing discipline, but also the types and numbers of students involved.

THEY BROWSE, examine and ask questions about annual camping and travel show at the Arlington Park Race Track this week are hesitant about buying. The gas shortage has caused some to think twice about long summer vacations.

by BETTY LEE

For the past 13 years Mr. and Mrs. John Keyzer of Rolling Meadows packed up their camping trailer and loaded the kids into the car for summer vacation. But not this year.

They were planning to go to California, but because of the lack of gas, the Keyzers are thinking of other ways to take their vacation without worrying about gas. Last year they camped in Florida and getting gas was no problem.

"We have been giving it a lot of thought," said Keyzer. "We want to go to California but now it looks like it's out of the question. I guess we'll have to wait and see what the gas situation's going to be."

The Keyzers were browsing at the gleaming campers, trailers and motor homes at the sixth annual Camping and Travel Show at the Arlington Park Race Track yesterday.

Dealers there know they won't be selling as much of their wares as they did last year at the show. The people are nervous about getting gas, they said.

BILL KERVIN, president of the Chicago and North Western Vehicle Dealers Assn., which is sponsoring the show, estimates a drop of 15 to 20 per cent on sales at the show this week.

"John Q. Public is sure he is being had," said Kervin of the gasoline shortage. "The people are irritable and it's going to take some time to not be frantic about gas." Kervin added the people are becoming skeptical of whether there is a gasoline shortage.

Along with the decrease in sales, the dealers at the show are expecting a smaller crowd this year. Kervin estimated that 43,000 persons at most will attend, which is about a 30 per cent decrease from last year's attendance of 65,000.

Ernest Andres, who came to the show from Twin Lakes, Wis., was thinking of buying a motor home. "With the gas shortage I wouldn't even consider it," he said.

Other persons were more optimistic about their vacations. Some said they thought the gas shortage will cease by summer and some are considering taking shorter trips.

THE JOHNSONS bought a camper last

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife go camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kervin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped production, said Kervin. Along with business mismanagement, which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kervin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Riteway Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display. Known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit, ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hersey on Monday. Hersey is a salesman for a line of trailers and he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hersey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up.

"You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

"People think that in order to have good camping they have to go far," he said. "They don't realize that places nearby are just as good as those far away."

Though some people are worrying about the gas supplies, the dealers are encouraging people to go out and travel, but closer to home.

The Recreational Vehicle Industry Council has issued a folder on how it is going to confront the fuel shortage.

The council is encouraging the estimated 20 million users of recreational vehicles in the country to travel, but to travel at slower speeds in order to save on mileage and to stay closer to home.

GOING ON A trip may actually help a family to save money the family members would normally have spent on light, gas, electricity, food and other expenses, the council said.

Some of the people attending the show are newcomers to camping and traveling. Others there were like the William Hollands of Fox Lake who travel each year by camper.

"We go to the West coast, Colorado, and across the country," said Holland. Holland and his wife plan to move to California but would have planned to travel less far this summer because of the gas shortage.

For those who are counting on a camping trip this year, there are more than 23,000 campsites within 100 miles of Chicago. It doesn't take more than a tankful of gasoline to go camping, Kervin said, adding he hopes the show, which ends Sunday, will convince people to take shorter trips.

On school boundaries

Forest View vote expected Monday

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A change in the boundaries of four Dist. 214 high schools will affect students living in Mount Prospect Elementary School Dist. 37 and Wheeling Elementary School Dist. 21 if it is adopted by the Dist. 214 Board of Education Monday.

The Dist. 214 administration has recommended that Forest View High School students living in Dist. 37 be sent to Prospect High School next year and Hersey High School students living in Dist. 21 be sent to Wheeling High School.

The change in boundaries would be effective next September but Dist. 214 officials have asked the board to give students the option of staying in their original school. All students now attending Forest View or Hersey would have the option of staying there until graduation, next year's incoming freshmen would have the same option and so would students whose older brothers or sisters attend the original school. Free bus transportation will be provided by the district for students who decide to stay in their original school.

DIST. 214 officials originally proposed a boundary change to relieve overcrowding at Forest View High School. All Dist. 214 schools are designed for 2,500 students except Hersey which has a capacity of 2,750. Enrollment next year at Forest View is expected to be 2,915 and projections show the enrollment will peak in 1977 with 3,320.

If the boundary changes are not made Hersey will have 2,750 students next year. Prospect will have 2,395 and Wheeling will have 1,960. Dist. 214 officials have now decided to change the boundaries for Wheeling and Hersey High Schools to balance enrollment there. Wheeling's enrollment is lower than the other schools because the area has a large number of apartment units which have not generated as many high school students as school officials anticipated.

The boundary change would remove students from Forest View and Hersey and place them in Prospect and Wheeling. The Dist. 57 area affected by the change generates about 110 high school students per year and the Dist. 21 area generates about 100 students per year.

The Dist. 214 board moved its meeting Monday at 8 p.m. from the board room to the Prospect High School auditorium so parents can attend the meeting and express their views on the recommended changes.

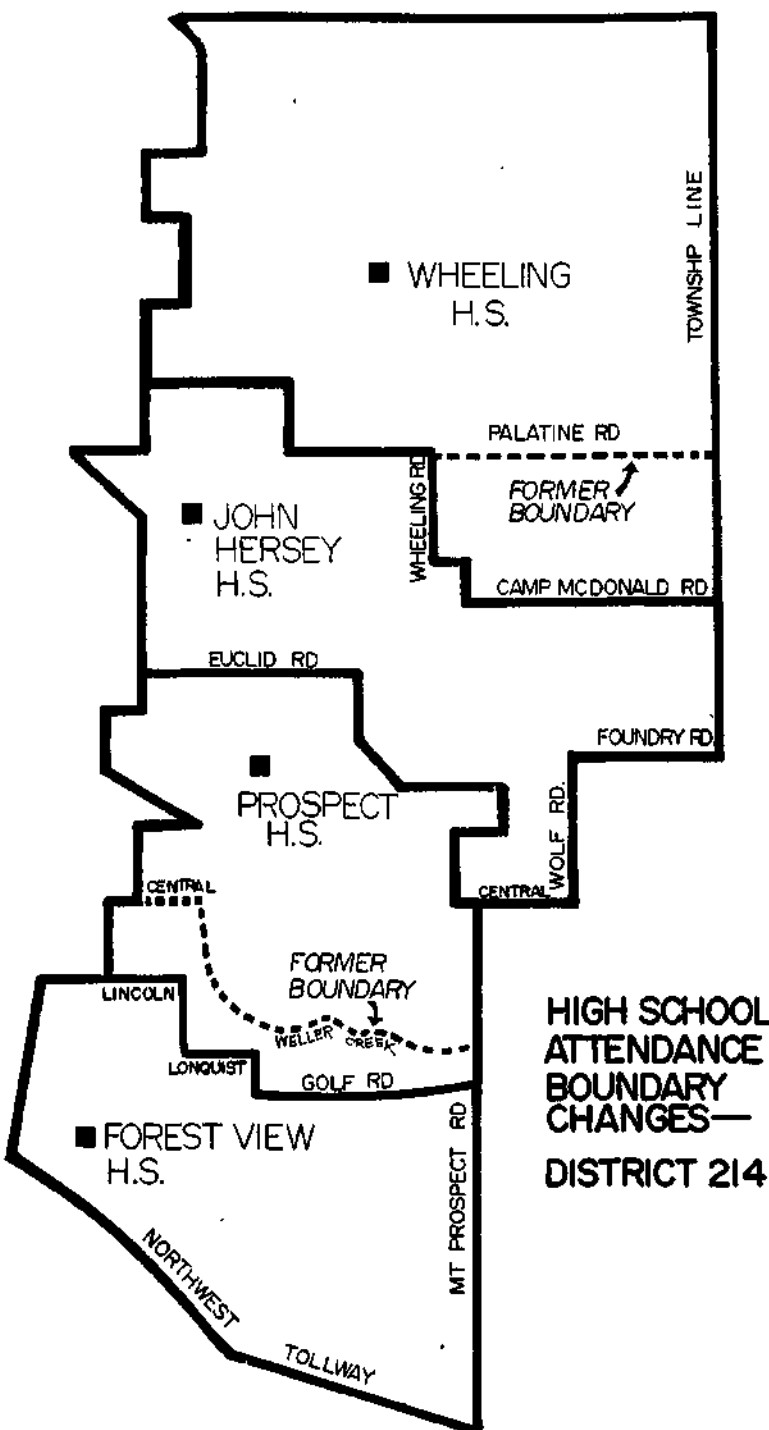

THE BOARD has had two meetings to discuss the boundary change in recent weeks. Both were attended by parents, primarily from the Des Plaines area of Forest View High School who came to ask the board not to move their children to another high school.

One of the boundary changes considered by Dist. 214 officials would have moved Forest View High School students in Des Plaines to Elk Grove High School. The Des Plaines area was shifted from Forest View to Elk Grove in 1966 and back to Forest View in 1970.

Fire hits garage; $1,000 damage

Fire caused an estimated $1,000 damage to a garage at the southwest corner of Hellen Road and Elm Street in unincorporated Palatine Township Saturday night.

Palatine Rural firemen said cause of the fire was unknown. The garage belonged to a family named Russell, but the fire department did not have the owner's first name. The owners of the garage were out of town when the fire occurred.

Horse racing year-round and Sundays urged

An overhauling of the state horse racing system, including the allowing of Sunday and year-round racing, was proposed Wednesday by the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission.

The proposed sweeping changes include a "complete ban" on public officials owning race track stock; awarding of racing dates for a three-year period; and creation of a professional three-man racing board.

Arlington Park Race Track president Jack Loomer could not be reached for comment on the new proposals. However, he endorsed a similar bill to allow Sunday racing last year, saying horse racing was not unlike other professional sports such as baseball and football.

The report was the result of a year-long study, headed by Charles Siragusa, executive director of the investigating commission.

Present regulations ban horse races on Sundays and limit the racing season to spring, summer and fall.

THE REPORT recommended tracks be given dates over three years. Tracks are now awarded the dates yearly for the upcoming season.

The appointed six-member Illinois Racing Commission would also be scrapped if the report and its recommended legislation becomes law. In its place would be a professional, salaried three-man board, according to the report.

The new report contains portions of several bills to reform racing that were introduced last year. The bills, which would have changed the racing board make-up and permitted the year-round and Sunday racing dates, did not become law.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said of the earlier bills, "I don't think this community would be delighted with Sunday racing."

THE REPORT ALSO urges creation of a statewide race track security force. The commission said current security practices at state tracks are ineffective.

"... the commission believes that criminal practices are not as widespread as some detractors allege, (but) the commission is convinced that a serious problem nevertheless prevails," the report said.

The report was critical of present enforcement of rules at Illinois tracks. "Criminal prosecutions for illegal practices are virtually nonexistent," it said.

The commission said the establishment of a bureau of race track security, funded and operated by the state, would alleviate the problem.

Former zoning official named as Wickes bagman

by BOB CASEY and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Nicholas Phillips, county zoning board employee indicted in the Wheeling shake-down scandal, has been identified by a key government witness as the bagman who collected $50,000 extorted from Wickes Inc., in 1971 at a North Side Chicago hotel.

The witness picked Phillips' photograph from several others last December, ending an intensive search for the suspected bagman less than two months before Phillips and five others were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The payoff allegedly took place Dec. 30, 1971, at the Lake Shore Drive Holiday Inn, 644 N. Lake Shore Dr., according to information contained in defense motions filed in U. S. District Court by Phillips' attorney, Louis Carbonaro.

IN THE MOTIONS, Carbonaro asked federal prosecutors to reveal the identity of the witness, which has been a closely kept secret since the $50,000 payoff was discovered late last year by investigators.

He also asked U. S. District Court Judge Prentice Marshall to throw out evidence of Phillips' identification by the witness, which he said "was induced by the actions of the (federal) agents" in violation of his client's constitutional rights.

Carbonaro said Phillips, 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was photographed Dec. 2 against his will after he was subpoenaed by a special grand jury investigating corruption in Wheeling village government. The photograph was then compared to photos of other persons by the prosecution witness, who identified Phillips.

The other persons photographed, Carbonaro charged, were "not dressed in similar fashion to the defendant or of similar age, color of hair, height, weight, build or general description."

The defense motions also revealed that the U. S. attorney has records that telephone calls were made between the phones of Phillips and his cousin, James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman also indicted by the grand jury Jan. 31.

STAVROS, 3705 Whirlaway Dr., Northbrook, has been a behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling village government for almost a decade. He faces a total of 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in alleged shakedowns of developers seeking zoning and building permits in Wheeling.

Stavros was not named in either of the two extortion indictments involving Wickes.

According to Carbonaro, the U. S. Attorney's Office plans to submit the telephone records as evidence in the case against Phillips and Ira Colitz, a former county zoning board member charged with aiding Phillips in the alleged shakedown of Wickes.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison acknowledged the existence of the records, which he said "show a relationship" between Stavros and Phillips. Kadison said, however, that "we have no evidence against Stavros in this case."

The Herald has learned that records of calls made from telephones of key suspects and others in the Wickes case provided important leads in tracking down persons involved in the shakedown scheme.

INFORMATION ABOUT the $50,000 payoff apparently was turned up late in the investigation, which started more than a year ago.

Rumors that certain village officials were given truckloads of free furniture by the company at the time zoning was approved circulated in the community for more than a year. Information on the furniture deliveries was given to federal investigators early in the probe by The Herald.

Through company records, the deliveries were traced from a Wickes warehouse in West Allis, Wis., to the homes of two indicted village officials, former trustee Michael Valenza and Building Dir. William Bieber.

Bieber was charged with extortion, conspiracy and perjury in the alleged furniture shakedown. Valenza, also accused of receiving extorted furniture, pleaded guilty Feb. 23 to one conspiracy count after the U. S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second count of extortion.

There has been no indication of any connection between the Bieber-Valenza indictment and the Phillips-Colitz indictment. Bieber, Phillips and Colitz have pleaded innocent.

TRIAL DATE FOR the Phillips-Colitz case has been scheduled for May 6. Judge Marshall is scheduled to rule shortly before the trial on the motion to throw out the photograph identification.

The Phillips defense motions came after a pretrial conference among Carbonaro and the prosecutors, Kadison and Assistant U. S. Atty. Howard Stone. Judge Marshall is expected to decide which defense requests for additional information must be answered by the government.

In addition to the identity of the government's key witness, Carbonaro has asked for records from the Chicago law firm that represented Wickes before village zoning officials in 1971. He also wants to know what happened to the $50,000 his client is accused of extorting from the company.

Sources involved in the investigation say the government has solid evidence tracing the payoff to Phillips, evidence apparently provided in part by the secret witness. What happened to the money after that, sources have indicated, will be up to Phillips to tell.

Carbonaro said Phillips has appeared before the grand jury but the defense attorney declined to comment on his client's testimony. Carbonaro also declined comment when asked if Phillips was present at the Holiday Inn on the day the alleged payoff was made.

ALSO TESTIFYING before the grand jury have been several key officials of Wickes. The decision to make a payoff to obtain zoning for the Wickes store, 351 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling, was made at a high corporate level, The Herald has learned.

The secret witness, however, apparently is not a company official. One source described him as an "outsider."

When the witness confronted investigators with his knowledge of the payoff, he had only a description of the bagman who picked up the $50,000. He described the man as dark, slender, just under six feet tall and 30 to 40 years old.

Armed with the description, investigators began to scour Wheeling in search of known associates of officials believed to be involved in the shakedown scheme. Apparently, telephone records helped trace the bagman to the telephone of a county official.

Phillips was eventually subpoenaed by the grand jury and was photographed twice for identification purposes, after a federal building camera malfunctioned the first time. His photograph was then shown to the government witness and Phillips was identified as the bagman.

Area man strikes gold with coin design

A coin design by artist Jack L. Ahr of Arlington Heights was selected yesterday one of three winning designs in the National Bicentennial Coin Design Competition sponsored by the United States Treasury Department.

Mrs. Mary Brooks, director of the United States Mint, told The Herald yesterday the Ahr design was selected by the National Sculptures' Assn for its appropriateness for the bicentennial year, 1976.

Ahr's design of a revolutionary war soldier playing a drum, will be on the backs of the bicentennial quarters, with the traditional George Washington design on the front.

Mrs. Brooks said the U.S. Mint will strike and issue some billion and one half quarters beginning July 4, 1975 with the Ahr design. The two other winning designs were chosen for the backs of dollar and half dollar coins.

Jack L. Ahr

"In fact," said Mrs. Brooks, "the quarter will receive much wider distribution than the dollar and half dollar designs and just millions of people will see the Ahr design every day."

AHR, OWNER OF Jack Ahr Design and Sales, 1902 S. Highland, will receive an award of $5,000 for his entry in the competition which began in December.

"We were just sitting on needles and pins this afternoon," Ahr said yesterday. "Then we got a phone call to say that I have won." He has previous experience with metal designs as an artist for a medallion company.

Ahr submitted a plaster model of his design in February and was chosen as one of six semi-finalists. A special committee yesterday met with Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz on selecting the winners.

Ahr's firm specializes in creating design for sales and product promotion products.

At Ned Brown Forest Preserve

Elk herd will move to a new clearing

by BOB GALLAS

Elk Grove Township's legendary elk herd, a long-time fixture along the north side of Higgins Road in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve, will be moving to a new home by the end of the year.

Their present home slated to become a lake as part of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed project, and has made it necessary to move the herd to a new location within the forest preserve, according to James Mattson, supervisor for the northwest district of the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Mattson said plans now call for the herd to be moved to the open part of the forest preserve on the northwest corner of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads. FORESTRY CREWS have already started preliminary clearing work at the site the herd is presently occupying. Mattson said a parking lot will be constructed at the new corner site for visitors and bids will probably be let this summer for a fence enclosure to hold the 12-member herd of elk.

Mattson added the timetable for the move isn't definite, since both federal and state monies are involved in the project, which may cause some delays, depending on the release of funds.

Mattson said the herd probably won't be moved until cold weather sets in this November and the herd moves in to take feed left by forest preserve personnel. Otherwise, the rest of the herd would tend to run off once the rounding up began, according to Mattson.

HOW DO YOU MOVE a herd of wild elk?

"We'll tranquilize them and then load them on trucks for the short trip down the street," said Mattson. The whole move shouldn't take longer than an hour or so," he added.

Two of the herd, one of which is part of what Mattson described as the "old herd strain," will be shipped to an Indiana state park sometime next week.

Another member of the herd which has been running loose since last year is still running free. The 2-year-old male was sighted by several motorists on Higgins and Arlington Heights roads earlier this year, but is now deep within the preserve, according to Mattson. The elk has successfully managed to elude forest preserve and zoo personnel trying to capture it and is becoming smarter with each day of freedom, he said.

THE HERD MOVES ON. The popular elk herd, located in Elk Grove Township's Ned Brown Forest Preserve will be moving to a new home. Facilities of Higgins and Arlington Heights roads. Construction of a fence and parking will start soon.

Junior Girl Scouts' party

Junior Girl Scout Troops 754 and 741 will be taking part in a swimming and roller skating party beginning at 8 p.m., Saturday in the Northwest Suburban YMCA, 300 E. Northwest Highway, Des Plaines.

About 70 scouts will be participating. The girls paid for the party through the sale of girl scout nuts last November.

Junior high band in festival

The Carl Sandburg Junior High School stage band will compete in the eighth annual Festival of Jazz being held March 16 at Mundelein High School, Mundelein.

Bands and combos from 22 schools will be judged between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. The top three bands will perform in an evening concert, which also features a college band.

Each of the three winning bands will be awarded a summer stage band scholarship to be given to the most deserving band member.

The contest from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. is open to the public at no charge. The 7 p.m. evening concert will cost $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students.

The festival is sponsored by the Mundelein Music Boosters and the Karnes Music Company of Des Plaines.

Marine, 19, saves runaway cab from crash

by JOE SWICKARD

"I didn't really think about it. I was just thinking about stopping the cab," said Marine Pvt. James T. Beck.

Beck, 19, of 2315 Olive, Arlington Heights, interrupted his leave from Camp Lejeune, N.C., Tuesday night to stop a runaway cab before it crashed into a building in Harwood Heights.

"I was driving down Montrose when this cab turned left in front of me. A woman was leaning out the window yelling and I could see there wasn't a driver," Beck said.

Deborah Pagni, Chicago, had just entered the cab driven by James Russell when she got "a funny feeling."

Miss Pagni said, "I had just told him the address and I got a funny feeling. The driver was super quiet and you know cab drivers usually talk a lot. I looked at him and I could see he was having a heart attack."

Russell was struggling for breath and trying to control the cab, she said. "I knew something was wrong but there was nothing I could do. I was afraid to jump into the front seat. The only thing to do was jump out, so I did," she said.

"THE LADY JUMPED out and she was screaming that the driver had had a heart attack. So I stopped my car and ran after it," Beck said.

"I was running behind the cab and the guy was chasing it. He caught it in time. He jumped in and stopped it before it hit the building," Miss Pagni said.

Beck, a former member of the swimming team at Maine East High School, chased the cab as it headed for a brick apartment building. It took him about 30 yards to catch the cab which was traveling driverless at 10 to 15 miles per hour, according to Miss Pagni.

"I got in and stepped on the brakes I looked at the driver first and then called in on the cab's radio," Beck said.

Beck stopped the cab two feet from the brick wall.

"I saw he stopped it okay, so I ran to a restaurant and called an ambulance for the driver," Miss Pagni said.

RUSSELL, 45, of River Grove, was taken to Resurrection Hospital for treatment and tests. He was listed in good condition.

"I'll tell you I was scared. It's terrible knowing there's something wrong and you can't help. When I was in the car and yelling out the window I could see people were concerned but they couldn't do anything. I was frightened," she said.

Beck said modestly he did not think of too much at the time. His concern was stopping the cab before it was too late.

"I just stopped my car and started after it," he said.

A spokesman for Gladstone Cab Co., Elmwood Park, owners of the cab, said, "It's great it is really something. We're grateful to the marine for doing something in the emergency."

Mugalian, Gerling clash on patronage donations

Incumbent Democratic Township Committeeman Richard Mugalian has charged that township patronage workers gave 2 per cent of their salaries to the party, before he became committeeman four years ago.

Mugalian's statement came during a candidates' debate sponsored by the Palatine League of Women Voters at St. Thomas of Villanova School Tuesday night.

Peter Gerling, who is trying to unseat Mugalian and was township committeeman when the practice allegedly took place, denied the charge. He said a "2 per cent club" has never existed in Palatine Township while he was the township's leading Democratic organizer.

Mugalian said when he defeated Gerling for committeeman in 1970, he ordered the practice stopped and said he sent back several checks from patronage workers. Gerling said "I don't know what he is talking about."

GERLING SAID YESTERDAY however, when contacted by the Herald, that patronage workers used to donate 1 per cent of their salary to the Democratic organization but the practice was "strictly voluntary." He said that when he took over as township committeeman there was no money and the practice of workers giving one per cent of their salaries was only one way to raise money. He said dinner dances and other fund-raising events were held. "It's nonsense to think an organization can be run without money," Gerling said.

In Mugalian's presentation to an audience of about 60 persons, he said he hoped "to preserve what is unique among our 30 township and 50 wards that make up the Cook County Central Committee — a truly open, democratic unit of the Democratic Party of our township."

"Despite the indictments, convictions, rank nepotism, vote fraud, arrogance and elitism, the machine continues to grind away," Mugalian said. "A great city and county have been in bondage to two generations of an in-bred 'family' of political musclemen."

GERLING SAID he "will not disagree with the Cook County Central Committee if the issues are not in the best interests of Palatine Township. He pledged to "carry out duties and responsibilities of township committeeman and be available any time for anyone in Palatine Township who needs assistance."

The township committeeman election is March 19. Mugalian, a lawyer, also faces reelection as state representative from the 2nd District. Gerling works for the Cook County Highway Department.

No debate at GOP meeting

There was no debate between candidates for Republican Palatine Township committeeman Tuesday night.

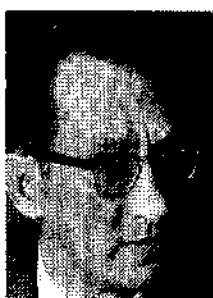

The Palatine League of Women Voters invited both incumbent committeeman Bernard Pedersen and challenger Anton Valukas to the forum but only Valukas showed up.

Pedersen has said he will not debate Valukas but rather favors newspaper interviews and other individual efforts by the two candidates to gain support. A spokeswoman for the League said that Pedersen felt candidate nights give off "more smoke than light" on the issues. Valukas has challenged Pedersen to debates on several occasions but Pedersen has refused.

Valukas told he group he "doesn't believe National Party labels should appear in Palatine Township" local elections adding his reason for running for township committeeman is to open up the party. "If we are to survive we must lend an ear to all opinion," he said.

"The party should be as diverse as Percy and Goldwater." Both are good Republicans, he said. "What we have now is a closed corporation... the beginning of the spoils system."

Four afternoons weekly

Parks to rent facility to Headstart

The Salt Creek Park Board has agreed to rent the basement of the Rose Park fieldhouse for four afternoons weekly to Project Headstart.

The basement will be used afternoons Monday through Thursday in order for Headstart to conduct preschool classes for Palatine Township children. The board agreed to enter into a contract to rent the space through July.

Project Headstart is a federally funded education program for preschool children from low income families. Headstart programs exist in the Northwest suburban area, but no program has existed before in Palatine Township because facilities for the classes could not be found.

THE PROGRAM has received a $13,500 grant from the Palatine Township board to supplement its funding. The money is coming from federal revenue sharing funds allotted to the township.

Headstart Director Ann Anderson made the request for the space during a meeting of the Salt Creek board Tuesday.

A contract arrangement has yet to be worked out concerning the monthly rental charges for the basement space as well as the shared cost of insurance and other fees.

Tentative plans call for the basement of the fieldhouse to be used from noon to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, with classes being held from 1 to 3 p.m.

CHILDREN WILL be bused to the location. Classes are tentatively scheduled to begin for 20 preschoolers by mid-March. Classes will be supervised by three staff members.

The program will also purchase its own equipment and chairs.

James DeVos, Salt Creek director of parks and recreation, said the district currently does not use the basement area of the fieldhouse for programs during weekday afternoons. He added, however, that the district's agreement with Headstart will last only until July. At that time if the district will need the basement area for its own programming, the contract probably will not be renewed.

Headstart came to the district requesting the space after attempts to find other locations in the township failed.

In other action at the board meeting Tuesday, the board agreed to adjourn the meeting until tonight to review bids for planned park improvement work. Original bids were rejected by the board because they were too high.

BIDS ARE scheduled to be reviewed tonight, with awarding of contracts tentatively planned for Saturday.

Planned improvements include landscaping, lighting and the purchase of additional equipment for the district's three parks. Tennis courts are also planned.

Youths arrested in drug raid at Plum Grove Shop Center

Three persons believed to have been supplying drugs to high school students in the Palatine and Arlington Heights area were arrested late Tuesday in Rolling Meadows.

Agents of the Metropolitan Enforcement Group and Rolling Meadows police arrested the three during an alleged "raid" at the Plum Grove Shopping Center.

Charged in the arrest were Robert Dell, 18, of Carbondale; David Karch, 18, of 547 Inverway, in unincorporated Palatine Township; and Rick Curtis, 26, of 615 Ivy Ln., Arlington Heights.

Karch and Curtis were charged with the sale of LSD. Karch was also charged with possession of marijuana. Dell was charged with conspiracy in connection with the alleged sale.

Bond for Karch was set at $2,500 and for Curtis and Dell at $5,000 each. All are scheduled to appear in Skokie branch of Cook County Circuit Court on March 24.

MEG agents said yesterday Dell is also believed to be wanted in Carbondale for drug-related offenses.

Agents from MEG, a special law enforcement unit organized in Cook County to combat drug traffic, had apparently been working on the arrest for several weeks. They said the three were believed to have been involved in drug trafficking to high schools in Palatine and Arlington Heights.

The dinner will be a smorgasbord with each mother bringing food. "Happiness is Choosing From All That Food," a PTA pot luck supper for all students and their parents, will be held at 6:30, March 12, in the Central Road School, 3800 Central Road.

Included in the program will be a sing-along with guitar accompaniment.

Tickets for the annual Janas Salk School card party scheduled for 8 p.m. March 26, can be obtained through school board members or by calling 253-4644 or 255-6357.

Costs per ticket is $1. The card party will be held in the school cafeteria, 3705 Pheasant Dr.

Harper police charge youth in purse theft

Harper College security police apprehended an alleged purse thief yesterday and charged him with theft and battery to a security cadet.

Orlando Smith, 18, of 4722 Arbor Ln., Rolling Meadows, was being held yesterday on $1,000 bond for allegedly stealing a purse which contained $5 from the third floor of Harper's "F" Building.

Smith allegedly struck security cadet Edward Dahlquist when the cadet attempted to arrest him after the 12:30 p.m. theft. The purse was reportedly placed as a decoy by Harper police in an effort to solve a number of purse thefts in recent weeks.

Smith is scheduled for an April 11 court hearing in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Husband guilty in wife shooting

A Cook County criminal court Tuesday found Robert Gray, 42, Rolling Meadows, guilty of two counts of aggravated battery for the Oct. 15 shooting of his wife.

Gray, 477 Gettysburg Dr., will be sentenced March 26 by Criminal Court Judge James Bailey.

Gray had been charged originally by Rolling Meadows police with attempted murder after he shot and injured his 40-year-old wife Mary. The shooting took place in the couple's home. Two of the couple's four teen-aged children were home at the time, but were not injured.

According to police, the two had been quarreling when Gray pulled a .22 caliber revolver and fired two shots at his wife. One shot struck her in the shoulder, and the other lodged in a dresser in the master bedroom.

The couple had been involved in divorce proceedings at the time and Gray had been issued a restraining order prohibiting him from harming his wife during the proceedings.

Gray has been held in Cook County Jail since the incident. He will remain in jail until sentencing.

Library meeting set

A special meeting of the Rolling Meadows Library Board will be held at 8 p.m. March 19 in the library, 3110 Martin Dr.

Library Director Virginia Connell said that the purchase of equipment for the proposed lounge will be discussed at that time.

Many parents don't spot drug use until it's too late

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Herald continues today with the third of a four-part series on drug abuse among youngsters in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates. Parents, students and local authorities were consulted by Staff Writer Stirling Morita while documenting the series.)

by STIRLING MORITA

A teenage girl lies in a ditch, unconscious, her pulse barely beating — apparently the victim of a drug overdose.

The day before, she had been sent home from her high school on "suspension" of drug usage, but her mother refused to believe she had indulged in drug activities, saying the girl's medication must have been responsible.

That is one of the problems authorities face in curbing drug abuse — the reluctance of parents to accept the fact that their children might be involved in the drug culture.

Authorities placed most of the responsibility for drug prevention on the parents and said parents must learn about drugs and become concerned about situations that might eventually involve them and their children, in the future.

HOWEVER, MANY parents aren't able to recognize drug abuse in their own home or become actively concerned until it's too late — when their child overdoses on drugs, authorities said.

Michael Mulcahy, police consultant for Conant High School, said, "If you get the parents to realize it, you have half the battle won."

Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy said, "Many times while the kid is living in the home, it (drugs) is right under their noses."

"The responsibility lies in the family not the school. In many cases it's the family (problems) that's causing it," said Larry Walker, director of youth services for Schaumburg Township. "It is the family's job to recognize it and come to grips with the problem that is causing drug usage."

Joe Rinella, police consultant at Hoffman Estates High School, said, "Most parents are concerned. Unfortunately, not many parents are informed, and some misinformed."

HE ADDED THAT some parents try to understand the drug situation, but are held back by misconceptions such as marijuana being as bad as heroin. "It (marijuana) is not because even the state law reflects that."

Terry McGraw, youth officer for Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54, said, "They (parents) can't recognize symptoms of drugs. Then it comes as a big shock to them when it occurs. Parents seem to only get involved after something happens."

MEG spokesman: pushers afraid of us

The young drug users in the area say the drug market is "drying up" and attribute it to recent drug raids.

That is what members of the Metropolitan Enforcement Group have been waiting to hear in their three-year fight against drug pushers. The largest drug enforcement group in Cook County is composed of 25 sheriff's police and police officers from 26 suburban towns.

In the Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area, MEG has arrested persons ranging in age from 14 to 48 years old, according to a group leader for MEG.

Youngsters, even those in junior high school, have heard of MEG. The name of MEG has come to mean drug enforcement.

THE GROUP leader said the first year MEG was in operation, arrested persons asked if MEG agents were federal agents or from the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, the second year those arrested asked if they were federal, FBI or MEG agents, and the third year, they asked if arresting officers were MEG agents. MEG never really gets involved with juveniles unless they are big suppliers, but the group leader said recently there have been more youngsters under high school age involved in drug "busts."

MEG relies a lot on information supplied by local policemen before embarking on investigations.

"We're geared to work on the local level, bridge the gap between federal and local agencies," he said.

"WE'RE INTERESTED in getting dope off the street before it gets to there (high school level)," he added. "They're scared of us."

The group leader said MEG seems to find more dealers in the transient towns with cheap apartments which may serve as "crash pads," although affluent homes are not exempt.

"We have seized boats and cars — and that takes money to buy," he said.

John Hinchey, director of MEG, said the quality and quantity of dangerous drugs like heroin, cocaine, PCP and amphetamines are increasing in the Northwest suburbs.

Police work on 'good lead' in Woodfield Theatre fire

Schaumburg police Wednesday were working on a "good lead" in connection with the arson fire Tuesday night at the Woodfield Theatre.

Richard Rodems, 62, of Palatine, the manager, who suffered a heart attack at the theater after the fire, was listed yesterday in serious condition but improving at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Police report 100 patrons were safely evacuated from the theater after two explosions went off seconds apart at 10:10 p.m. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

THE EXPLOSIONS, believed to have been caused by two cans of lighter fluid found at the scene, were followed by flames which spread along the back stage area to backdrop and curtains. Boxes and rubbish were also found which appeared to have been deliberately stacked in the backstage area.

The incident was the second arson attempt this week. On Monday night, caps removed from a gas meter at the theater caused gas to leak and a lighted cigaret was discovered nearby.

"It was business as usual" yesterday, said Edward Seguin, spokesman for ABC Great States Theatres, owners of the local film house.

Passes or refunds were offered in the lobby as patrons of Woodfield I departed because of the fire, he added.

'Clown' spurs election law probe here

by NANCY COWGER

An apparent "clown" in the Cook County clerk's office spurred a state's attorney's investigation of possible election law violations in Schaumburg Township.

No violations were found, and the books now are closed on what State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, township Republican committeeman, at first suspected was an attempt to bribe election judges.

Totten learned Feb. 21 that some Republican judges for the March 19 primary election were receiving phone calls from a person who wished to deliver "free gifts." The caller did not identify himself, said Totten, who planned to arrange for at least one judge to accept a gift to learn who was the benefactor.

AS OF FEB. 21, only three judges had received the offer, and all had turned it down, said Totten. Two days later, another judge reported a similar call.

The information was "very indefinite," said Totten, but the caller did make a point of the fact he was contacting only election judges. The "gift" was to be delivered March 15, said Totten.

By that time, Totten had discussed the matter with other township committeemen in the suburbs. None of them had received reports on any such calls, said Totten.

However, in checking with the county election department, The Herald learned there had been inquiries from other parts of the county about similar calls.

STATE'S ATTY. Bernard Carey promised to "look into" the phone calls. Carey emphasized he was "not calling any fraud at this time," adding he had "no ideas until I find out what it is." He assigned the investigation to Sheldon Gardner, chief of the civil division, and Richard Means, an assistant state's attorney in that division.

While Means and Gardner agreed it was "possible there is a criminal violation here," Gardner also said he suspected "there may be some misunderstanding."

And with his investigation concluded yesterday, Means did label the questionable phone calls a "misunderstanding," not election fraud.

Before each election, the clerk's office contacts judges in every voting precinct in Cook County. Materials to conduct elections must be delivered to each precinct, and it would be physically impossible to deliver them all to polling places on election day. They are dropped at the homes of one election judge per precinct a few days before the election. The election code specifies the Friday before, which is March 15 this year. To schedule the deliveries, employees of the clerk's election department telephone judges to ask if they are willing to accept the ma-

Committee recommends bus survey

Community attitude will determine the scope of local transportation service in Schaumburg.

Last night mass transportation committee members finalized plans for a survey to determine potential usership of commuter shopping service.

"We are working with Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates Jaycees to do a community investigation of potential bus service users," said Fred Dietrich, mass transportation committee chairman.

Dietrich said his committee has received service proposals from Walter Fiene of Schaumburg Transportation Co. and Claude Luisada of Metron Systems Corp., Mount Prospect.

Schaumburg Transportation Co., primarily a school bus operator, proposes dial-a-bus shopping service while Metron would do a transportation feasibility study and plan establishment and implementation of bus service, Dietrich said.

PRESENTLY Schaumburg Transportation Co. runs commuter buses to and from the Roselle Milwaukee Road commuter station. Metron does not operate in Schaumburg at the present time. Dietrich and other transportation committee members refused to discuss the costs of either proposal until the question reaches village trustees for a decision.

Dietrich said transportation committee members are also planning to ask the Greater Schaumburg Assn. of Commerce and Industry and Schaumburg land developers to consider cooperating in the service.

Last month Mayor Robert O. Atcher asked the committee to study the need for local bus service and indicated that the village would be able to appropriate about $100,000 for purchase of three minibuses.

A committee meeting is being planned for mid-March to formulate a proposal for village board consideration.

Rezoning required

S&L firm plans tennis, skating

Outdoor tennis courts and a skating pond for Damen Savings and Loan Assn. customers will be available when a permanent Schaumburg building is constructed on Higgins Road just east of the Golf Road intersection.

But construction is being temporarily held up pending rezoning of the six-acre site.

Representatives of the savings and loan association are expected to ask the village to rezone the land from B-3 (planned shopping center district) to B-2 (business district-general retail).

THE SITE NOW houses a mobile office unit being used as temporary headquarters for the savings and loan operation. Plans call for construction of a 38,656-square-foot, three-story building.

Plans commission review of the project was halted this week after it came to light that the property is in a B-3 district requiring approval of a site plan for the entire parcel.

Savings and loan officials say the building has been designed to cover about 9 per cent of their land but contend they were unaware of the restrictions in B-3 zoning.

The property, they say, was purchased from Handyman Inc., a subsidiary of Edison Brothers Co., St. Louis, without knowledge of the complete site plan approval requirement.

Zoning Board Chairman Russell Parker, who represents that group on the plans commission, said he does not believe anything would prohibit the proposed rezoning.

TO QUALIFY FOR B-2 zoning, a petitioner must either have property contiguous to a B-2 district or have a minimum site of four acres, Parker said.

The request is expected to reach the zoning board of appeals early next month.

Damen Savings and Loan Assn. merged with the former First Savings and Loan Assn. of Schaumburg about 15 months ago.

THEY BROWSE, examine and ask questions about annual camping and travel show at the Arlington Park Race Track this week are hesitant about buying. The gas shortage has caused some to think twice about long summer vacations.

Year-round and Sunday horse racing proposed

An overhauling of the state horse racing system, including the allowing of Sunday and year-round racing, was proposed Wednesday by the Illinois Legislative Investigating Commission.

The proposed sweeping changes include a "complete ban" on public officials owning race track stock; awarding of racing dates for a three-year period; and creation of a professional three-man racing board.

Arlington Park Race Track president Jack Loomer could not be reached for comment on the new proposals. However, he endorsed a similar bill to allow Sunday racing last year, saying horse racing was not unlike other professional sports such as baseball and football.

The report was the result of a year-long study, headed by Charles Siragusa, executive director of the investigating commission.

Present regulations ban horse races on Sundays and limit the racing season to spring, summer and fall.

THE REPORT recommended tracks be given dates over three years. Tracks are now awarded the dates yearly for the upcoming season.

The appointed six-member Illinois Racing Commission would also be scrapped if the report and its recommended legislation becomes law. In its place would be a professional, salaried three-man board, according to the report.

The new report contains portions of several bills to reform racing that were introduced last year. The bills, which would have changed the racing board make-up and permitted the year-round and Sunday racing dates, did not become law.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said of the earlier bills, "I don't think this community would be delighted with Sunday racing."

THE REPORT ALSO urges creation of a statewide race track security force. The commission said current security practices at state tracks are ineffective.

... the commission believes that criminal practices are not as widespread as some detractors allege, (but) the commission is convinced that a serious problem nevertheless prevails," the report said.

The report was critical of present enforcement of rules at Illinois tracks. "Criminal prosecutions for illegal practices are virtually nonexistent," it said.

The commission said the establishment of a bureau of race track security, funded and operated by the state, would alleviate the problem.

terials, sometimes referred to as an election kit.

THE SAME JUDGES who told Totten they were offered a "free gift" are listed as having been called by the election department, said Means.

By the time Means was assigned to the investigation, six judges had reported similar calls to Totten. Means said four of the six are scheduled to receive election materials. The other two refused to accept them, he said.

"Evidently somebody over there (in the election board) was a little cute in trying to talk these people into taking election materials. But there wasn't any kind of bribe attempt, or anything like that," said Means.

Means agreed it appeared the election judges had misinterpreted the offer of an election kit as a promise of an election "gift."

Ex-zoning official named as bagman

by BOB CASEY and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Nicholas Phillips, county zoning board employee indicted in the Wheeling shake-down scandal, has been identified by a key government witness as the bagman who collected $50,000 extorted from Wickes Inc., in 1971 at a North Side Chicago hotel.

The witness picked Phillips' photograph from several others last December, ending an intensive search for the suspected bagman less than two months before Phillips and five others were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The payoff allegedly took place Dec. 30, 1971, at the Lake Shore Drive Holiday Inn, 644 N. Lake Shore Dr., according to information contained in defense motions filed in U. S. District Court by Phillips' attorney, Louis Carbonaro.

IN THE MOTIONS, Carbonaro asked federal prosecutors to reveal the identity of the witness, which has been a closely kept secret since the $50,000 payoff was discovered late last year by investigators.

He also asked U. S. District Court Judge Prentice Marshall to throw out evidence of Phillips' identification by the witness, which he said "was induced by the actions of the (federal) agents" in violation of his client's constitutional rights.

Carbonaro said Phillips, 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was photographed Dec. 2 against his will after he was subpoenaed by a special grand jury investigating corruption in Wheeling village government. The photograph was then compared to photos of other persons by the prosecution witness, who identified Phillips.

The other persons photographed, Carbonaro charged, were "not dressed in similar fashion to the defendant, or of similar age, color of hair, height, weight, build or general description."

The defense motions also revealed that the U. S. attorney has records that telephone calls were made between the phones of Phillips and his cousin, James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman also indicted by the grand jury Jan. 31.

STAVROS, 3705 Whirlaway Dr., Northbrook, has been a behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling village government for almost a decade. He faces a total of 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in alleged shakedowns of developers seeking zoning and building permits in Wheeling.

Stavros was not named in either of the two extortion indictments involving Wickes.

According to Carbonaro, the U. S. Attorney's Office plans to submit the telephone records as evidence in the case against Phillips and Ira Colitz, a former county zoning board member charged with aiding Phillips in the alleged shakedown of Wickes.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Steven Kadison acknowledged the existence of the records, which he said "show a relationship" between Stavros and Phillips. Kadison said, however, that "we have no evidence against Stavros in this case."

The Herald has learned that records of calls made from telephones of key suspects and others in the Wickes case provided important leads in tracking down persons involved in the shakedown scheme.

INFORMATION ABOUT the $50,000 payoff apparently was turned up late in the investigation, which started more than a year ago.

Rumors that certain village officials were given truckloads of free furniture by the company at the time zoning was approved circulated in the community for more than a year. Information on the furniture deliveries was given to federal investigators early in the probe by The Herald.

Through company records, the deliveries were traced from a Wickes warehouse in West Allis, Wis., to the homes of two indicted village officials, former trustee Michael Valenza and Building Dir. William Bieber.

Bieber was charged with extortion, conspiracy and perjury in the alleged furniture shakedown. Valenza, also accused of receiving extorted furniture, pleaded guilty Feb. 28 to one conspiracy count after the U. S. Attorney's Office agreed to drop a second count of extortion.

There has been no indication of any connection between the Bieber-Valenza indictment and the Phillips-Colitz indictment. Bieber, Phillips and Colitz have pleaded innocent.

TRIAL DATE FOR the Phillips-Colitz case has been scheduled for May 6. Judge Marshall is scheduled to rule shortly before the trial on the motion to throw out the photograph identification.

The Phillips defense motions came after a pretrial conference among Carbonaro and the prosecutors, Kadison and Assistant U. S. Atty. Howard Stone. Judge Marshall is expected to decide which defense requests for additional information must be answered by the government.

In addition to the identity of the government's key witness, Carbonaro has asked for records from the Chicago law firm that represented Wickes before village zoning officials in 1971. He also wants to know what happened to the $50,000 his client is accused of extorting from the company.

Sources involved in the investigation say the government has solid evidence tracing the payoff to Phillips, evidence apparently provided in part by the secret witness. What happened to the money after that, sources have indicated, will be up to Phillips to tell.

Carbonaro said Phillips has appeared before the grand jury but the defense attorney declined to comment on his client's testimony. Carbonaro also declined comment when asked if Phillips was present at the Holiday Inn on the day the alleged payoff was made.

ALSO TESTIFYING before the grand jury have been several key officials of Wickes. The decision to make a payoff to obtain zoning for the Wickes store, 351 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling, was made at a high corporate level, The Herald has learned.

The secret witness, however, apparently is not a company official. One source described him as an "outsider."

When the witness confronted investigators with his knowledge of the payoff, he had only a description of the bagman, who picked up the $50,000. He described the man as dark, slender, just under six feet tall and 30 to 40 years old.

Armed with the description, investigators began to scour Wheeling in search of known associates of officials believed to be involved in the shakedown scheme. Apparently, telephone records helped trace the bagman to the telephone of a county official.

Phillips was eventually subpoenaed by the grand jury and was photographed twice for identification purposes, after a federal building camera malfunctioned the first time. His photograph was then shown to the government witness and Phillips was identified as the bagman.

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife go camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kervin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped productions, said Kervin. Along with business mismanagement, which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kervin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Rite-way Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display. Known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit, ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hersey on Monday. Hersey is a salesman for a line of trailers and said he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hersey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up.

"You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

"People think that in order to have good camping they have to go far," he said. "They don't realize that places nearby are just as good as those far away."

Though some people are worrying about the gas supplies, the dealers are encouraging people to go out and travel, but closer to home.

The Recreational Vehicle Industry Council has issued a folder on how it is going to confront the fuel shortage.

The council is encouraging the estimated 20 million users of recreational vehicles in the country to travel, but to travel at slower speeds in order to save on mileage and to stay closer to home.

GOING ON A trip may actually help a family to save money the family members would normally have spent on light, gas, electricity, food and other expenses, the council said.

Some of the people attending the show are newcomers to camping and traveling. Others there were like the William Hollands of Fox Lake who travel each year by camper.

"We go to the West coast, Colorado, and across the country," said Holland. Holland and his wife plan to move to California but would have planned to travel less far this summer because of the gas shortage.

For those who are counting on a camping trip this year, there are more than 23,000 campsites within 100 miles of Chicago. It doesn't take more than a tankful of gasoline to go camping, Kervin said, adding he hopes the show, which ends Sunday, will convince people to take shorter trips.

Parents, home keys in drug fight

ents know for sure that their children are using drugs. They only have suspicions that are never proven, the youngsters said.

One high schooler said, "I think they suspect, but they're afraid to ask."

One junior high school student pointed out that parents should have established good rapport with their children by the time the children reach junior high school. When drug usage is discovered, the parents should sit down and talk with the child without "yelling or screaming" he said.

"It's the good parents who ask what is wrong and what caused it when they find out," Mulcahy said.

SGT. RICHARD HECKER of the Hoffman Estates Police Department, said there occasionally are parents who really show they care.

He said that a couple of times a year, parents bring in "stuff" that they have found in their children's dresser drawers and want to know what it is.

"Most parents are afraid to bring it in because of the embarrassment," Hecker added.

Howard Winkelhake, police consultant at Schaumburg High School, said he has a parent come to the high school if a child is in an intoxicated state. "This way, if they see it for themselves, they'll believe it."

When a child is arrested, the parents have a tendency to side with their child, and not believe the policeman, Winkelhake added.

For the police consultant his job does not stop when the school bell signals the end of school. Rinella often goes to a home at 8 or 9 at night to talk to parents about drug abuse. "You have to show you care, of children headed in the direction of You have to play it straight with the kids."

HOW DOES A parent handle a situation when his child is involved with drugs?

The solution varies with the individual situation and can be difficult. A talk with the child, finding out what the deeper problem might be and counseling are beginnings.

Authorities maintained that parent drug education is probably as essential as student drug education. Parents seldom know the language and drug names popular in the youth culture.

Drug seminars are constantly available in the community, and one sure bet is they will always have sparse adult aturbs are starting to use heroin. They (the suburbs) are starting to have the problems Chicago has had," he said.

The younger children are using drugs, he said because "we know from the people we talk to."

"We have never made a grass sale bust where we didn't find any hard drugs," Hinchey said.

HE ADDED THAT the pusher is usually a 25-year-old, well-educated white male who started dealing drugs in college. MEG agents maintain that it takes money and connections to be a big drug dealer.

The decline in overdose deaths in Cook County for 1973 is misleading because there are incidents he knows of where suicides, car accidents, even drownings might have been drug connected.

tendance. Parents are not willing to leave their television sets or take a couple hours off their leisure time, officials said.

One drug seminar sponsored by the Hoffman Estates Loyal Parents in December had a grand total of 25 spectators. It was blizzard-like outside and at Christmas time.

ONE WOMAN AT the seminar appeared shocked when she heard that Hoffman Estates policemen had cut down nearly 100 pounds of marijuana plants before the golf course was constructed.

A little closer look at the drug scene will tell a person that it is not uncommon to find hemp (marijuana) plants in Illinois, where they were grown during World War Two, for rope production, and that marijuana plants that grow in the northern part of the country do not yield "good stuff."

Staff members of the Cook County Superintendent of School's office and states attorney's office were on hand at the seminar to point out some of the problems and causes of drug abuse and where to go if a specific drug problem should arise.

A SPECIAL PRESENTATION of vests made by the Sunflower Bluebirds of Hoffman Estates was held this week at the Early Childhood Center, a pre-kindergarten program at Armstrong School. The group of eight 6-year-old girls worked together for a month to make the gifts for ECC students.

Some Forest View students may go to other schools

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A change in the boundaries of four Dist. 214 high schools will affect students living in Mount Prospect Elementary School Dist. 57 and Wheeling Elementary School Dist. 21 if it is adopted by the Dist. 214 Board of Education Monday.

The Dist. 214 administration has recommended that Forest View High School students living in Dist. 57 be sent to Prospect High School next year and Hersey High School students living in Dist. 21 be sent to Wheeling High School.

The change in boundaries would be effective next September but Dist. 214 officials have asked the board to give students the option of staying in their original school. All students now attending Forest View or Hersey would have the option of staying there until graduation, next year's incoming freshmen would have the same option and so would students whose older brothers or sisters attend the original school. Free bus transportation will be provided by the district for students who decide to stay in their original school.

DIST. 214 officials originally proposed a boundary change to relieve overcrowding at Forest View High School. All Dist. 214 schools are designed for 2,500 students except Hersey which has a capacity of 2,750. Enrollment next year at Forest View is expected to be 2,815 and projections show the enrollment will peak in 1977 with 3,320.

If the boundary changes are not made Hersey will have 2,790 students next year, Prospect will have 2,395 and Wheeling will have 1,960. Dist. 214 officials have now decided to change the boundaries for Wheeling and Hersey High Schools to balance enrollment there. Wheeling's enrollment is lower than the other schools because the area has a large number of apartment units which have not generated as many high

Rob Roy hearing No. 3 slated for tonight

Round No. 3 in continuing series of public hearings on plans to convert the Rob Roy Golf Course near Mount Prospect to a 4,500-unit apartment-condominium development is scheduled for 8 p.m. today.

The hearing will be conducted by the village's zoning board of appeals in the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

At the first hearing, Jan. 24, officials of Kenroy, Inc., Skokie, outlined plans for the development, known as Golfstream. At the last hearing, Feb. 21, residents denounced the development to varying degrees, and posed numerous questions for the Kenroy officials.

Tonight, members of the zoning board are expected to raise questions about the plans. Each zoning board member has been assigned a certain area on which to focus, such as flooding or density.

The Rob Roy project has aroused considerable opposition, mostly in the residential areas immediately adjacent to the golf course. Several petitions have already been submitted by residents of both Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights, opposing high density development of the golf course.

The course is east of Wheeling Road, between Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

Village OKs high-rise bank plan

by MARCIA KRAMER

Plans for a six-story Mount Prospect State Bank building in downtown Mount Prospect whizzed by the village board Tuesday night.

The trustees, after some discussion about possible traffic problems, gave the stamp of approval to plans for the $4 million facility a block east of the present bank, 15 E. Busse Ave. Formal approval will come at a later board meeting.

Groundbreaking is scheduled this spring, with completion of the bank expected early next year. The building is expected to become a focal point for the revitalization of the central business district.

Village trustees, meeting as a committee of the whole, will meet with other local officials at 7:30 p.m. today in the village hall to discuss the future of downtown Mount Prospect. An outside planning consultant, Kenneth Tucker of Kenroy, Inc., Skokie, is expected to be hired to conduct a study of downtown Mount Prospect. The meeting will be open to the public.

A BRIEF PRESENTATION of the plans for the new bank preceded the board's approval Tuesday night. Trustees George B. Anderson and Richard N. Hendricks questioned whether

by BETTY LEE

For the past 13 years Mr. and Mrs. John Keyzer of Rolling Meadows packed up their camping trailer and loaded the kids into the car for summer vacation. But not this year.

They were planning to go to California, but because of the lack of gas, the Keyzers are thinking of other ways to take their vacation without worrying about gas. Last year they camped in Florida and getting gas was no problem.

"We have been giving it a lot of thought," said Keyzer. "We want to go to California but now it looks like it's out of the question. I guess we'll have to wait and see what the gas situation's going to be."

The Keyzers were browsing at the gleaming campers, trailers and motor homes at the sixth annual Camping and Travel Show at the Arlington Park Race Track yesterday.

Dealers there know they won't be selling as much of their wares as they did last year at the show. The people are nervous about getting gas, they said.

BILL KERVIN, president of the Chicago Recreation Vehicle Dealers Assn., which is sponsoring the show, estimates a drop of 15 to 20 per cent on sales at the show this week.

"John Q. Public is sure he is being had," said Kervin of the gasoline shortage. "The people are irritable and it's going to take some time to not be frantic about gas." Kervin added the people are becoming skeptical of whether there is a gasoline shortage.

Along with the decrease in sales, the dealers at the show are expecting a smaller crowd this year. Kervin estimated that 43,000 persons at most will attend, which is about a 30 per cent decrease from last year's attendance of 65,000.

Ernest Andres, who came to the show from Twin Lakes, Wis., was thinking of buying a motor home. "With the gas shortage I wouldn't even consider it," he said.

Other persons were more optimistic about their vacations. Some said they thought the gas shortage will cease by summer and some are considering taking shorter trips.

"We love camping too much to give it up," said Mrs. Len Johnson of Streamwood. "Even if we go 10 miles it would still be away from home."

THE JOHNSONS bought a camper last

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife go camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kervin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped productions, said Kervin. Along with business mismanagement, which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kervin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Gateway Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display. Known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit, ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hersey on Monday. Hersey is a salesman for a line of trailers and he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hersey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up. "You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

"People think that in order to have good camping they have to go far," he said. "They don't realize that places nearby are just as good as those far away."

Though some people are worrying about the gas supplies, the dealers are encouraging people to go out and travel, but closer to home.

The Recreational Vehicle Industry Council has issued a folder on how it is going to confront the fuel shortage.

The council is encouraging the estimated 20 million users of recreational vehicles in the country to travel, but to travel at slower speeds in order to save on mileage and to stay closer to home.

GOING ON A trip may actually help a family to save money the family members would normally have spent on light, gas, electricity, food and other expenses, the council said.

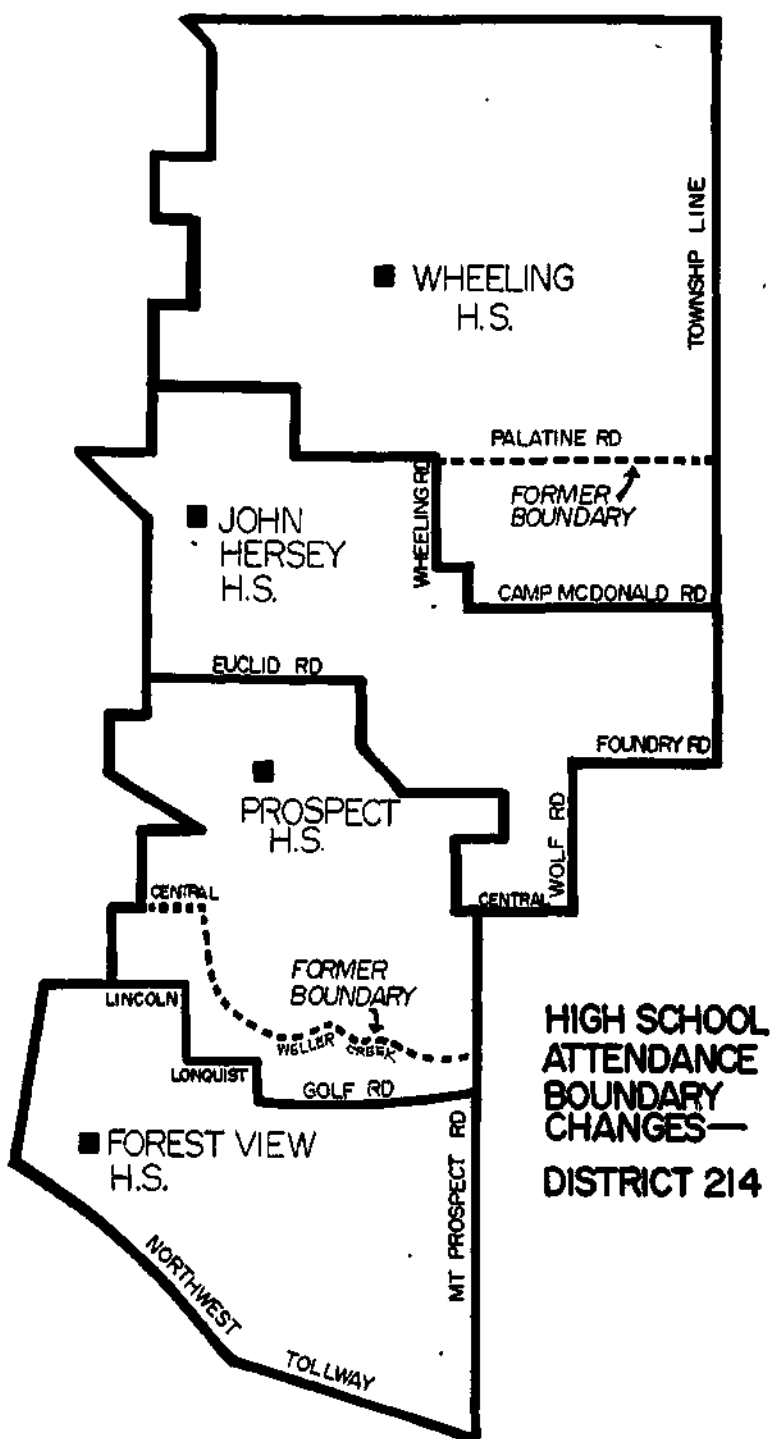

Some of the people attending the show are newcomers to camping and traveling. Others there were like the William Hollands of Fox Lake who travel each year by camper.

"We go to the West coast, Colorado, and across the country," said Holland. Holland and his wife plan to move to California but would have planned to travel less far this summer because of the gas shortage.

For those who are counting on a camping trip this year, there are more than 23,000 campsites within 100 miles of Chicago. It doesn't take more than a tankful of gasoline to go camping, Kervin said, adding he hopes the show, which ends Sunday, will convince people to take shorter trips.

Forest View boundary vote set

school students as school officials anticipated.

The boundary change would remove students from Forest View and Hersey and place them in Prospect and Wheeling. The Dist. 57 area affected by the change generates about 110 high school students per year and the Dist. 21 area generates about 100 students per year.

The Dist. 214 board moved its meeting Monday at 8 p.m. from the board room to the Prospect High School auditorium so parents can attend the meeting and express their views on the recommended changes.

THE BOARD has had two meetings to discuss the boundary change in recent weeks. Both were attended by parents, primarily from the Des Plaines area of Forest View High School who came to ask the board not to move their children to another high school.

One of the boundary changes considered by Dist. 214 officials would have moved Forest View High School students in Des Plaines to Elk Grove High School. The Des Plaines area was shifted from Forest View to Elk Grove in 1966 and back to Forest View in 1970.

Near the train station

100 parking spaces coming

An extra 100 metered parking spaces near the Mount Prospect train station may be available to commuters this spring.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley announced Tuesday night that a change in the village's lease with the Chicago and North Western Ry. will allow 100 more spaces to be built, some at each end of the present parking lots.

The extra spaces will boost the number of parking spaces near the depot to 685. Currently, 420 spaces are provided in municipal lots (at 30 cents a day per space) and 175 spaces in private lots (at 50 cents a day).

EPPLEY SAID details of the new spaces have not yet been worked out. He did not give a cost estimate, but said "there's money in the budget." The railroad, for the first time, has agreed to pay more than one-third the cost of the construction, as much as $250 a month.

The property along the tracks is owned by the railroad and leased to the village. Eppley said construction of the new spaces will begin "the minute the weather gets good" and the ground dries.

Commuters have complained of insufficient parking spaces at the depot, and many have resorted to parking illegally on nearby residential streets. The shortage of gasoline, prompting many drivers to commute by rail, has added to the congestion.

Coin collection stolen in burglary

Two more burglaries, one in which a coin collection was taken, have been reported to Mount Prospect police.

This makes a total of 43 burglaries so far this year — well ahead of last year's pace.

The coin collection, value unknown, was stolen from the Harry Bruhl residence, 1818 Dresser Dr., sometime between 9:30 a.m. and 5:45 p.m. Tuesday. The collection consisted of 14 collector books. Police said a window in the front recreation room door was broken enabling the burglar to enter the home. Also taken was $47.50 in cash.

The second burglary occurred at the Maine Block residence, 114 S. Pine St., sometime between 4 p.m. Monday and 3:10 p.m. Tuesday. Police said while they were not sure, it appeared nothing was taken. The rear porch door had been forced.

downtown streets are capable of handling additional traffic, but Trustee O. T. Gustus, a traffic engineer, said "the traffic problems won't be greater than they are now." He described the traffic pattern devised for the new bank as "a very good plan."

Entrances and exits to the facility will be provided on Busse Avenue, with secondary access on Emerson Street and Maple Street (entrance only). The bank will connect to the present drive-in banking facility on Maple Street.

One resident, Michael Ward, 400 S. Main St., complained of a limited number of parking spaces in the central business district, to which Mayor Robert D. Teichert readily agreed. "The biggest violator of adequate parking spaces is the Village of Mount Prospect itself," Teichert said.

The new cubed bank building will be made of precast marble quartz panels with bronze tone glass windows. Some 77,125 square feet of floor space will be provided, as compared with 18,000 in the present building. At first, the bank will use the first four floors and lease office space in the top two floors until they are needed by the bank. It currently has assets of $123 million.

IN ADDITION to the rezoning request, the bank is asking for four zoning variations: A height of 96 feet for the building, 68 feet higher than the stated maximum; one parking space per 300 square feet of floor space versus the required one space per 200 square feet; a parking space of 9 by 20 feet versus 10 by 20; and inclusion of two, rather than the required three, loading spaces.

$16.5 million possible without referendum

Village can issue bonds for flood-control program

by KURT BAER

The Village of Arlington Heights apparently could issue $16.5 million worth of general obligation bonds to pay for its comprehensive flood control program without referendum approval, The Herald has learned.

Village officials have been informed that Chapman & Cutler, Chicago bond attorneys, will authorize the bond sale without a referendum because of Arlington Heights' standing as a home rule municipality.

A village-wide vote on the bonded indebtedness has been scheduled for Saturday, May 18.

Despite the bond attorneys' decision, the chairman of the Citizens' Action Committee Against Flooding, Trustee Frank Palmatier, said yesterday he still feels the referendum should be held to measure public support for flood control.

"Even if we're legally able to do so, it would be politically unwise to undertake a project of this magnitude without a referendum. We need to know where the voters stand on this," Palmatier said.

THE SALE OF $16.5 million in general obligation bonds would add an average of $29 to the annual real estate taxes on a house with an assessed valuation of $10,000 (a house with a market value of about $45,000). On a house with a market value of $68,000, the bond issue would increase taxes by an average of $43 each year of the 20-year bond issue.

Last spring, when Arlington Heights' flood control referendum was first discussed, Chapman & Cutler rejected the notion that the 1970 Illinois Constitution eliminated the public debt ceiling for home rule units.

"The attorneys apparently have changed their minds and now say that, as far as they're concerned, they would be willing to issue bonds under home rule," Palmatier said.

UNDER THE OLD constitution, municipalities were limited in bonded indebtedness. The total amount of general obligation bonds, which are paid off with real estate taxes, could not exceed 5 percent of the assessed valuation of all real property in the municipality.

The new constitution removed the debt ceiling, leaving any new regulation to the state legislature. So far, the legislature has not imposed any new limits.

Palmatier said he felt "sure there would be discussion by the village board of the attorneys' opinion," and he predicted that the board "may not be unanimous" in a decision to still proceed with a referendum.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Village Pres. Jack Walsh said yesterday that the village's new credit power "did not at all affect the need for the referendum."

"For this kind of money, I simply would want to use a referendum for advice, if nothing else," he said.

Asked whether the village board might authorize the bond sale even if it is turned down by the voters on May 18, Walsh said:

"If the referendum is soundly defeated, there would be a great reluctance on my part to do it on any substantive basis. On a nominal basis—and I mean relative to $16.5 million—we might sell bonds to implement some parts of the program."

Both Walsh and Palmatier said property acquisition was a first step in the program which might be taken even if the sale of the total $16.5 million bond issue is turned down.

"It is very possible that we might want to conduct a holding action and acquire the various sites for these detention basins before they are gobbled up by developers. But I doubt if we would want to go much beyond that," Palmatier said.

THE ACQUISITION of land for the eight retention basins that are the backbone of the flood control program is estimated to cost slightly more than $5.6 million. The figure includes the purchase of 113 acres along McDonald Creek, land that ultimately would be developed as a recreational Lake Arlington.

Palmatier, also chairman of the village board's finance committee, said the new bonding power gives Arlington Heights "new avenues of financing to explore in emergency situations."

Walsh said that Chapman & Cutler's position had been conveyed by Village Atty. Jack Siegel who has been handling the legal work for the May 18 referendum. Siegel could not be reached for comment yesterday.

Palmatier said he doubted whether the bonds were sold with or without referendum would have any effect on the interest rate the village would have to pay on the loan.

The interest rate is calculated on the basis of the amount of the bond sale and the magnitude of the village's total assessed valuation, he said.

A NEIGHBORHOOD street in Arlington Heights runs acre. The person looking for a bigger home has little past homes where the average lot size is a fifth of an alternative than to move out of the village.

'They all want trees' Well-to-do Arlington residents move to elite suburbs in search of land

by KURT BAER

Give me land, lots of land
Don't fence me in.

The old song isn't heard much these days. But its theme is on the minds of a growing number of Arlington Heights residents who are turning their eyes North and Northwest to find new homes in the wide open spaces.

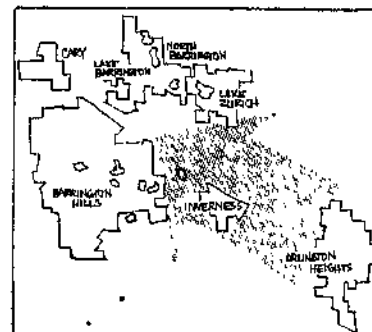

They move to Inverness, Long Grove, Barrington, where those who can afford it live like squires.

For those who can pay the price, country living can be an attractive alternative to the crowding, the traffic and the many other problems associated with Arlington Heights' rapid growth.

"In Arlington Heights they're probably leaving a $50,000 or $60,000 house. They come up here and discover they can't buy much for $70,000 or even $80,000," says Sandy Jacobi, sales manager with Whitney Realty in Barrington.

IT IS NOT UNCOMMON to find unimproved property selling for $20,000 an acre, the bare minimum lot in many outlying areas that jealously guard their prestige name and want to hold the line on housing density.

Snob appeal, prestige, a leap up the social ladder are the obvious reasons an Arlington Heights resident might elect to move. But there are other pressures as well.

"Almost always, what they want is land — more space. But it's not just country living because many still want their neighbors, but not on top of them," Mrs. Jacobi says.

Another property broker, Lois Spradlin of Krole Real Estate in Barrington, says "everybody wants at least an acre. And trees, they always want trees."

Jo Hayes, a 12-year resident of Arlington Heights and past president of the Arlington Beautification Council (ABC), recently moved to Inverness to find what she calls "a touch of the country."

SHE AND HER HUSBAND chose to stay in the Northwest area, rather than move to Lake Forest or Hinsdale, which they also considered, largely because of their friends in Arlington Heights.

"We invested a lot of years in some very good friends and moving to Hinsdale or Lake Forest, well, for us, that would be really moving. In Inverness, I thought we had found the best of all possible worlds," she says.

Part of that world is a bigger house on a bigger lot, where Mrs. Hayes says she can hear water lapping in a backyard pond and songbirds singing in the trees.

"Stonegate (her former address in Arlington Heights) is a lovely, lovely area. But there are not a lot of alternatives if you want to find a little more home in the community."

As ABC president, Mrs. Hayes waged war on blight and insensitivity to the need for what she once called "massive doses of beautification" in Arlington Heights.

"Hopefully Arlington Heights will be paying attention to the quality of life, not just the quantity of life," she says. "I THINK ARLINGTON has done a particularly good job in handling its rapid growth. But I wonder if that will continue. Without some very forceful people, I'm afraid that beautification may well get pushed aside."

Another ex-Arlington Heights resident, Mrs. Robert Englehardt, who now lives in Barrington, says she sold her eight-acre

Local resident 'strikes gold' with coin design

A coin design by artist Jack L. Ahr of Arlington Heights was selected yesterday one of three winning designs in the National Bicentennial Coin Design Competition sponsored by the United States Treasury Department.

Mrs. Mary Brooks, director of the United States Mint, told The Herald yesterday the Ahr design was selected by the National Sculptures' Assn. for its appropriateness for the bicentennial year, 1976.

Ahr's design of a revolutionary war soldier playing a drum, will be on the backs of the bicentennial quarters, with the traditional George Washington design on the front.

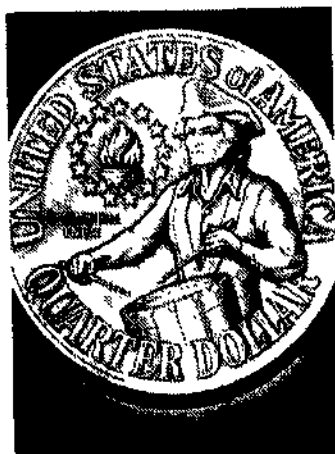

Mrs. Brooks said the U.S. Mint will strike and issue some billion and one half quarters beginning July 4, 1975 with the Ahr design.

The two other winning designs were chosen for the backs of dollar and half dollar coins.

"In fact," said Mrs. Brooks, "the quarter will receive much wider distribution than the dollar and half dollar designs and just millions of people will see the Ahr design every day."

AHR, OWNER OF Jack Ahr Design and Sales, 1802 S. Highland, will receive an award of $5,000 for his entry in the competition which began in December.

"We were just sitting on needles and pins this afternoon," Ahr said yesterday. "Then we got a phone call to say that I have won." He has previous experience with metal designs as an artist for a medallion company.

Ahr submitted a plaster model of his design in February and was chosen as one of six semi-finalists. A special committee yesterday met with Secretary of the Treasury George P. Shultz on selecting the winners.

Ahr's firm specializes in creating design for sales and product promotion products.

home on Algonquin Road after the area went commercial.

"Taxes and congestion pushed us out," she says. "Twelve years ago (when she first moved to Arlington Heights) Algonquin Road was a little farm road."

Today it is a burgeoning commercial strip.

Mrs. Englehardt says she is happy with her new home in Barrington. "It's quiet again," she says.

But like Mrs. Hayes, she still has ties to Arlington Heights.

"WE'RE STILL members of the Congregational Church in Arlington Heights and have a number of friends in town," she says.

Mrs. Pary Nelson moved to Chipendale, north of Barrington, after living four years in Arlington Heights' Twelve Oaks Apartments.

She and her husband moved to Barrington "because it had the house that we wanted," she says. They looked "all over" for their new home, including Arlington Heights.

"We wanted to be out of what was getting to be a congested area, even though Arlington Heights was rather convenient for my husband who works in Chicago."

The Charles Harrington family moved to Ferndale Woods, east of Barrington, from their Hasbrook home in Arlington Heights because "we wanted a little more land and more country," Mrs. Harrington says.

The Harringtons spent 12 years in Arlington Heights and still do some shopping here she says.

THE SMALL TOWN OF Trout Valley appealed to Richard Tippie and his wife because, as she puts it, "We just wanted to get away — out where we could do some fishing."

For three years the Tippiess lived on north Derbyshire Avenue and after a short job transfer to St. Louis, they returned to Arlington Heights. Five months later, they had decided they wanted to move.

RTA dinner-debate tickets available

Tickets are still available for Tuesday's dinner and debate on the Regional Transportation Authority, sponsored by the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce.

Speaking against the RTA referendum will be State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and representatives Eugene Schickman, R-Arlington Heights, and Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates. Proponents will be representatives Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, and Harold Katz, D-Glenview. The debate, which will be open to the public, will begin at 8 p.m. at the Lancer Restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg. A social hour at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:30 will precede the debate. Dinner tickets are $7.25 per person, with seating at legislators' tables when possible on a first-come-first-serve basis. Reservations may be made by phoning 283-1703.

Like many others, Tippie has had to absorb the extra cost and time of commuting to his job in Chicago as part of the price of "get away" living.

Pat Chambers, a seven-year veteran with the welcome wagon service for new residents throughout the Barrington area, says there has been a noticeable increase in the number of Arlington Heights residents she has welcomed to new homes.

While Arlington Heights' upward and outward bound residents make up something less than an exodus, at least one official, Trustee Alice Harms, is thinking and talking about the problem.

"I think we have to make sure we don't grow into an ugly city with all the kinds of things people move away from," she says. "The kind of things we provide in Arlington Heights should be something people can't get elsewhere, whether it be the community, schools, parks or what have you," she says.

MRS. HARMS WAS the only village trustee to recently vote against the installation of new, high power sodium vapor street lights for the Scarsdale subdivision, one of Arlington Heights' prestigious residential areas.

Replacement of the older, incandescent lamps is scheduled in Scarsdale this summer, at a cost of $250,000. A similar program raised a storm of controversy several years ago in Stonegate.

It is difficult, says Village Planner Joe Kesler, for some people to think of Arlington Heights as something more than the small village it once was.

But the fact is that Arlington Heights — with an approximate population of 70,000 — is now probably among the 10 largest cities in the state, and may rank as high as fourth or fifth in population among cities in the metropolitan area.

According to a survey carried out by the village planning department in the summer of 1972, traffic and crowding stand out as the two biggest concerns among Arlington Heights residents.

NEARLY 35 PER CENT of the people surveyed said they expected to move from Arlington Heights within five years. Slightly more than 20 per cent said they would move because they wanted more space; 15 per cent said they wanted a better quality home.

A new housing proposal, which Kesler calls "unique in the Midwest" may someday offer the Arlington Heights resident an alternative to the traditional subdivision housing that prevails in the village today.

Miller Builders is planning the project for a 150-acre site in Lake County at Ill. Rte. 53 and County Line Road. If the property is annexed and the development approved, it would extend Arlington Heights' northern boundary to the village limits of Long Grove.

Miller's plan attempts to combine the country atmosphere of outlying communities with the convenience and affordability of Arlington Heights. Large areas of prairie grass would be left to grow in a natural state, along with existing trees, ponds and streams.

DENSITY IN the development would be about 3.5 units per acre, with the majority of units being single family homes clustered along winding streets. Homes would be priced in a bracket comparable to those in Miller's Northgate subdivision in Arlington Heights.

"This project would provide a tremendous alternative in Arlington Heights. Just across Checker Road, in Long Grove, a house would cost you $110,000," Kesler said.

A transition development such as the one proposed by Miller would seem to be tailor-made for the resident searching for a way out of the wall-to-wall housing web, but without the high income for a country estate.

THE WIDE OPEN spaces of Inverness of country living. Land is costly and appeal to persons looking for a feel acre minimum lots are the rule.

Marine rescues runaway taxicab

by JOE SWICKARD

"I didn't really think about it. I was just thinking about stopping the cab," said Marine Pvt. James T. Beck.

Beck, 19, of 2315 Olive, Arlington Heights, interrupted his leave from Camp Lejeune, N.C., Tuesday night to stop a runaway car before it crashed into a building in Harwood Heights.

"I was driving down Montrose when this cab turned left in front of me. A woman was leaning out the window yelling and I could see there wasn't a driver," Beck said.

Deborah Pagni, Chicago, had just entered the cab driven by James Russell when she got "a funny feeling."

Miss Pagni said, "I had just told him the address and I got a funny feeling. The driver was super quiet and you know cab drivers usually talk a lot. I looked at him and I could see he was having a heart attack."

Russell was struggling for breath and trying to control the cab, she said. "I knew something was wrong but there was nothing I could do. I was afraid to jump into the front seat. The only thing to do was jump out, so I did," she said.

"THE LADY JUMPED out and she was screaming that the driver had a heart attack. So I stopped my car and ran after it," Beck said.

"I was running behind the cab and the guy was chasing it. He caught it in time. He jumped in and stopped it before it hit the building," Miss Pagni said.

Beck, a former member of the swimming team at Maine East High School, chased the cab as it headed for a brick apartment building. It took him about 30 yards to catch the cab which was traveling driverless at 10 to 15 miles per hour, according to Miss Pagni.

"I got in and stepped on the brakes I looked at the driver first and then called in on the cab's radio," Beck said.

Beck stopped the cab two feet from the brick wall.

"I saw he stopped it okay, so I ran to a restaurant and called an ambulance for the driver," Miss Pagni said.

RUSSELL, 45, of River Grove, was taken to Resurrection Hospital for treatment and tests. He was listed in good condition.

"I'll tell you I was scared. It's terrible knowing there's something wrong and you can't help. When I was in the car and yelling out the window I could see people were concerned but they couldn't do anything. I was frightened," she said.

Beck said modestly he did not think of too much at the time. His concern was stopping the cab before it was too late.

"I just stopped my car and started after it," he said.

A spokesman for Gladstone Cab Co., Elmwood Park, owners of the cab, said, "It's great it is really something. We're grateful to the marine for doing something in the emergency."

Restaurant-pub approved by planners for 1 N. Vail

The Arlington Heights Plan Commission last night approved a restaurant-pub at 1 N. Vail.

The approval came on a unanimous vote from the commissioners, but several riders were attached to the decision which will be forwarded to the Village Board of Trustees for final action.

The problem of payment of compensatory fees for off-street parking was passed on to the trustees for a final decision. The planners said the job of determining the exact number of spaces to be compensated and the rate was the jurisdiction of the trustees.

Estimates of 35 and up to 55 parking spaces at a compensatory cost ranging from $25,000 to $40,000 and up to $64,000 have been aired. The trustees will have the determining voice in how many spaces will be needed to satisfy the village ordinance and at what rate.

Another proviso attached to the approval called for the developers to lose their special-use permit if the business converted to a liquor-serving establishment exclusively. The planners said they did not want a "swinging singles bar" in the central business district.

THE DEVELOPERS, Will Dorsch and Allan MacFarlane, operate two bars in the area catering primarily to a younger clientele. They are owners of Runyon's in Palatine and have an interest in The Nickel Bag in Schiller Park.

The commission also required the developers to keep the side and rear yards as landscaped green areas. Dorsch and MacFarlane had said they were considering an open air eating area for those yards.

The restaurant is to be located in one of the oldest buildings in the village. It was built in 1893 and originally housed a general store.

Dorsch and MacFarlane plan to have a family restaurant with seating on the main floor and in the basement. A balcony will also have some seating. They plan a total seating capacity of 150.

They said they have received the aid of the Historical Society of Arlington Heights in obtaining furnishings from the turn-of-the-century.

The village board will have the final say on the restaurant and the granting of a liquor license. No date has been set for a board hearing.

Village OKs $10,000 flood vote program

A $10,000 public-information program in support of the May 18 flood-control referendum has been outlined by village officials.

A pamphlet, explaining the $16.5 million flood prevention program will be mailed to all Arlington Heights residents in about two weeks, according to Asst. Village Mgr. Darryl Kenning, who is coordinating the publicity campaign.

Other ways of informing residents about the proposed sale of general obligation bonds to pay for the flood control program include:

- Meetings with homeowner and civic associations where slides will be used to illustrate the flooding problem and the village's proposed solution.

- A second pamphlet to all residents intended to answer recurrent questions about the program.

- Posters that will be put up at various locations around the village.

- Doorknob hangers which will be passed out just before the referendum, urging residents to vote on May 18.

"We're trying to reach residents in three places — where he lives, through the clubs and associations he belongs to, and publicly, around town," Kenning said.

The general approach to publicity was agreed on at a recent meeting of the Citizens' Action Committee Against Flooding and the village board's public relations committee.

The wording of the various pamphlets and posters is being prepared now, Kenning said. The village will ask for quotes on the printing and mailing of the material.

The maximum cost should not exceed $10,000, he said.

THEY BROWSE, examine and ask questions about annual camping and travel show at the Arlington Park Race Track this week are hesitant about buying. The gas shortage has caused some to think twice about long summer vacations.

by BETTY LEE

For the past 13 years Mr. and Mrs. John Keyzer, of Rolling Meadows, packed up their camping trailer and loaded the kids into the car for summer vacation. But not this year.

They were planning to go to California, but because of the lack of gas, the Keyzers are thinking of other ways to take their vacation without worrying about gas. Last year they camped in Florida and getting gas was no problem.

"We have been giving it a lot of thought," said Keyzer. "We want to go to California but now it looks like it's out of the question. I guess we'll have to wait and see what the gas situation's going to be."

The Keyzers were browsing at the gleaming campers, trailers and motor homes at the sixth annual Camping and Travel Show at the Arlington Park Race Track yesterday.

Dealers there know they won't be selling as much of their wares as they did last year at the show. The people are nervous about getting gas, they said.

BILL KERVIN, president of the Chicago Recreation Vehicle Dealers Assn., which is sponsoring the show, estimates a drop of 15 to 20 per cent on sales at the show this week.

"John Q. Public is sure he is being had," said Kervin of the gasoline shortage. "The people are irritable and it's going to take some time to not be frantic about gas." Kervin added the people are becoming skeptical of whether there is a gasoline shortage.

Along with the decrease in sales, the dealers at the show are expecting a smaller crowd this year. Kervin estimated that 43,000 persons at most will attend, which is about a 30 per cent decrease from last year's attendance of 65,000.

Ernest Andres, who came to the show from Twin Lakes, Wis., was thinking of buying a motor home. "With the gas shortage I wouldn't even consider it," he said.

Other persons were more optimistic about their vacations. Some said they thought the gas shortage will cease by summer and some are considering taking shorter trips.

"We love camping too much to give it up," said Mrs. Len Johnson of Streamwood. "Even if we go 10 miles it would still be away from home."

THE JOHNSONS bought a camper last

Gas (or the lack of it) talk of the camping show

Attendance off, dealers' sales reported down from '73 recreational vehicle extravaganza

summer and made short trips within Illinois. They take their three children and their dog along.

Ralph Evans of Rolling Meadows was planning to go to West Virginia this summer. He and his wife go camping on their vacations, but this year their plans are changing.

"Last year we went down to Louisiana, South Dakota and Kentucky," he said. This year the family will limit their traveling to "a couple hundred miles" from the Chicago area.

Because people are wary of the gas shortage, the dealers are feeling the pinch in sales and many manufacturers of recreational vehicles have slowed down production or have shut down entirely.

"The dealers got scared during the gasoline talk and quit ordering the vehicles," said Kervin. "They're not going to have a stockpile of more than three months."

WHEN DEALERS stopped ordering, the manufacturers stopped production, said Kervin. Along with business mismanagement, which often occurs when a store manager orders too much or can't sell enough, the recreational vehicle industry is faced with problems.

"But I'll bet cold hard cash that we're going to have a shortage of vehicles," Kervin said. "Everything has been against the economy. People may get income taxes back or something and be able to buy. People want to go out."

Warren Johnson of the Northwest Recreational Vehicle Center in Elk Grove Village said he was selling 40 per cent less than he did last year at this time.

"There are less buying but they're paying more than they have before," Johnson said. "People shop around more — from six months to a year and there's no impulse buying."

AT THE SHOW, Johnson stood by an elaborate motor home with a price tag of $15,000. "There has been a fantastic price increase on these," he said, pointing to the vehicle.

About two or three persons commented on the gas shortage to salesman Clarence Kutschke of Riteway Trailer Sales Corp. in South Holland. "Not many people say much about it but you can tell it's on their minds."

He mentioned that sales were down, but declined to mention numbers. Kutschke did manage to sell the $9,500 two-bedroom, split level vehicle on display. Known as a "fifth wheeler," the unit, ranges from 21 to 35 feet long, and is attached to a truck.

Campers and small trailers are selling faster in the market. Dealers said the costs and convenience of these recreational units are the desirable features.

"We sold 19 units so far," said John Hershey on Monday. Hershey is a salesman for a line of trailers and said he expects more than 50 units during the week of the show.

The trailers cost from $3,000 to $4,000 depending on features. "Another thing people like about these is that it only cuts down about a mile per gallon," said Hershey.

SMALL CAMPERS, enough for four to six persons, are less expensive and take minutes to set up.

"You can't deny people their recreation," said Harry Schlage of the Easy Camping Store in Maywood.

"People think that in order to have good camping they have to go far," he said. "They don't realize that places nearby are just as good as those far away."

Though some people are worrying about the gas supplies, the dealers are encouraging people to go out and travel, but closer to home.

The Recreational Vehicle Industry Council has issued a folder on how it is going to confront the fuel shortage.

The council is encouraging the estimated 20 million users of recreational vehicles in the country to travel, but to travel at slower speeds in order to save on mileage and to stay closer to home.

GOING ON A trip may actually help a family to save money the family members would normally have spent on light, gas, electricity, food and other expenses, the council said.

Some of the people attending the show are newcomers to camping and traveling. Others there were like the William Hollands of Fox Lake who travel each year by camper.

"We go to the West coast, Colorado, and across the country," said Holland. Holland and his wife plan to move to California but would have planned to travel less far this summer because of the gas shortage.

For those who are counting on a camping trip this year, there are more than 23,000 campsites within 100 miles of Chicago. It doesn't take more than a tankful of gasoline to go camping, Kervin said, adding he hopes the show, which ends Sunday, will convince people to take shorter trips.
